A "Preying" Band.

A telegram from Milwaukee, says that in one block in East Water street, between Mason and Wisconsin street, there are ten saloons, including wine halls and a drug store, where men and members get medicine. From the head of East Water to Wisconsin street there is scarcely a block, taking both sides of the street, but from seven to eight, and sometimes nine saloons can be counted, and they live and prosper. And each one of these beer halls has its regular set of customers. In this connection the following joke (which your correspondent vouches for) may be interesting: Tennie C. Claflin is in the city preparing for Victoria's lecture, and soliciting subscriptions for the Weekly. That's the first point; the second is to understand that many of the saloon keepers thought certain Milwaukee ladies intended visiting their saloons to institute a prayerful crusade against them, similar to those carried on in several other cities. Tuesday afternoon Claflin devoted to securing subscribers for her paper, and confined herself principally to saloon keepers. As she entered each establishment and called for the proprietor, the latter individual, thinking she was one of the "praying ladies," made a break for the back door, with a remark which sounded like "Bray shust so long vot you want. I shep on-ut!"

Claflin appreciated the joke, and after coaxing the proprietor back, began: "My dear sir, can I not persuade you to leave this business?"

"Vell, vat you gif me do dat! Vot you want, anyhow?"

"I want a 'schmit." Taking it, she sipped a little of it, and remarked, "Capital beer, isn't it? Now, sir, a man that can keep such good beer ought to be a subscriber to Woodhull and Claflin's Weekly. Let's see. What name shall I put down?"

And in less than five minutes the lightning-taker would add another name to the list and pocket the subscription price. And this was repeated at all the saloons on East Water street, Tennie going from one to the other with a lead pencil behind her ear and subscription book open. The saloon keepers thought of the $5, and remarked, "Vell, dot's a good joke!"

About Very Hard Cash.

Chatting the other day with a retired officer of the navy, we were told of a financial transaction which took place during the war, at the Cape de Verde Islands, and to accomplish which, with the means at hand, required some shrewd manœuvering and a general disposition to "lend a hand" all round. It seems that on one occasion, during the war, the Tuscarora, then cruising in those waters in search of the Alabama and other craft of that ilk, put into a little port in one of the above named islands, out of coal, out of provisions of many kinds, and, worse than all, out of money, for the crisp greenbacks which were locked up in the purser's safe were not looked upon by the benighted inhabitants of that land as a "legal tender." Something must be done. The ship had credit with the Barings, then the government's financial agents, and the captain had the authority to draw for funds, but who was to cash the draft? There is not, in coin, in the whole place, over three hundred pounds, and the purchases already contracted for amounted to nearly a round thousand.

The captain and the purser called on the English consul, who proved to be a well-to-do and good natured individual, possessed of some small means, and of the confidence of the little community in which he represented Her Majesty's Government. It was arranged that he should at once borrow every gold coin that he could find in the island. This he proceeded to do, and at the end of two or three days had got together about £300. Then the captain drew on Barings for this amount, in favor of the consul, who handed over the gold, about enough to pay the coal bill. The paymaster settled this, and took his triplicate receipts. Then the coal people loaned the whole amount, £300, to the consul, who again gave it to the captain, taking another bill of exchange on Barings for the same amount. This time the paymaster had enough for three or four bills, which he settled, leaving the gold behind him, but was followed about by the consul, who immediately borrowed it again, only to turn it over to the U. S. officers, and take another bill of exchange in return.

This made nine hundred pounds. Bills amounting to some seventy-five pounds remained; so, the last time, the captain drew on the exhaustless consul for a round hundred, paid up everything, and was about to leave for his ship, glad that everything was cleaned up at last, when complaint was made that the Americans were taking gold out of the island. Sure enough the captain and paymaster had kept the change, some twenty-five pounds, and, to satisfy the public, the invaluable consul drew his draft on Barings, where he had not a penny of deposit, but on whom he had drafts for $1000, for just the amount, giving it in return for the cash, which remained on the island.

Thus the Tuscarora was coaled and provisioned for her cruise, at an expense of some five thousand dollars, without bringing a dollar into port, or carrying a dollar away. This is a long story, but some of our financial wiseacres, if they study it intelligently, may get from it some ideas and suggestions as to the value of confidence and credit, and as to the immense amount of business that can be safely done upon a small basis, provided the basis is sound.

—"Who dat hit me? Where's dat lantern?" were the exclamations of an astonished Elmira darkey, after being thrown something like a hundred feet by a locomotive.

SCROFULA.

SCROFULOUS HUMORS.

If VEGETINE will relieve pain, cleanse, purify and cure such diseases, restoring the patient to perfect health after trying different physicians, many remedies, suffering for years, is it not conclusive proof, if you are a sufferer, you can be cured? Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood, in the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the Great Blood-Purifier. The great source of disease originates in the blood, and no medicine that does not act directly upon it, to purify and renovate, has any just claim upon public attention. When the blood becomes lifeless and stagnant, either from change of weather or climate, want of exercise, irregular diet, or from any other cause, the VEGETINE will renew the blood, carry off the putrid humors, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, and impart a tone of vigor to the whole body. The conviction is, in the public mind as well as in the medical profession, that the remedies supplied by the Vegetable Kingdom are more safe, more successful, in the cure of disease, than mineral medicines. VEGETINE is composed of roots, barks, and herbs. It is pleasant to take, and perfectly safe to give an infant. In Scrofula the VEGETINE has performed wonderful cures, where many other remedies have failed, as will be seen by the following unsolicited testimonial:

A Walking Miracle.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—Though a stranger I want to inform you what VEGETINE has done for me.

Last Christmas scrofula made its appearance in my system—large running ulcers appearing on me as follows: One on each of my arms, one on my thigh, which extended to the seat, one on my head, which cut into the skull bone, one on my left leg, which became so bad that two physicians came to amputate the limb, though upon consultation concluded not to do so, as my whole body was so full of Scrofula they deemed it advisable to cut the sore, which was painful beyond description, and there was a quart of matter run from this one sore. The physicians all gave me up to die, and said they could do no more for me. Both of my legs were drawn up to my seat, and it was thought if I did get up again I would be a cripple for life.

When in this condition I saw VEGETINE advertised, and commenced taking it in March last, followed on with it, until I had used 16 bottles, and this morning I am going to plough corn, a well man. All my neighbors say it is a miracle to see me round walking and working.

In conclusion I will add, when I was enduring such great suffering, from that dreadful disease, Scrofula, I prayed to the Lord above to take me out of this world, but as VEGETINE has restored me to the blessings of health, I desire more than ever to live, that I may be of some purpose to my fellow man, and I know of no better way to aid suffering humanity, than to disclose you this statement of my case, with an earnest hope that you will publish it, and it will afford me pleasure to reply to any communication which I may receive therefrom.

I am, Sir, very respectfully,
WILLIAM PAYN

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

BEHOLD!
WILSON'S
SUPERPHOSPHATE
At Auction!
My plan of selling Superphosphate without consignment has proved so successful and has given such universal satisfaction to the Farmers, that I have decided to pursue a similar course this season, and shall make arrangements so that the Farmers in all the principal towns in New England can have an opportunity of purchasing some of my Superphosphates, either of the dealers or of my agents. I have none out on commission, and shall send none out in that way. No goods will be sent from the works until sold, and purchasers can thus rely on receiving fresh goods whenever they choose to buy. The experience that I have had in selling Superphosphate on commission, has taught me that the plan is not the right one. In many instances the goods are not properly taken care of, but often remain exposed to the weather, summer and winter, and the purchaser who buys from a lot which has thus lain (through several seasons sky (and perhaps justly) complains that the Fertilizer is not up to the standard, when in reality the goods were of extra quality at the time they left the Manufacturer, and would still have been had they been properly cared for. It is to avoid this and other abuses that I decline to commission any Superphosphate.
My Agent M. D. Lawrence will be at the following places at the time named, ready to receive orders, price to be fixed by auction.
The only Fertilizer that has ever received a SILVER MEDAL from the N. E. AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Daily Chronicle.

My Prayer.

I'm not a cock-sparrow with a nest in a water-spout, and my half dozen young ones tucked up warm in amongst hay, and wool, and hair, with a new suit o' clothes growing out o' their skins—best o' quality, best o' fit, and certain to come again regularly every year at molting-time. Victuals, too, in plenty waiting to be fetched from hundreds of doors in the shape of crumbs.

No; I'm not a cock-sparrow; but, 'pon my word, I've been ready sometimes to envy the birds hopping about in the gutters when I've been down and stood in some quiet corner off the noisy street, listening to their chirping and twittering. They've seemed so different to me, and to have such an easy time of it. No rent to pay; no need to trouble themselves about anything; only got to take a peck here and a peck there, and then find a corner where the wind don't blow, tuck your head under your warm wing, and then go to sleep.

You see things had gone hard with me for a long time. Some people, who are given to talking a great deal and thinking a very little, say that a man has only to be industrious to get on. If ever there was a mistake it's this, and for the simple reason that for every bit of work that wants doing there are half-a-dozen men waiting to do it, although it's only enough for one. I'd tried as hard as any man could try, but it all seemed thrown away, that trying of mine, and it used to be quite a matter of course for me to go home and find the wife looking pale and trying very hard to make believe that there was nothing the matter, when all there had been some upset while I'd been away.

Now it was the landlord who had been to say that we must turn out. Another day one of the little ones—Dick that was, little curly-haired chap—had run his head against the saucepan of water his mother was taking off the fire, and was scalded horribly. Only a week had gone by and I went home to find Tilly down with measles, and for the next month I'd only got to go home and find first one and then another down, till we had a regular sick house and all the time me out of work.

They say it never rains but it pours, and so I found it. We'd hardly got the last one through the sickness before poor Polly slipped on the stairs, fell, and that night I came home light-hearted and happy, as I hadn't been for months, to find my poor girl lying down and looking very white and drawn of face.

"Why, Polly," I says, "what is it now?" and I ran to the bedside and got hold of her hand as it lay on the counterpane.

"Nothing much, Dick, only I feel a bit faint. I slipped on the stairs—better soon."

She said no more, for all her time was taken up with trying to keep her poor face from working and contriving to hide from me the agony she was in.

I did not need that, though, for as I told you I took hold of her hand, when a horrible sickly sensation came over me, the room swam round, and the great drops of perspiration stood on my forehead, because of the pain I knew I must be giving her, as the arm I lifted came up in a strange, awkward way, making me in my horror let it fall directly back on to the bed.

Poor Polly! and she trying to hide all her suffering from me, for her arm was broken.

"It might have been worse," she said smiling, after I had got a doctor to come and set it. "It might have been worse, Dick," she said. "Suppose it happened and you without work!"

For I had been telling her of my luck in getting taken on a job of road-making, but seeing how weak and ill she was, and in what trouble with pain, I hadn't the heart to tell her where.

I was a bit out of heart myself about where it was, and if she had been well, perhaps—I'm not sure—I might have told her all about it; but as it was, of course it would have been like poisoning her peace of mind, for my job was on the permanent way of one of the London lines, and I fully expected that a whole lot of my work would be in the tunnels with the trains roaring by night and day.

I went on the very next morning, and it was just as I expected. Our first job was in a tunnel half a mile long, and about in the middle, where the way was a little sunk from the level.

Our party, which consisted of six, had picks, shovels and great levers, and we had, besides, four of those naphtha lamps—portable gas some people call them—same as you've seen used at fairs or stalls in the busy streets; and in this fashion we walked early to the mouth of the tunnel.

There was one thing I couldn't help noticing about the men of our gang, and that was the peculiar dull, heavy way with which they moved arm or leg, while their heads seemed to be never at rest. They'd good cause for it, though, as I soon learned, every man working at railway jobs having to divide his time in two, half being for the job on hand, half being taken up in looking out for danger.

I should think that it was getting on for twelve o'clock that, as I was shovelling away there, everything seemed to pass away from me, and I was back watching by Polly's bedside. My arms were busy enough handling the tool, but my mind was gone, and if ever a man went fast asleep standing up I did then. Fast asleep? Yes, and dreamed, too; for I seemed to be telling the children not to make so much noise, for they were drawing something about in the next room. The lights were burning, and the place was very hot and stuffy, owing to the kettle having boiled over, and poor Polly's eyes somehow seemed to gleam with fever in the most unnatural way.

We hadn't gone fifty yards into the tunnel, which got blacker and closer, and more wet and reeking with damp, at every step, before I began to hear a dull, heavy roar. We were walking on the right-hand side between the metals, so as to meet any train upon the line, and my first movement was to step on to the other line—"four foot" we call it—so as to be out of the way till the train had come by.

"Here, hold hard!" shouted the leader of our gang, and he laid a hand on my shoulder and dragged me back; for I hadn't seen that there was another train coming into the tunnel, and that it was dashing up swiftly, giving us just time to creep back in the holes left in the tunnel wall, like doorways, here and there, before it went by with a rush.

I couldn't help it—perhaps it was through its all being so new to me—anyhow, I came out all of a tremble, and felt so scared I could hardly hold the pick I had brought with me.

What would Polly feel if she knew I was here? I thought, and I felt quite pleased that I had not told her what it was I had to do.

The next moment we were making on farther into the tunnel, but we had not gone far before there was the loud hollow roar coming again through the darkness; then like a couple of faint stars we could see the engine lights; the word was given, and we got into the man-holes once more. Then the faint stars grew and grew till they flashed and glimmered on the wet brick walls—grew and grew till they seemed coming to burn us up—and then there was a roar and a flash, and the whole train was by, and we were all walking on.

It was very slow work, for there was a train about every three minutes and we had to get into a safe place pretty well half a minute before it passed. Long enough, you'll say; but it was the custom with the men to get out of the way in good time, to be on the safe side; so that, counting both ways, I think seven trains passed us before we got to the place where we were to begin.

To a new hand it was a dismal, cellar-like place; the air smelt burnt and foul, as if the engines had used it up half-a-dozen times over, leaving only bad steam in its stead. Our lamps were hung up on iron rods we brought with us, and stuck in the six-foot way between the two lines, and there we stood ready to begin.

It puzzled me to think how we should ever get the job done, for it seemed as if we should be able to give about half-a-dozen strokes with a pick and then leave off; and ours was likely to be a longish bit of work, for the line had settled, so that what we had to do was to clear away the ballast, then with the long levers bodily hoist up a length of rail and the wood sleepers it rested on, and shovel the gravel underneath.

Well, it was like this for hour after hour—just a few strokes of shovel or pick, and then the shriek of an engine and its two bright eyes glowing in the distance, and seeming for all the world to me there in the darkness like the horrors of a fever or nightmare, or something of that kind. I couldn't get myself to think and feel that it was real. I kept expecting to wake up in bed to attend to Polly, or on one of the children that was sick. I couldn't, of course, make out what that hollow roar or those two bright flaming eyes had to do with it, but they were seeming to fascinate me; as they came nearer and nearer the noise grew louder and louder, and then the train dashed by, seeming to take my breath with it, leaving me crouching close to the slimy walls, as if longing to force myself into it, till the ganger's voice roused me into knowing where I was with his husky voice and his "Get on my lads."

How I got through that day I never seemed to know; but though I breathed freely when outside the tunnel and took all the reckless jokes of my mates in good part, there was a regular load at my heart, and I could only think of going in next day with a sort of shudder, for I'd get it into my head that one of those trains would be the death of me, and the shriek of the engine and the hollow roar of those coming and of those going away rang in my ears till I got to my own door.

I found Polly very bad, though she wouldn't own to it. Her face was burning, and her eyes looked bright and unnatural, but she would have it that she was going on all right, and, in spite of the pain I was sure she was in, kept on talking cheerful till all the children had gone to bed, and then, poor girl, she broke down, and by crying for her helplessness, with her poor feverish head on my arm, and me doing what little I could to comfort her, which wasn't much. After a time she began to doze off, and I hadn't the heart to move her; but after about an hour she roused up a little, and I thought she was going to ask me for something; but she rambled off into all sorts of things, going back to our country days, and frightening me, for she began to talk of green leaves and grass and flowers.

That was a weary night. I had come home tired and almost ill, but there was no room for two of us to be ill then, so I nursed her as well as I could, and toward morning she dozed off into a quiet sleep, leaving me to think of what I had better do.

I was obliged to go to work, so the only arrangement I could make was to ask a neighbor to step in and attend to her, and six o'clock saw me with the gauger and his lot on the way once more to the tunnel.

Thinking of what I had left at home, I determined to fight down the feeling of fear I had on the day before, telling myself that I was a coward, and that the job was done by other men, so why should I be afraid? It was all of no use, though, for, do I what would, every train that came by gave me a regular shock.

You see, the sitting up all night, after being fagged the day before, made me the more unfit than I should have been; and what with wondering whether the doctor would remember to call, and our neighbor to go in, and the children to do all I had told them, I often got into such a muddled state that it was like being wakened out of sleep when the ganger called us to stand aside.

It was the custom there to work very slowly and easily, or else I'm sure they would have had something so say about the sleepy way in which I handled my shovel; and over and over again a train was close on me before I moved.

They frightened me at last, those eyes did, coming nearer and nearer to me as they did till they seemed to burn me, and I wanted to get away from them; only I told myself it wouldn't be kind if I did when she was so ill, so I stood and looked full at them for what seemed a terrible long while, till I knew that I could bear it no longer, and then, with a start, I woke to find that I was staring right at a coming train with the two glaring, flashing lights, and the thundering, hollow roar.

Of course it only took a few minutes, but it was like an age to me. And there's all that cellary-looking, slimy-walled place, and the naphtha lamps, and the ruddy faces of my mates, and me fascinated and forced like to stare at that coming engine, burning, snorting, and dropping hot coals—that scene is all burned into my memory so deep that I can never forget it as long as I live.

The gauger shouted, my mates yelled out to me, but I couldn't move; I could only stand staring at the horrible monster, which I knew must kill me the next moment, and then it came upon me just as I dropped on the ballast and lay half in a faint. There was a flash of light, the whizzing of wheels, the hollow echoing roar, and I knew that as I lay between the rails the whole train was passing over me.

I've seen long trains, and I've heard of long trains, but that one, though perhaps only the usual length, seemed to take an hour to pass over me, and me thinking all the time of the coupling-irons that must come and dash my brains out. Then I thought I was already killed, and that there was no bodily pain for those who were slain, only the pain of thinking; and then I was looking at the tail-lights of the engine, flaming naphtha lamps.

They picked me up, my mates did, and they were going to carry me out, when I shook them off and told them I was all right, making them quite savage-like that I should be unhurt when they had all made up their minds that I was killed. They all owned, though, that it was the narrowest escape they ever see, and the gauger took care to give me better notice the rest of the day. Not that I fell into such a state again, for the shock of what I had suffered kept me wakeful to a degree.

That affair seemed to have the effect of stringing me up tight, for though I have worked for days together—ay, and nights, too—in tunnels, I never seemed to feel afraid. I never told Polly, though, for, you see, what would be the good? It would only have made her nervous and kept her back from getting well, which took her long enough as it was. However, I won't grumble, for as she mended, things succeeded with us, and our new home's as comfortable a palace as a man can get for six-and-sixpence a week. Tunnel work ain't pleasant, but I've got about used to it; not so used though but that, as I said before, I shall never forget that affair—such a narrow escape as it was—and when I do think of it, and there's no one by, I tell you what I do: honestly, and with all my heart. I takes off my cap and closes my eyes, so as to be all shut in like to myself, and then I say a prayer, a very short one, but it tells all I want, and you know what's said about much speaking. My prayer's a very short one, but it gives all that's felt by a man whose life was spared that he might go on trying to do his duty toward his sick wife and children; it's only just this: "Thank God. Amen."

How to Make Grafting Wax.

Thomas Matterson, Pennsylvania, writes: "Take two parts mutton tallow, four parts resin, three parts beeswax; melt the tallow first, and put the beeswax and resin in it. When it is all melted stir it up and pour it into cold water and work it over. If there are lumps in it, mash them with your thumb and finger. The longer you work it the more sticky it grows. When it begins to stick to your hands put some tallow on them. Work it till it is all sticky as you want it. Put it in a tin pan with a cover to it, and it will keep a number of years. I think it is as good as sticking salve to put on any sores. Some people put in more tallow than they put in resin or beeswax, to make it softer to work in cold weather; but if there is too much tallow in it, it will run out in warm weather. I have had about forty years' experience in grafting, and used a number of sorts of grafting wax. Some people put it in hot water, and make more trouble than there is need of. I wet my finger with my tongue, and don't find any difficulty in putting the wax on. I put a little wax on the end of the graft."

Wheels Within Wheels.

The manufacture of public sentiment has been one of the developments of the past year which has its teachings. Business rivalry among the merchants of large cities has led some who dared, to commit offences against the laws. Profits of hundreds of thousands of dollars are lost sight of in the spirit of jealousy. Occasionally some firms doing a large and profitable trade have their books seized by officials, and it becomes known that they have been defrauding government in a systematic manner that shows direct guilt. One of the chief evils of taxation is the seeming impossibility of imposing equally its burdens. As a rule, officers appointed to collect the revenues are not detectives, and are not cognizant of the evasions given them. Still others compound felony by receiving bribes, allowing frauds to continue which it is their sworn duty to expose and punish. The easy-going public denominates people who are unscrupulous in attaining wealth, sharp, and shrewd, and he who exposes their guilt and obliges them to disgorge must needs be as watchful and cunning as they.

Taken in this connection, the continued agitation of the moiety question, and the denunciation of the Sanborn contracts and the Jayne exposures, seems very much like a concerted movement to manufacture public sentiment for an implied purpose, in which every person who has defrauded or desires to defraud the government is directly interested. The dues which government has found difficult of collection are very like bad debts, and there are very few merchants who have not on their books debts which they would give a commission of fifty per cent. to have collected. Yet it seems to us that the moiety system by which Mr. Sanborn has realized $200,000 or more, is indefensible and demoralizing, for the reason that the work of ferreting out frauds should have been performed more economically. Mr. Sanborn's services were not worth the amount guaranteed him, unless the government could realize its just dues in no other way. Leaving aside, however, the question of emolument, it seems that a large portion of the newspapers of several cities where frauds on the revenue have been discovered, have pursued a course which seems preconcerted. The original villainy is soon passed over, and silence has been followed by attacks upon a class of people who have brought the misdeeds to light. This conduct may be very politic in a pecuniary sense in certain quarters, and the trusting public may easily be deceived and at last led to echo the opinions placed in the public prints for their adoption.

The enormous profits accruing to Sanborn, Jayne and others give ample occasion for complaint and investigation, but behind it all stands the yet unrevealed but suspected motive leading to the studious attacks on detectives and informers, while the original iniquity is ignored which implicates leading citizens who find means to control the utterances of journals which have in the past been wont to express convictions of duty and have thereby won the confidence of the mass of readers. It is only when such leaders of public opinion show a disposition to forget duty and substitute expediency that their influence grows dangerous and their example contaminating.

Butler and the Monitor.

The Concord Monitor, which took advanced ground in rebuking us because we placed the responsibility for the republican defeat in this State where it belongs, instead of following the Monitor's example and donating all the blame to Ben Butler, could see "no good purpose to be subserved by a controversy" when we replied; and it continues the controversy which can subserve no good purpose by saying "The Portsmouth CHRONICLE affects not to understand our reference to the Simmons matter." This is incorrect; we do understand it perfectly, and have never pretended otherwise; and that's just where the Monitor's shoe pinches. Now it seems that the damaging "revelation" occasioned by the Simmons affair was "the fact that the 'Essex statesman' had more influence with the administration than all the rest of the Massachusetts delegation combined," and that it was this "which exerted a baleful influence on our election.". If the Monitor keeps on long enough it may be able to convince itself that the voters of New Hampshire are so much interested in the result of a personal contest between Massachusetts congressmen that they are willing to throw away the State as a "rebuke" to the one who wins; it may even make some converts to its pet theory; but we do not feel the slightest symptoms of conversion coming on, as yet. Corporation influence, and the free rum and prohibition questions—or question, perhaps we should say, as free rum and prohibition mean the same thing in this State, this year—with the nomination of an almost unknown man against one who was widely known, furnish reasons enough to us to account for our defeat, without going to the Boston custom house for one which does not exist.

The Monitor informs us that the republican party "can and will break every 'party idol' mixed up with that most infamous salary grab, or the Jayne seizures, * * and the man, the newspaper or the faction which interposes against the most righteous indignation of the republican masses will be crushed to powder." Rough on the interposer, anyway; but we don't see that it puts us in any danger of being pulverized. As to the "Jayne seizures" we will only say here that it seems very queer to us that firms and men who count their wealth by millions and have ample means and inclination to fight for their rights in every other case, should be so ready to pay over hundreds of thousands to effect a quiet settlement, without any fight at all, when accused of defrauding the government,—that is, if they are as consciously innocent as they pretend to be. They all may be as innocent as they say; but if so they have given a pitiable exhibition of moral cowardice.

As to the "most infamous salary grab"—the CHRONICLE denounced that as promptly, as persistently, as earnestly and as honestly as the Monitor. Gen. Butler's connection with the grab was open and avowed,—and when he advocated its repeal he said plainly that he believed the increase of salaries and the back-pay feature were right, but that the people did not think so and he bowed to their will. This conduct seems to us far more honorable (or less dishonorable) than the action of some of the congressional saints from Massachusetts who voted against the grab, and then, having placed themselves right on the record, hastened to pocket their share of the plunder, even though they finally handed it back to the treasury or charitably gave it to a public institution, under the overwhelming pressure of adverse public opinion. Stealing is stealing; but we look with less contempt on the highwayman who cries "stand and deliver" at the risk of getting a bullet instead of a watch or purse, than we do on the fellow who sneaks around at night to rob a clothes-line or steal a door-mat.

A School-Board Contest.

The voters of Concord were much exercised on Saturday evening at a meeting for the choice of three members of the school committee. It was thought two ladies might be chosen, but a combination of the friends of two lawyers prevented. and Chas. P. Sanborn and S. B. Page were elected. There was no choice for the third, a Catholic priest named Barry leading. The vote for the ladies was small. The Advertiser's special says the meeting was not calculated to elevate or improve matters relating to schools, unless political trickery, false voting, and packed meetings can be regarded as contributing to that result. A second attempt to fill the third vacancy was to be made last evening.

The Temperance War.

The ladies visited Price's saloons at Cleveland, Ohio, Friday, and held services on the sidewalk. A great crowd was present. They afterward visited Winter Garden, in which they prayed. On leaving they were so rudely treated by the mob that they abandoned further visits to gin-mills, which were contemplated, and concluded their services in the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association. Two other bands made calls on the west side of the town, meeting no trouble. The third band, which moved up Pearl street, was followed by a large, disorderly crowd. The ladies were assaulted with yells and insulting remarks when they attempted to pray or sing, and the crowd, which became larger and more excited as they moved along, finally became unmanageable. The ladies were threatened with violence, and at one place one was quite severely injured. A number of gentlemen who interfered in behalf of the ladies were badly beaten. A policeman was struck on the head with a brick while attempting to keep the mob back and is very seriously injured. The ladies finally reached their homes. The result of the day's work was very discouraging, and it is believed the plan of praying at saloons will be abandoned. Much indignation is expressed by citizens at the action of the mob, and if the ladies continue their work they will not lack for physical support.

Turkey vs. Buzzard.

[Springfield Union.]

General Butler's prospects in Massachusetts never looked so bright as they do today. For two years western Massachusetts has kept him out of the governor's chair by the solid phalanx she presented, under the lead of Washburn and Dawes. The respectability of Boston, idling at the seashore or the mountains, turned its eye-glasses at Butler and mildly disapproved of him, but meantime Simmons captured the caucuses, and now he has captured the custom-house. Finally a senatorship became vacant, and Mr. Dawes, who had been greatly praised as the leader of the fight, was passed by, and the reward of victory given to Mr. Boutwell. Mr. Dawes and his friends accepted the verdict, and again western Massachusetts bore the brunt of the fight in last fall's successful campaign against Butler. Now there is another and unexpected vacancy in the Senate. Western Massachusetts anew presents the name of Mr. Dawes, and forthwith Boston begins again, with one consent, to make excuses for not voting for him. Under the circumstances, if the opposition of the eastern anti-Butler republicans is continued to the end, this slight will be of such an extraordinary character, involving such a reflection upon Mr. Dawes and his supporters, that a proper self-respect will compel many of the latter to withdraw from further active service, either for or against Butler. And this will be the case equally whether Mr. Dawes is finally defeated, against the opposition of those republicans in the eastern part of the State who ought to have supported him. With his opponents divided, General Butler is assured an easy victory,—and a division that a few fair words cannot heal is the only result of the present tendency of things in the senatorial canvass. Western Massachusetts yielded last year, and yielded gracefully. When any compromise has been necessary for harmony in the party or in the State she has never been accused of undue self-assertion. But it is getting monotonous to hear Boston say "turkey" for herself and "buzzard" for us every time, after the fatigue of the hunt is over.

—A New Orleans reporter was found to have a wife in Vicksburg, another in Natchez, another in Cairo, another in Memphis, and then they stopped counting and put him in jail.

The receipts of the Vokes Family, the last two weeks in Boston, were twenty-one thousand two hundred and twenty-eight dollars and fifty cents. No such engagement was ever played in Boston before by any troupe.

The Stomach's Revenge.

The stomach cannot be maltreated with impunity. Overload it with food, irritate it with fiery liquors, impair its activity or vitiate its juices by any outrage on the laws of health, and it revenges itself through the liver, the bowels, the kidneys, the brain or the nervous system, and sometimes through all these organs simultaneously, or in succession. There is scarcely any variety of bodily or mental pain or discomfort which it does not inflict upon those who abuse and overtask its powers. Under these circumstances there is but one medicine to which the sufferer can resort with the certainty of obtaining immediate and permanent relief. The most wholesome and genial of all stomachics and correctives, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, produces an immediate and most beneficent change in the condition of the patient. The whole digestive system is at once invigorated and soothed, the liver regulated and toned, the bowels relieved of all obstructions, the spirits cheered, and the relaxed nerves strengthened and steadied.

PILES can be cured only by ANAKESIS, the greatest discovery of the age and the sole, infallible remedy for the worst cases of PILES. Thousands of sufferers after trying in vain all manner of lotions, ointments, and internal remedies, have been instantly relieved and permanently cured by ANAKESIS. It is the happy discovery of Dr. Silabee, a regular scientific physician, and doctors of all schools endorse and recommend it. Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere, and sent free by mail from principal Depot, 46 Walker St., New York.

A down-town Merchant recently sued his druggist for attempt to defraud. He was suffering from inflamed kidneys and asked for Dr. Helmbold's Buchu. The druggist gave him another kind, upon which the profit was greater. Instead of relieving the patient as the genuine preparation has always done, the imitation compound aggravated the disease, and a long and distressing illness followed. The court, after full hearing, gave judgement for the plaintiff with costs. MORAL, buy only the genuine. For sale by all druggists.

NONE but a physician knows how much a reliable alterative is needed by the people. On all sides of us, in all communities everywhere, there are multitudes who suffer from complaints that nothing but an alterative cures.—Hence a great many of them have been made and put abroad with the assurance of being effectual. But they fail to accomplish the cures they promise, because they have not the intrinsic virtues they claim. In this state of the case, DR. J. C. AYER & CO., of Lowell, have supplied a COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPARILLA, which proves to be the long-desired remedy. Its peculiar difference from other kindred preparations in the market is that it cures the diseases for which it is recommended, while they do not. We are assured of this fact by more than one intelligent physician in this neighborhood, and have the further evidence of our own experience of its truth.—(Nashville (Tenn.) Farmer.)

Fire at Greenland.

About 11 o'clock, Monday morning, fire was discovered on the roof of the residence of Col. Joshua W. Peirce, at Greenland. It is thought it must have caught from the chimney. The wind blow furiously and in a few minutes the house was a mass of flames. The cinders blew across the fields and ignited the dry grass, which burned with the speed of the wind, for a time seeming to endanger the residence of Capt. Chas. H. Salter, the fire having crossed the road and burned over a distance of a quarter of a mile. The walls separating the fields from the Concord railroad checked its further progress, and having nothing more to burn, it went out. Meanwhile, the neighbors had rallied and were engaged in tearing down the sheds connecting the house with barns in the rear. A barn within thirty feet of the house caught fire, but was saved. Persons present attribute the escape of this building and another one in a field a short distance away, to the fearful velocity of the wind which blew the fire, smoke, cinders and heat far beyond them. Had the wind blown less furiously these buildings would have been burned. Mr. William A. Peirce obtained a couple of hand engines in this city and sent them out by rail, fearing the wind might change during the evening and the slumbering cinders be blown toward the stables. We hear that the house was insured for about $5000 in Sise's agency. The furniture was of little value.

The High School.

There is connected with the boy's department of the High School a library of 619 volumes, many of the books being valuable and all in excellent condition, one hundred volumes having been rebound during the past winter. The library is in better condition than ever before, and the books are read and enjoyed by the young ladies, as well as by the boys. Connected with the same department is a Natural History Society, with quite a large collection of valuable specimens. A new case is needed and the boys have already a sum in the Savings Bank, intended for that purpose when sufficient shall have been added.

Kittery.

The annual election of town officers took place on Monday, the republican candidates being chosen, as follows: Moderator, Calvin L. Hayes; town clerk, Wm. M. Sanborn; selectmen, assessors and overseers of the poor, Warrington Paul, Augustus H. Adams and Joseph H. Seaward; town agent, Moses A. Safford; treasurer, Mark W. Paul; superintending school committee, Miss Harriet H. Shapley, and Mrs. Mary J. West; health officer, Daniel W. Jones; auditors, John Wentworth and Ephraim Otis; constables, Daniel H. Nason, Thomas J. Billings and Richard D. Philbrick. Money appropriated for support of the poor, $1000; for town schools, $3200, with the addition of the "mill" tax, which last year amounted to $1800,—$5000 in all; for high school, $500; for contingent expenses, $1000. As the State gives the same amount as the town, for the high school, the total amount appropriated for school purposes this year is $6000—not bad for a small town. The vote was light.

Oliver Cutts & Co. have sold their wood, coal, lumber and grocery business, to Messrs. Josiah P. Stover and A. A. Hill, who propose to do an enlarged business.

It is reported that Riverside Lodge and Dirigo Encampment, I. O. O. F., are intending to purchase the old "Tabernacle" property and erect thereon a fine block, with stores on the ground floor and two large halls overhead. Hope it's true.

Laconics.

A correspondent undertakes to solve the conundrum "When will the Richards avenue improvements be completed?" by saying the work will probably be done in season to allow the passage of the procession which will celebrate the introduction of sufficient water into the city. Now if we only knew when the judgment day will get here!

Mr. Alfred P. Burbank of Chicago is to give a series of readings and impersonations at the Temple on Friday evening.

Mr. John W. Stavers is to erect a house at the corner of Dover and Islington streets.

The vacancy in the deputy collectorship of this port is likely to be filled by the appointment of Mr. Samuel H. Marshall, and a most fortunate selection has been made. Mr. Marshall was for years with Hon. John H. Bailey in the hardware business, and is highly esteemed by all who know him. Having taken no active part in politics it cannot be said that the appointment will be made in the interest of a "ring." Collector Howard's choice of a deputy will please the mercantile community while it secures to him a faithful and competent assistant.

Prof. Gunning will deliver the second of his course of lectures on Geology this evening at Mechanics' Hall. The subject is one of great interest and Prof. Gunning is competent to deal with it. His lectures are instructive and very entertaining.

Our friend of the Monitor has crawfished out of the controversy with the Boston Traveller, not relishing the handling the latter gave him. Moral—look before you leap.

Paymaster Grifling, U. S. N., has been ordered to the Sabine, at this station, vice McConnell, placed on waiting orders. Mr. Fletcher D. Locke is to continue as clerk to Mr. Grifling, with whom he has been at sea for three years.

The friends of Lieut. Fred P. Ela saw with regret the statement that he recently committed suicide on steamer Great Republic while on the passage from Hong Kong to Yokohama. News received at the Navy Department confirms his death, but the statement is made that he had been left in charge of some deserters who were the first to report that he was overboard. It is presumed that one or more of them pushed him over. His loss will be a severe blow to his family, whose affection for him was great.

Trafton's bal masque at Dover comes off to-night, and a special train will leave the Eastern depot at seven o'clock to accommodate Portsmouth people desiring to attend, returning at three o'clock next morning. Fare for the round trip, 40 cents.

Rye.

On Friday evening last, notwithstanding the very bad traveling, an interested audience gathered at the Town Hall in Rye, and listened with close attention to a finely written scientific lecture delivered by G. H. Jenness, Esq., on the subject of Astronomy. Mr. Jenness is a self-educated man, and his lecture for nicety of arrangement, beauty of language and true merit, may be considered among the best of the season. The next lecture will be given Friday, March 27th, by Charles J. Brown. Subject, "Importance of Agriculture;" the proceeds to be for the benefit of the two religious societies.

Readables.

The convicts of the Charlestown State prison were fortunately at dinner during the fire, Saturday. As there are but thirty officers to guard 650 prisoners the absence of the latter from the work-shops was exceedingly fortunate. During the fire they kept up a series of yells and hoots which could be heard outside the walls. The work-shops will be rebuilt.

Mrs. Grant's brother, Judge Louis Dent, is dead.

Arther Bell, book-keeper for R. H. MacDonald & Co., New York patent medicine dealers, has defrauded his employers to the extent of nearly $30,000.

The jury in the case of Harvey D. Parker, of the Parker House, Boston, couldn't agree to find him guilty of liquor selling, being equally divided.

Don Piatt, in the Washington Capital, says of the late Senator Sumner: "His private life was as pitiable as his public career. With the same blind infatuation that drove him to the one political extreme, he sought and married qualities he could neither sympathize with nor control. If the true story of the ill-mated match is ever told, he will be found in all its relations as pure, high-toned and honorable as he was in his public life. As he stood alone politically, he lived alone socially, and passed his last hours from the Senate, where he had little or no influence, to the house, where 'a lack of woman's nursing and a dearth of womans' tears' was illy supplied by friends who felt his pulse and counted his dying breath."

Gen. Thomas B. Van Buren, who was so bitterly assailed for his assumed misconduct in regard to the Vienna exposition, has been confirmed by the Senate as consul at Kanagawa, Japan, which is an endorsement of his official action as United States Commissioner at Vienna, as the Senate's committee had before it lithographed copies of all the correspondence, forming a large volume. Mr. Jay, who was the cause of the Vienna troubles, is expected to resign after this virtual censure of his action. At the time of the troubles the opposition press made a great deal of capital out of Grant's refusal to condemn Van Buren on ex parte testimony; but now it appears Grant was right.

State News.

George Parker and another young man went fishing, Wednesday, on Island pond in Stoddard; the ice broke and Parker was drowned, his companion being rescued after an hour's immersion.

The barn of Orrin Dame, in Milford, with five head of cattle and a horse, was burned on Saturday night last. Loss about $1000; insured for $600.

Luke Quimaene of Natick, Mass., was put in the Dover station house, Sunday at midnight, for drunkenness, and Monday morning was found hung to a post by his suspenders. He had been visited by officers only twenty minutes before he was found dead.

The dwelling house and two barns, situated in Deerfield, formerly owned by Moses Noyes, were destroyed by fire on Saturday evening last. The furniture in the house, and a horse and considerable hay in the barn were destroyed. The buildings were insured for $3550. The fire is supposed to have been set by an incendiary.

Corruption Unearthed.

The investigation of the affairs of the District of Columbia promise fruitful results. Mr. Latta, one of the real estate firm which has managed the "ring" property in the northwest part of Washington, admitted on Saturday that Senator Stewart of Nevada and two associates had invested $360,000 in this land, the Latta firm holding $700,000 in trust. Stewart sold his share at an advance of $18,000. He is a member of the investigating committee and it is thought will be obliged to resign from that committee. Latta refused to reveal the names of the owners of the property held in trust, although the committee unanimously demanded it. His partners will be as reticent, also. The deeds of trust are well understood to represent a gigantic speculation, and it is the general conviction that such public men as those interested, dared, or thought it of consequence, to approach, were made parties to the transaction. Thus far only four of these parties have been revealed,—Senator Stewart and his two associates from California, and Governor Cooke, who, as Latta admitted, paid in $25,000. The committee declare that the board of public works will never receive further assistance from Congress until the details of this great speculation are given.

["Mrs. Burnet's Story," in Lippincott's Magazine.]

We live in the quietest possible way, my wife and I. We have nothing to disturb us, having no children, and a comfortable income securely invested. Banks may collapse, argosies may sink at sea; we have no calamity to dread short of the paying off of the national debt.

I don't say that we could not make annoyances for ourselves. We have a young man for instance, hired to superintend a horse and phaeton and to help in the garden, who might be a source of perpetual anxiety; or our female servants—but, knowing them to be human, we shut our eyes to their follies; only when the strawberries disappeared mysteriously between night and morning my wife took an opportunity of remarking on the circumstance to the household corps, and was unanimously referred to the birds for an account of the missing fruit. "That's all very well," she quietly said, "but you know birds don't wear shoes." On an average we must have gone round the garden at least once every day all the season with one or more visitors and on each occasion my wife repeated this little anecdote with a humorous appearance of unconsciousness. I listened with a smile of appreciation, and our visitors were amused—as they had every right to be.

Although the main stream of time runs quickly enough with us, I must acknowledge the feeders are apt to lag; the years flow rapidly past, but the hours and minutes daily a little sometimes. On Tuesday mornings we rouse ourselves with considerable alacrity, that being the day I always walk to a neighboring village to settle our weekly account for butcher's meat. (We have a butcher in our own village, but good reasons, which I need not detail, prevent us dealing with him.) It is a fine day my wife accompanies me, and we get home to dinner with an appetite, and a feeling that we have earned it. On Saturdays I always wind up two clocks and three time pieces, and my wife squares her household book. We give a small dinner-party some half-dozen times a year, and otherwise are on good terms with the people of the neighborhood. Our village is most strictly exclusive and genteel; it is five miles from a railway station, and as pretty a place as you could see. The houses are old-fashioned, but good and commodious, with well-stocked, well-grown gardens, while the rents are miraculously low; the consequence of which is that the inhabitants are ultra-genteel, mostly retired medical, military, and naval men, with sons scattered over every land and sea, and with daughters collected at home of all ages, with very aristocratic manners and high, distinguished noses. There is one house at the end of the village which has even had the privilege of being occupied by a succession of indigent noblemen—repeatedly I have given his lordship a seat in my phaeton—and we all enjoy the title and work it diligently.

When dinner, the event of the day, is over, my wife takes an easy-chair on one side of the fire, and I take an easy-chair on the other; she furnishes herself with a volume of some kind, and I produce my notebook and pencil to note down any thought that may suggest itself or anything striking that has occurred—only nothing striking ever occurs. Her book slips from her hand into her lap, my pencil falls quietly on the carpet, the world recedes—probably the fire seizes the opportunity and recedes too—and the next thing we are aware of is the clatter of the tea things as they are brought in.

We don't always fall asleep, however. One afternoon lately, my wife got interested and excited over her book and finally shut it with a bang, causing a sudden dispersion of my ideas.

The "Best Breed" of Angel.

A young man who was lucky enough to collect in Ophir, Consolidated Virginia, and other stocks, the snug little sum of $30,000 with which he hastened home to his native State, writes to a California paper that fortune still smiles upon him. He has a handsome young bride and with her a farm of 300 acres, not two miles from his own old roof-tree. His bride is the only daughter of a rich old granger—an old man of the sod, worth bushels of money. The happy bridegroom sends an account of his interview with the old gent when he asked the hand of his daughter in marriage. When the words were spoken the affair progressed as follows:

Farmer Hodge—Take'r, my boy, take'r. She'll make you a good wife, but you know that. You'll find that lower medder'll cut three and a half tons to the acre, year with year. The old orchard don't bear as it used to, but the new one is in full bearing. The fences are all in good—

Young Washoe—I shall never cease to love and cherish your daugh—

Farmer Hodge—Fences all in splendid order all around the farm, and I believe there is not a more convenient barn in the—

Young Washoe—And I believe she loves me. God bless her! as she loves her—

Farmer Hodge—The ten cows—

Young Washoe—If she is not made the happiest wife in all the State of—

Farmer Hodge—Will all have calves in the Spring, and the 150 sheep you will find—

Young Washoe—She is the most perfect angel—

Farmer Hodge—Of the best breed—

Young Washoe—That ever lived—

Farmer Hodge—And will shear more wool—

Young Washoe—Say no more; say no more.

And here Farmer Hodge and Young Washoe rushed into each other's arms and embraced.

SCROFULA.

SCROFULOUS HUMORS.

IF VEGETINE will relieve pain, cleanse, purify and cure such disease, restoring the patient to perfect health after trying a different physician, many remedies, suffering for years, is it not conclusive proof, if you are a sufferer, you can be cured? Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood, in the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the Great Blood-Purifier. The great source of disease originates in the blood; and no medicine that does not act directly upon it, to purify and renovate, has any just claim upon public attention. When the blood becomes lifeless and stagnant, either from change of weather or climate, want of exercise, irregular diet, or from any other cause, the VEGETINE will renew the blood, carry off the putrid humors, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, and impart a tone of vigor to the whole body. The question is, in the public mind as well as in the medical profession, that the remedies supplied by the Vegetable Kingdom are more safe, more successful, in the cure of disease, than mineral medicines. VEGETINE is composed of roots, barks, and herbs. It is pleasant to take, and perfectly safe to give an infant. In Scrofula the VEGETINE has performed wonderful cures, where many other remedies have failed, as will be seen by the following unsolicited testimonial:

A Walking Miracle.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—Though a stranger I want to inform you what VEGETINE has done for me.

Last Christmas Scrofula made its appearance in my system—large running ulcers appearing on me as follows: One on each of my arms, one on my thigh, which extended to the seat, one on my head, which eat into the skull bone, one on my left leg, which became so bad that two physicians came to amputate the limb, though upon consultation concluded not to do so, as my whole body was so full of Scrofula they deemed it advisable to cut the sore, which was painful beyond description, and there was a quart of matter run from this one sore. The physicians all gave me up to die, and said they could do no more for me. Both of my legs were drawn up to my seat, and it was thought if I did get up again I would be a cripple for life.

When in this condition I saw VEGETINE advertised, and commenced taking it in March, and followed on with it, until I had used 16 bottles, and this morning I am going to plough corn, a well man. All my townsmen say it is a miracle to see me round walking and working.

In conclusion I will add, when I was enduring such great suffering, from that dreadful disease, Scrofula, I prayed to the Lord above to take me out of this world, but as VEGETINE has restored to me the blessings of health, I desire more than ever to live, that I may be of some purpose to my fellow man, and I know of no better way to aid suffering humanity, than to enclose you this statement of my case, with an earnest hope that you will publish it, and it will afford me pleasure to reply to any communication which I may receive therefrom.

I am, Sir, very respectfully,

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

BEHOLD!
WILSON'S
SUPERPHOSPHATE
At Auction!
My plan of selling Superphosphate without consignment has proved so successful and has given such universal satisfaction to the Farmers, that I have decided to pursue a similar course this season, and shall make arrangements so that the Farmers in all the principal towns in New England can have an opportunity of purchasing some of my Superphosphates, either of the dealers or of my agents. I have none on commission, and shall send none out in that way. No goods will be sent from the works until sold, and purchasers can thus rely on receiving fresh goods whenever they choose to buy. The experience that I have had in selling superphosphate on commission, has taught me that the plan is not the right one. In many instances the goods are not properly taken care of, but often remain exposed to the weather, summer and winter, and the purchaser who buys from a lot which has thus lain through several seasons may (and perhaps justly) complain that the Fertilizer is not up to the standard, when in reality the goods were of extra quality at the time they left the Manufacturer, and would still have been had they been properly cared for. It is to avoid this and other abuses that I decline to commission any Superphosphate.
My Agent M. D. Lawrence will be at the following places at the time named, ready to receive orders, prices to be fixed by auction.

"And owners and occupiers of buildings having such vaults and privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of APRIL in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified."
Citizens desiring to have their vaults cleaned may send their names to HAVEN E. SCOTT, Superintendent of the City Farm, and the city teams will do the work for two dollars per load. Per Order.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,
For all the Purposes of a Family Physic
CURING
Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood, are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

Thrice Married---Two Husbands.

[Springfe'd Union.]

About fifteen years ago, a young woman living in her home in Monson, became possessed with the desire to go West and teach school. In the town of Anamosa, Iowa, she found her vocation, and by and by a husband. He was the youngest and indulged son of a wealthy widow. The happy couple set out early on the matrimonial sea, both being only about nineteen years of age. When our heroine wrote to her father in Monson of her plans, he went on to Iowa for a few months' visit, and being pleased with his daughter's prospects, built and furnished a house for her. The mother of the young husband gave him a fine farm, well stocked and equipped, and no young couple ever started in life with brighter prospects.

In a short time, however, bad speculations and mismanagement had stripped her husband of all his property. His pride was terribly mortified by this turn of affairs, and in sudden desperation he left his home, his wife and infant daughter, and enlisted in one of the first regiments which was raised to put down the rebellion. His family received a few letters from him, and then came an unbroken silence. In vain they wrote to him, and then to his officers and comrades. He was reported among the missing. The wife or widow—she knew not which—at length returned to her Monson home, and afterward came to this city and entered the employ of Tinkham & Co., proving herself capable and efficient in the millinery department.

At the end of four or five years, she revisited her husband's friends in Iowa, and soon married a gentleman there, having first for the sake of certainty obtained a divorce from her long lost husband, although really supposing herself a widow. In a few months after this marriage this second husband died, and the lady again returned to her New England home (twice widowed, as she supposed,) and soon was in her old place at Tinkham's.

Some months ago—and this is one of the strangest incidents in this eventful history—she dreamed that a hack called at her boarding place and took her to the Massasoit House, where she met her husband, to whom she was again united in marriage. The dream, of course, made a deep impression on her mind, but as months wore away and nothing came of it, she regarded it as "only a dream." But one day last fall a letter reached the post-office at Anamosa, directed to her. Some one who knew her, caused it to be returned to this city. It so happened that she was absent on a visit at the time, and after remaining in the Springfield office a while it was returned to Iowa. Her friends there then enclosed it in another envelope and sent it to her again, and it finally reached her as she was at her work in Tinkham's store.

On opening it she nearly fainted. It was from her first husband, from whom or of whom not a lisp had been heard by his friends for thirteen years. It stated that he was in the wilds of Texas, following the hazardous life of a ranchero. He had left home with the determination of never returning till he had made good his shattered fortunes. Several times he had so far redeemed his vow that he was on the point of seeking his family and friends, when some turn of the wheel of fortune had dashed him back to poverty. At length the fickle goddess had favored him and he was rich again. Whether his wife was living, whether she was the mother of another man's family, and a host of other questions asked, she hastened to answer.

Other letters were written by both; but all failed, by reason of hostile Indians, faithless carriers, etc., of reaching their destination. But the one assuring him that his wife was still his own and telling where she could be found, was enough.

Some time afterward a stranger inquired at the Massasoit House if there was such a firm as Tinkham & Co., in the city. Being assured on this point he called a hackman and told him to drive to their store and bring Mrs. —— to the hotel. She was not at the store, and the hackman was directed to her boarding place, where he found her, and—the dream was proved true. The meeting is not for us to describe.

The next evening there was a wedding at the house of a prominent clergyman, and the bride was a woman who was then married the third time, yet had but two husbands, and by their side stood a blooming miss of fourteen to witness the marriage of her own legitimate father and mother.

Execution of a Boy Murderer.

The New York Sun narrates the circumstances attending the execution of Keene, the Florida boy murderer, which was recently witnessed in Jacksonville. Keene was a youth of eighteen, prepossessing in appearance and manner, and it is supposed an orphan. Shortly after his arrival in Florida young Keene was joined by a person named Valentine, and in November last they started up the river on a hunting excursion. After being absent a few days the boy returned with his companion's gun on his shoulder, saying that Valentine had gone and left him. A search revealed the fact that he was foully murdered. The brain was pierced with shot, the throat gashed, and the legs weighted. At the inquest Keene admitted in a careless way that the body was that of Valentine, and afterward confessed that he had committed the crime, adding that in was done in self-defense.

His story was that he quarreled with Valentine about a loan of money. Valentine stooped to raise a revolver, and he fired on and killed him. He was speedily brought to trial. His air of cool levity in the prisoner's box made an unfavorable impression. The proof was clear, and he was sentenced to be hanged. After his sentence, Keene began to reflect upon his condition. He was received into the Methodist Episcopal Church, and wrote verses devoid of literary merit, but showing that he realized his approaching end. When brought to the scaffold he cried and begged piteously, but no attention was paid to his entreaties, and, the drop having fallen, he was pronounced dead within thirty minutes. About 100 persons witnessed the execution, and expressed their compassion for the wayward boy.

Daily Chronicle.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 25, 1874.

Acquainted Alike With Dawes and Grief.

There are some people even in the Massachusetts legislature who are willing to estimate Henry L. Dawes at his true value. In the House, on Saturday, during a debate upon "An act relating to the rights of husbands and wives, and for the protection of minor children," Mr. Noble of Westfield said that in 1862 he knew a man who went to St. Louis and publicly proclaimed that his wife's extravagance would ruin him unless a change in the administration of affairs was made. In 1864 the same man insisted in Washington and all over the country that his wife was the most economical woman in the whole country. In 1869 he reproclaimed that his wife's extravagant expenditures would ruin him, and in a few weeks after he went to New Hampshire, and on the stump again proclaimed that he was mistaken in regard to his wife's administration of affairs. In 1872 it was currently reported that he possessed bonds owned by his wife, and then he, with others suspected of holding like bonds, signed a letter saying that he didn't know his wife ever had such bonds. In 1873 he went into court and said that he not only had some of the bonds, but others were proved to have some. In January, 1874, he again proclaimed that his wife squandered his property, and in the following March he formed a public alliance with the most corrupt administration the country ever saw. Mr. Noble closed by declaring he wanted something that would put a stop to such actions.

Readables.

The Massachusetts legislature balloted for Senator on Tuesday, with no choice. Two ballots were had. The first ballot of the Senate was as follows: Dawes 14, Hoar 10, Curtis 10, Adams 2, Whittier 1. Second ballot; Dawes 17, Curtis 10, Hoar 8, Adams 2, Whittier 1. In the House on the first ballot, Hoar had 69, Curtis 63, Dawes 61, Sanford 16, Adams 12, Banks 5, Philips 2, Washburn 2, Clifford 1, scattering 5. Second ballot, Hoar 68, Curtis 63, Dawes 61, Sanford 16, Adams 12, Banks 5, Philips 2, Washburn 2, Scattering 6.

The New York republicans are talking about the renomination of Gov. Dix. Only fifty-one years ago he was Secretary of State of New York, and was in the Assembly long before that time.

Mr. Cox informed the House a few days since that he was told that not a single man of either party in that branch from the Western States will ever come back to it.

The quarters of the Manhattan and International clubs of New Bedford have been visited by the Massachusetts State police, and about $300 worth of liquors seized at the former and a quantity of lager at the latter place. This raid has created quite an excitement in New Bedford, the Manhattan being the crack club of the city and humbering among its members many of the most highly-respected citizens; and it was supposed all its affairs were conducted according to the most approved plans of morality and temperance. The International is not so select an organization as the Manhattan, as is evidenced by the fact that the former uses lager where the latter uses brandy.

The House of Representatives passed the bill limiting the amount of United States notes to $400,000,000, Monday. Mr. Dawes endeavored to limit the amount to $365-000,000, but under the lead of Gen. Butler the House rejected the proposition, 171 to 70. Congressmen Pike and Parker voted for the smaller sum. The bill was passed by a vote of 168 to 77.

Cambridge, Chelsea, Winthrop, Revere, Somerville, Medford, Malden and Hyde Park want to be annexed to Boston, immediately.

A letter from Boston says since Mr. Simmons assumed the Collectorship he has discovered that nearly every member of Congress from Massachusetts who opposed his confirmation has one or more relatives holding snug positions in the Custom House.

Sylvester, the acrobat who was killed while doing a flying somersault in a New York theatre last week, was a native of Massachusetts and received $7 per week for risking his neck every night. The poor creature would have made more money and lived longer had he expended his strength in digging post-holes or shovelling gravel.

State News.

The democrats of the town of Dunbarton propose to contest the right of Caleb Page to a seat in the House the coming session.

Fifty thousand trout are to be placed in Ossipee Lake and Six Mile Pond, in Ossipee. These bodies of water are connected by a rapid stream.

It is now said that thirty democratic members of the legislature are utterly opposed to a license law; but the democratic leaders propose to let the present prohibitory law remain on the statute books, amended so that any town or city may license liquor selling or suppress it.

On Thursday while playing on the coal cars near Williams Foundry, Nashua, a son of Richard Welsh fell and fractured his leg and collar bone.

The adjourned meeting at Concord, Monday evening, for the choice of a member of the school committee, chose Daniel C. Allen, 1040 votes being thrown on the first ballot and 900 on the second. Mr. Allen had 471, Mr. Barry (Catholic priest) 374, Mr. Eastman 57.

The Troy Times says: The leading issue made by the democrats in the New Hampshire canvass was free rum, and as they have been put in control of the State by the temperance men, the latter ought to feel estopped from making complaint if grog shops multiply as fast as the daisies in June.

The Nashua Telegraph has arrived at the philosophical conclusion that it is better to write less and think more about the result of the late election.

Farmington closed its election for town officers, Friday, the democrats and republicans uniting on a ticket, totally ignoring the prohibitionists, who had prevented a choice before.

Gen. McCutchins spent Sunday in Manchester. Thought you'd like to know of it!

The Franklin Journal says "the increased control of the check-list which the democrats have won is no inconsiderable element of their strength." That's just what hurts, neighbor!

The Manchester Mirror says there are but seven Senators elected, four republicans and three democrats. It places the democratic plurality in this Congressional district at 111.

Charles W. Varney and George Stewart started from Alton Bay to cross the lake to Wolfboro' in a sleigh, monday: they have not since been heard of and are probably drowned. Varney leaves a widow and two children; Stewart was unmarried. Both were young men.

Little Boar's Head.

A party of gentlemen and ladies of North Hampton, numbering about one hundred, irrespective of political creed, assembled by invitation of Messrs. John and Albert Batchelder at the spacious boarding house of the latter at Little Boar's Head on Tuesday evening last, and partook of the generous hospitality of the house. A sumptuous supper was served at ten o'clock, to which full and ample justice was done, after which, music, songs and games were introduced in which most of the company engaged and age and care were forgotten in the games of youthful days. The house of Mr. Batchelder has a wide reputation, and no wonder it is always full of first-class boarders, being so well kept and so delightfully situated on one of the most sightly and picturesque points on the coast. From its veranda in a southern direction may be seen the hotels and boarding houses at Hampton and Salisbury beaches and on a clear day Cape Ann may be seen stretching far out into old ocean. In the opposite direction, in full view, are the famous Farragut, Atlantic and Sea View hotels and many well-patronized private boarding houses. The company were entertained till a late hour when at the solicitation of gentlemen present, Hon. J. F. French responded in remarks adapted to the occasion, substantially, as follows:

"Friends and fellow citizens; You will not expect anything like a speech from me this evening, but I assure you I am glad of of an invitation to come to this gathering to-night. I am glad of an opportunity to visit this house as this is the first time I have been here since its erection; but I am still more gratified to visit the good friends who occupy it.

We have come here to-night, I trust, not as partizans, not as a political clique nor a political ring. We are not here to boast over any political battle fought, or victory won. We have come here simply as friends and citizens to see and converse with each other, have a pleasant social interview and enjoy the hospitalities of our friends on Little Boar's Head, and I know I speak the feelings of all present, when I say that we are well repaid for our coming. We have come from every nook and corner and hill top and valley of our little town. We have come from Wiggin's hill and Rose hill and Bramble hill and Drake's hill and North hill. We have come to this grandest old hill of all—high sentinel for ages—bordering on and overlooking the broad and beautiful Atlantic. We have come to a first-class house, kept in first-class style, owned and occupied by first-class proprietors and we have partaken of a first-class banquet, an overflowing "feast of fat things," and what speaks more and better than all, for this company is that they receive here none but first-class visitors.

We have come to a spot unsurpassed and perhaps unequalled for its scenery and surroundings by any other on the coast from Maine to Georgia. Standing here upon the summit of this grand old promontory and casting your eye northward and southward eastward and westward, you behold one of the most magnificent panoramas in nature. Great Boar's Head looms up in majestic splendor, at your right, Straw's Point swells out in beauty at your left, the Isles of Shoals in the distance, Pine hill at the north, and North hill at the west. Unbounded ocean before you and unlimited forests in the back ground. What can you imagine more sublime and enchanting? Since coming here my thoughts have gone back for a period of 35 years when I was teaching in this district of the town.

Then there were no boarding houses here upon this coast; the dwelling houses and other buildings together with the school house were most of them old and dilapidated, and the people comparatively poor. Then we had no railroad completed, no depot, no town-house, no high school established, no visitors from abroad nor wealthy citizens at home. Now we have all those and more and our little North Hampton and Little Boar's Head, are beginning to be known and spoken of and written about all over our extended country, and I believe thus far, we have maintained a good reputation. Soon, very soon, we can go out here a little distance to Straw's Point and converse with friends across the wide Atlantic just as friend talks with friend and neighbor with neighbor. How wonderful the progress! Gentlemen, we have a noble heritage committed to our charge. Let us take good care of it and so cultivate and improve it "that our children and children's children will rise up and call us blessed."

Allow me to give as a sentiment "Our host: sure to win in any race, for he grows stronger at every heat, outstripping all on the home stretch. This company: a band of freemen whose aim it is, to maintain a wise, impartial, and economical administration of town affairs. Let progress be our motto, ability our shield and defence and honesty and strict integrity our foundation and corner stone."

During the delivery of Mr. French's speech applause was frequent and prolonged. A vote of thanks was given for the unsurpassed hospitalities of our friends the Batchelder brothers at their noble mansion on Little Boar's Head. At the close three rousing cheers were given in honor of the house and the occasion. J. W. B.

An Indiana Romance.

[Terre Haute Ex.]

She couldn't see it in that light. She didn't want to marry him, and he was bound she should. They both lived a couple of miles from the city, and near neighbors. She refused to listen to his courting, and he grew desperate. So he went off to the West, and while out there persuaded a friend to write a letter saying that he was dead, and asking, as his dying request, that she might, if she ever went out that way stop for a moment and toss a weed or perchance a flower on his lonely grave.

This was tender but it didn't take worth a cent; and she wrote back a letter to the friend saying that if he had any consideration for her feelings at all, to send her the dead lover's watch and chain, his money, and all his valuables. To carry out his plans, the dead man sent home his brass jewelry and other effects, and she immediately proceeded to don the trinkets and start to singing-school with the chosen "feller" of her heart.

On their way back home the pair were startled by the apparition of the lost lover, clad in ghostly white, but with the old lineaments intact. The young man fled—the girl stood still, and putting up a paw which resembled an elephant's foot, naively inquired if the ghost wanted to be kicked to death by a mule. To which his ghostship replied thus: "Lord! Lord! Jerusha, hev I come all the way home to find you false?" "You bet," replied the fair one laughing heartily, for she had discovered that it really was the person of her dead lover. The fellow had played a nice game, and had followed his goods and chattels back to the land of his nativity very quickly. The damsel was so disgusted with the other fellow for running at sight of the ghost that she immediately began preparations to marry the ghost.

Interesting Matrimonial Partnership.

[Hartford Times.]

Miss Olympia Brown was married last spring, but hasn't changed her name. She says that she and her husband agreed before they were married that they should hold on to their own names. In fact, she wouldn't have married without such an agreement. I asked her if Mr. Willis (her husband) didn't wish to change his name to Brown. She said, "Oh, no. He would be simple, if he did, Willis being a much prettier name; besides, had his name been Higginbottom, he would have preferred to retain it, considering it was his own, and the one he had always been known by." I asked her if no one ever called her Willis. She said, "Oh, yes, sometimes they did, but she didn't wage any special war on that, any more than if they had called her some pet name that never belonged to her." And so it is John Henry Willis and Rev. Olympia Brown; and he attends to his grocery business, and she preaches to her congregation of saints and sinners every Sunday, and they keep a snug little house in Bridgeport, on Golden Hill, and the name on the door is "Olympia Brown"—that partner in the matrimonial firm being the better known of the two.

—A dry wag was discovered in the lower branch of the Massachusetts legislature Monday afternoon. During the discussion of a bill imposing restrictions on the catching of trout, an amendment was offered prohibiting the catching of trout less than three inches in length; whereupon Mr. Butterworth of Brookfield set the house in a roar by gravely moving that in case a trout less than three inches in length bites, it have leave to withdraw.

Business Notices.

Ask Them!

An advertisement of a medicine, however candid and conscientious it may be, does not always carry conviction with it. The public know to their sorrow that the boastful claims put forth in behalf of many so-called remedies are literally "a delusion and a snare." Probably the best use, therefore, that can be made of the space devoted to this notice of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is to invite those who read it to inquire of the parties who have tested the curative and preventive properties of the article what they think of it. We earnestly request all doubters to ascertain from such of their friends and neighbors as have taken this standard tonic and alterative as a protection against malarious diseases, or as a cure for indigestion, liver complaint, constipation, rheumatism, nervous debility, headache, low spirits, languor, billiousness, &c., what Hostetter's Bitters has done for them. There is no testimony so trustworthy as that which is the result of personal experience.

Victims of Obscure Diseases, seeking safety and restored health, should use Dr. Helmbold's Extract Buchu. This article is reliable and standard. It is, moreover, the only preparation that develops the full value of Buchu as a diuretic. It is a perfect specific for all diseases of the urinary organs in male or female. Beware of counterfeits and imitations, which unscrupulous men are endeavoring to palm off upon Dr. Helmbold's reputation. Look out for the doctor's signature on the wrapper. For sale by all druggists.

ANAKESIS is without doubt, the most infallible easy and scientific cure for PILES, ever discovered. 20,000 grateful patients attest its virtues, and physicians of all schools endorse it unequivocally. Lotions, ointments, and electuaries are only a waste of time and money. ANAKESIS relieves pain at once and cures absolutely. It is the discovery of DR. SILSBEE, a scientific physician, and has been pronounced the greatest contribution to medicine of the age. Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. Depot 46 Walker St., New York.

Miss Morgan's School.

"Miss A. C. Morgan's Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies"—that is what it is styled in the very handsomely-gotten-up circular before us, the title of "Young Ladies' Seminary" evidently not having found favor in the sight of the lady most interested—will open on Thursday, Sept. 24. The circular contains most flattering testimonials of Miss Morgan's eminent fitness for the headship of a family school, from such authorities as John G. Whittier, Rev. Dr. Peabody of Harvard University, Ex-Gov. Goodwin, James T. Fields, Esq., Rev. Francis T. Russell of Trinity College, Rear-Admiral Thatcher, U. S. N., Rev. A. J. Patterson, Hon. W. H. Y. Hackett, Rev. Geo. M. Adams, Rev. James DeNormandie and others; and her list of authorized references contains the names of the present and many former clergymen of this city, judges, literary men and women whose names are famous throughout the country, professors in and heads of colleges and universities, and doctors of divinity, medicine and laws, residing all over the land, as far as St. Louis and San Francisco. Miss Morgan may well feel proud of the earnest interest expressed in her new undertaking by so many persons at the head of the educational interests of the country, and their warm recognition of her abilities as a teacher and her personal worth; and their commendations may and we hope will result in the accession of so many pupils from other cities that the school will have to be enlarged at once. But in this city Miss Morgan needs no recommendation outside her record as a teacher; she has been eminently thorough, exact and faithful, and (as Dr. Peabody writes) "possesses firmness and decision without severity, and while she has always had the respect and obedience of her pupils, she has never failed to secure their affection." If her new school meets the encouragement and support it will merit, its entire success is certain.

That Proboscis.

Says Kent in the Traveller: During the delivery by Rev. Carlos Martyn, of an eloquent and eulogistic discourse on "Some Lessons from the Life of Charles Sumner," he made use of the following language, about which there is some comment:

"The morals of the city of Washington are so corrupt that they create a stench, the odor of which causes the man in the moon to hold his nose."

While there are many who believe that our capital compares very favorably with other cities in the Union in the scale of religious, temperance and political sentiment, there are also many of the world's people who doubt where the reverent scholar gets his ethereal authority concerning the nasal organ of the imagined resident of the moon.

Prof. Gunning's Lecture

At Mechanics' Hall, Tuesday evening, drew a good audience, and all present were richly repaid, the lecture being extremely interesting.

The speaker began by drawing an outline of America as it appeared "in the beginning." The world was ocean-islanded here and there by a barren ridge of granite. Two such ridges formed the germ of North America. The one appears to day as the Huronean Mountains of Canada, the other as a chain of hills extending from Lake Superior north-westward to the Arctic ocean. Back of that condition of the world the speaker would not go this evening.

He went on to show how from these base lines in the north the continent grew southward by the accumulation of sand and mud on the beach and bottom of the sea. These sediments were hardened into rock systems and they must be made to tell the story of the world's primeval life.

Sir William Logan had found the print of an animal in the Huronean rocks of Canada strata, which were once mud along that first seabeach. The speaker drew a restoration of the animal which appeared as a body without organs or members. So far as we know this may have been the first life on the globe. It is the oldest ever found and it presents only the idea of life. The creative thought was not clearly pronounced. Higher up in the rocks we find the ruins of the earliest animals which express plan or structure. To understand them we must see the patterns on which the Divine thought is bodied forth to-day. The sea is but a great "sea of life." The speaker took his audience in imagination into Portsmouth harbor and to Rye Beach, and drew in brilliant colors and explained some of our most wonderful forms of life. He then drew a few fossils which he had found in limestones in Littleton, New Hampshire, and from the fossils restored the animals. He showed how they were prophetic of certain headless, brainless, nerveless animals found any summer day in Portsmouth harbor. He went on to show that rock systems miles thick were composed of the crushed and comminuted skeletons of such lowly, prophetic animals as these. The floor of the Rockingham House is little else than fossil shells of the dead of an early ocean. The most careless eye can see them. Two miles of rock-leaves were formed, grain by grain on the sea-bed—the wash from older rocks—after life in forms of star and flower began, before we have any trace of life with head and brains. At the present rate of nature's working two miles of rock-leaves would represent 40,000,000 years. Forty million years for creation to get under headway! The first head appeared on the fish. The speaker drew the successive stages of fish-making in the egg, up to the perfect fish, and showed how each part is related to every other. By making a few changes on the scale he showed how the entire fish would change. In drawing these modifications he got back to the primeval fish. He then showed how in the fish we have the ground pattern of all vertebrates even up to man, and how, in some sense, the primeval fish was a prophesy of all vertebrate life to come. By a few strokes of the chalk he transformed the fish into a reptile, and then the reptile into a Chinese pig, and then the pig into a Chinaman, although it did not follow, he said, that this is the line of descent of the "Son of the Sun."

The next lecture will be delivered on Tuesday evening of next week, in the same place. The probability is that the audience will swell before the course closes to the capacity of the Temple.

Laconics.

Foster's Democrat is responsible for the statement that a servant girl in a Portsmouth family was notified on Saturday that by the decease of an uncle in Australia she had become heir to a property worth $13,000.

The democrats propose to divide this city into five wards.

The Jubilee Singers will give their first concert under their new leader, at the Temple, Sunday evening. Give them a rousing benefit.

H. F. Wendell's auction sale of the entire stock of goods in his extensive rooms at Nos. 69, 70 and 71 State street, commenced on Tuesday, everything being offered without reserve. The sale will continue until all the goods are sold. See advertisement.

Monday was so blustering and cold that "washing day" was postponed,—we know, because we can never get any water in our office on washing-day, and our pumps threw water all day Monday. Tuesday was windy and cold, also, but the housewives wouldn't put off washing any longer on account of the weather,—our pumps were dry as powder on Tuesday. Our devil says his reputation has seriously deteriorated with the public since he commenced bringing drinking-water to the office in a gallon jug, and he hopes something will be done to secure more water before his stock of good name is entirely used up.

Only Think Of It.

The New York Tribune says: "Think of Dr. Brown-Sequard advising the bald-headed and spectacled doctors who were listening to him to stand on one foot, with the eyes closed, as a test of the soundness of their brains! The probability being, if they were well in years, that they would feel as if they were drunk. Of course they couldn't do it then and there; but imagine them trying it, on the domestic hearth, in these days of temperance reform! Sad hours there must have been in Boston households when the members of the family who attended those lectures proceeded to test the experiments upon those who remained at home."

Criticising Newspapers.

The Utica Observer observes: In Utopia every man will run his own newspaper. But while we remain on top of this sorrowful earth, only a limited number can devote themselves to journalism. To the remainder belongs the inestimable privilege of grumbling. * * A newspaper to be of any benefit to a political party must do its work in its own way. Criticism of its method is perfectly legitimate. If a man doesn't like his paper let him say so. If he thinks he can make a better one let him make it. But common fairness demands that he should speak only for himself, and not profess to speak for others whom he does not represent. If he will sometimes pause to consider that he is only one of twenty thousand in the list of a newspaper's readers, he may lower his tone somewhat, out of sheer surprise that he constitutes so small a fraction of the great whole.

—There is a Danbury legend to the effect that a party desiring to transact some private business with another, was invited by the other to step into a neighboring store. "But we will be disturbed there," said the first party. "Oh, no," said the second party, "they don't advertise."

The Planet Venus.

This beautiful and sometimes very brilliant planet, is now the evening star. It was at its conjunction Feb. 23. It then was beyond the sun to us, and at that date commenced being evening star, but for about a month was not seen by us, as it went down not long after sunset. It will be evening star till December, when it will be at its inferior conjunction. We shall have the beauties of this planet all this time. It will set later and later till the 29th of September, at which time it will reach its greatest elongation, or distance from the sun. After the last named date, it will seem approaching the sun and early in November it will show its greatest brilliancy. December 8th it will be at its inferior conjunction, will be between the earth and sun, and then the long expected transit will take place. A transit is the passage of a planet over the sun's disc. No planets but Venus and Mercury can make transits, these only having orbits within that of the earth.

The transits of Venus are not often; those of Mercury are more frequent, but they are of little note, as that planet is seldom seen, and perhaps never in a transit. The transit of Venus next December will not be seen in America. Scientific men are to go to the other side of the globe to make observations. The year of Venus is 224 days, or about seven and one-half months of our time. From its superior conjunction on Feb. 23d, to its inferior, Dec. 8th, is 288 days; so in that time it will make its yearly revolution, and 64 days on another. It is interesting to consider that since Feb. 23d, this planet has been on its journey to its transit, and will get there Dec. 8th. This single part of the machinery of the universe is a wonder, worthy of the contemplation of great minds. Go beyond it as far as finite minds can, and it is found worthy of the infinite Creator. UNCLE JOSEPH.

Death on the Flying Trapeze.

In the Thirty-fourth Street Theatre, New York, Thursday, James Sylvester made his death-leap on the trapeze. His closing act on the trapeze had usually been to swing with all his might, and when he calculated that he had force enough he would turn a somersault from the trapeze and catch a rope suspended from the ceiling in the back part of the auditorium. Young Sylvester came out as usual Thursday night, and executed his various feats until the last grand leap. Then he swung himself until he thought that he had gathered sufficient force, and let himself go. But he miscalculated, and swung too far. With tremendous velocity he shot by the rope and struck against the boxes with an appalling thud. Thence he fell in a heap to the floor, striking on his head. The force of the fall was so great as to break the heavy iron chain upon which he struck. Ladies in the boxes fainted, and the spectators were transfixed. Two physicians were in the theatre, and attendants from behind the scenes hurried to the assistance of the injured man. Sylvester was gently lifted and borne into a room. There the physicians found him to be alive, but without the least consciousness. A terrible gash on the back of his head marked where he had struck. The skull was beaten in, and large clots of blood and pieces of brains oozed out upon the slightest pressure. The play was hurried on, but the house soon thinned out, leaving the theatre empty. Sylvester soon died. He was 19 years of age.

A Bloodless Amputation.

The Press of Thursday says "James O. McIntire, Esq., formerly of Alfred, came to Portland a few weeks since for medical treatment for a disease of the knee, from which he has been suffering since last July, and placed himself under the care of Dr. Tewksbury. Wednesday it was found necessary to remove his leg, and the operation of amputation of the thigh was performed with the loss of but a few drops of blood. The operation was performed in the method first introduced by Prof. F. Esmarch, a distinguished German surgeon. It consists in first bandaging the leg with india-rubber webbing and thus compressing the limb in such a manner as to force the blood entirely from it; thereby saving the loss of blood which usually accompanies an amputation. The operation was made in the presence of many medical gentlemen of Portland, who were much pleased with the new method. It is of very recent introduction and we believe never before attempted in this section of the country. In this instance it proved highly successful and satisfactory.

Mr. McIntire was very comfortable Wednesday evening, a fact which is attributed to the saving of blood which would necessarily have been lost in an operation conducted after the usual method. His friends are hopeful that permanent benefit may result.

The great merits of the new operation are apparent at a glance, and in the case of debilitated persons who can ill spare the loss even of a single drop of blood, it must be of incalculable benefit. In any case it robs an amputation of many of its terrors."

—Recently it was announced that a number of female barbers were about to open a shop in Washington. Ex-Senator Pomeroy, who was in the city, went and stood in front of the place eighteen hours, waiting for the opening.

—"The day is not far distant," says a Raleigh paper, "when the world will begin to look on death as a journey to another country." The Louisville Courier-Journal assents to this and naively adds that the journey will be one on which we can all go as deadheads.

IF VEGETINE will relieve pain, cleanse, purify and cure such diseases, restoring the patient to perfect health after trying different physicians, many remedies, suffering for years, is it not conclusive proof, if you are a sufferer, you can be cured? Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood, in the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the Great Blood-Purifier. The great source of disease originates in the blood; and no medicine that does not act directly upon it, to purify and renovate, has any just claim upon public attention. When the blood becomes lifeless and stagnant, either from change of weather or climate, want of exercise, irregular diet, or from any other cause, the VEGETINE will renew the blood, carry off the putrid humors, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, and impart a tone of vigor to the whole body. The conviction is, in the public mind as well as in the medical profession, that the remedies supplied by the Vegetable Kingdom are more safe, more successful, in the cure of disease, than mineral medicines. VEGETINE is composed of roots, barks, and herbs. It is pleasant to take, and perfectly safe to give an infant. In Scrofula the VEGETINE has performed wonderful cures, where many other remedies have failed, as will be seen by the following unsolicited testimonial:

A Walking Miracle.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir:—Though a stranger I want to inform you what VEGETINE has done for me.

Last Christmas Scrofula made its appearance in my system—large running ulcers appearing on me as follows: One on each of my arms, one on my thigh, which extended to the seat, one on my head, which eat into the skull bone, one on my left leg, which became so bad that two physicians came to amputate the limb, though upon consultation concluded not to do so, as my whole body was so full of Scrofula they deemed it advisable to cut the sore, which was painful beyond description, and there was a quart of matter run from this one sore. The physicians all gave me up to die, and said they could do no more for me. Both of my legs were drawn up to my seat, and it was thought if I did get up again I would be a cripple for life.

When in this condition I saw VEGETINE advertised, and commenced taking it in March, and followed on with it, until I had used 16 bottles; and this morning I am going to plough corn, a well man. All my townsmen say it is a miracle to see me round walking and working.

In conclusion I will add, when I was enduring such great suffering, from that dreadful disease, Scrofula, I prayed to the Lord above to take me out of this world, but as VEGETINE has restored to me the blessings of health, I desire more than ever to live, that I may be of some purpose to my fellow man, and I know of no better way to aid suffering humanity, than to enclose you this statement of my case, with the earnest hope that you will publish it, and it will afford me pleasure to reply to any communication which I may receive therefrom.

I am, sir, very respectfully,
WILLIAM PAYN

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most efficacious cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is refreshing, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

BEHOLD!
WILSON'S
SUPERPHOSPHATE
At Auction!
My plan of selling Superphosphate without consignment has proved so successful and has given such universal satisfaction to the Farmers, that I have decided to pursue a similar course this season, and shall make arrangements so that the Farmers in all the principal towns in New England can have an opportunity of purchasing some of my Superphosphates, either of the dealers or of my agents. I have none out on commission, and shall send none out in that way. No goods will be sent from the works until sold, and purchasers can thus rely on receiving fresh goods whenever they choose to buy. The experience that I have had in selling Superphosphate on commission, has taught me that the plan is not the right one. In many instances the goods are not properly taken care of, but often remain exposed to the weather, summer and winter, and the purchaser who buys from a lot which has thus lain through several seasons may (and perhaps justly) complain that the Fertilizer is not up to the standard, when in reality the goods were of extra quality at the time they left the Manufacturer, and would still have been had they been properly cared for. It is to avoid this and other abuses that I decline to commission any Superphosphate.
My Agent M. D. Lawrence will be at the following places at the time named, ready to receive orders, price to be fixed by auction.
The only Fertilizer that has ever received a SILVER MEDAL from the N. E. AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Man's Sin and Woman's Weakness.

[Charlton, Mo., Brunswicker.]

A tired husband went home from his work last night, and taking off his coat, requested his wife to mend a rent in the sleeve, then sank upon his sofa behind the evening paper. Wife-like, she took up the coat; woman-like, she dived into the pockets. From the inside pocket she drew forth a letter directed in delicate chirography, to her husband. With darkening brow, she drew it from the envelope, and without noticing the date, began to read:

"Dear George:—I am lonely, oh, so lonely, since you left me last Thursday night."

"Ah, ha! that was lodge night, he told me," said the now thoroughly interested woman, as she glanced viciously over at her husband, who appeared to be just falling asleep. "Oh, how can you sleep with the weight of this deep sin upon you? But I'll see what more the brazen huzzy has to say, if it kills me." With one hand pressed to her throbbing heart, she read on:

"I know I am foolish, darling, but when you are away there seems to be a barrier between me and all that is bright and lovely. The sun does not shine half so bright; the moon is but a white spot in the sky, and the stars stare coldly down, when you are not with me, lord of my life and heart."

"Was it for this? was it for this?" moaned the unhappy wife.

"Fortune speed the day when we may be united in those indissoluble bonds that are sacred in the eyes of heaven and earth—"

"What mockery! Does he or she consider that his vows made to me are not sacred? What are they going to do with me anyway, I wonder? Poison, perhaps. Oh, false, false, perfidious man! Oh, wicked, hellish, designing wanton!" Still the suffering woman read the letter, though each word burned into ashes a thousand hopes and joys:

"When we need no more meet clandestinely, and tremble in each other's embrace—"

"I'd make you tremble if I had you in my embrace a minute!"

"When my head may be pillowed in safety upon your breast—"

"The fiendess!"

"And your arms twine in loving pressure about me—"

"Furies!"

"And our lips smother the tender words that would escape between them."

"Oh 'the sirenic' she-devil!" hissed the woman as she tried to keep down the boiling rage within her. She crushed the letter in her hands, then threw it upon the floor and sprang upon it with her heels as though it were a snake, and ground it into the carpet. Then, with clenched hands and compressed lips, she strode rapidly back and forth across the room, ever and anon making a move as if to spring like fury upon her husband, who, with a paper over his face, was apparently sound asleep, dreaming, perhaps, of the wicked temptress that had come between him and his fond wife. Presently a re-action took place, and the wretched woman found relief in that blessed panacea for female ills, a flood of tears.

Grown calmer after a while, she picked up the rumpled letter, smoothed out the creases, and with the air of mingled despair and resignation, looked for the signature.

"Your ever loving and devoted, but poor, apprehensive—"

"What's this! Flut—flut—tering birdie, A-d-a—Ada. Why, bless me! this is one of my own old letters to George. What a fool I—"

A sound from the sofa, first like escaping steam, and then like a car rattling o'er stony street, assured her that her ridiculous actions had been witnessed by her husband. Burning with shame, the foolish woman flew to her room and locked herself in; and she is almost as miserable now as when she was a wronged and deceived wife.

Plain Talk to the Temperance Ladies.

The Louisville Courier-Journal, while offering its sympathy to any scheme which will destroy the evils of intemperance, thinks that the assault on the liquor-sellers, who are only middle-men, must fail, and offers the following advice:

"The points of attack, then, lady leaders in this movement, are very simple: either stop the manufacture of intoxicating liquors, or direct your efforts against the consumer, and bring the whole weight of your moral force to bear against the unnatural appetite which is the root of the whole evil. Destroy this, and neither distillers nor dram-sellers will need your further attention. Do you ask how this can be accomplished? We can tell you readily how it can be accomplished. This curse is not to be removed by declaiming against it in public and tolerating it in private. Treat the gentlemen as they treat you; measure them by the standards by which you are measured by them, and the accessions to the ranks of temperance will surpass your most sanguine expectations. If a woman is addicted to the excessive use of ardent spirits, are men still ready to take her to their bosoms with merely a sigh of pity? No; the sentence is more stern and severe, and—shall we add—more just. She is banished from respectable society, and her character considered wrecked. Have you not sufficient nerve and moral force to exact as high a standard of virtue from them? Instead of boiling over in public and being lukewarm in private, boil, if you wish to, but try the effect of freezing. You ladies who are unmarried should acquire sufficient dignity and strength of character to refuse to associate with drunkards, even if they have sober intervals. Let young men understand that, if they love ardent spirits better than they do you, you consider them already wedded to a more alluring mistress, and are not disposed to become a bigamist. Is this asking too much of you? Then go on in your crusade against the rumsellers, pour out the vials of wrath upon the accursed traffic, and compel the vender to close his (front) doors. Then in the evening rest your head upon the bosom of his sodden patron, and while you are inhaling the sweet fragrance of Bourbon and lager, let your mind repose under the consciousness of duty well done."

Eureka!

In conversation with a prohibitionist,—or rather, a member of the prohibitory party,—recently, we asked him to give us the reasons for the factious proceedings of his party, frankly acknowledging that we had not penetration enough to discover any. He replied that the prohibitionists cared more for the advancement of temperance than for the success of any mere party; and on our reminding him that the republican party was the only one in this State that ever did anything for the temperance cause, having passed the prohibitory law and steadily refused to repeal it, he replied: "Yes; that's all very well to talk about. The republican party passed the law, sure enough; but has the republican party ever enforced it?" This was a poser, and no mistake. It had never before dawned on our mind that the republican party was solely responsible for the enforcement of the laws; in our innocence of heart we had imagined that laws passed by the legislature went to the people for enforcement—not merely to the republican party; and that republicans, as such, were no more responsible for the enforcement or non-enforcement of any law than democrats or prohibitionists. We explained this to our prohibitory friend, and in return learned that we were blinded by our devotion to party! Finding him invulnerable on that side, we asked him if he did not consider the prohibitory law, even though it was only partially enforced, more of a check upon the liquor traffic than a license law will be, and if he did not think it better for the temperance cause to have the law retain even a partial control of the liquor traffic rather than to introduce an era of free rum? We had already received one astonisher, and we got another with the reply, "No, I don't. The present prohibitory law has been enforced in many places just enough to crowd out of sight the most offensive features of the liquor traffic,—the low groggeries and rum-dens have been crushed, but the hotels and the so-called respectable drinking-saloons have not been troubled. People do not have the detestation of the business which they will have after a year's experience of the horrors of free rum—then we shall be able to elect men who will not only pass a prohibitory law but will enforce it afterward!" Thanking our informant, we precipitately retired from the field, happy that at last we had found the reasons (?) for the action of the prohibitionists.

One of these reasons it seems was the desire to punish by defeat the republican party, because, (in common with the democratic and prohibition parties) it had not done what as a party it had nothing to do with—enforced the prohibitory law according to the desires of the prohibitionists. [What punishment should justly be visited upon the prohibitory party for not enforcing its own pet law, we cannot decide.] The other reason was a desire to increase the temperance sentiment of the State and weaken the rum power, by increasing the amount of rum drinking and giving control of the State to the advocates of free rum! When we remember that free rum is no novelty in this State—that it was only after years of struggling with free rum that the present prohibitory law was passed, and that every new liquor saloon and every new drunkard adds to the strength of the anti-prohibition party, such "reasoning" seems incomprehensible in sensible men; and we are only the more confirmed in our original opinion, that the prohibition leaders either are not sensible men or are calculating tricksters who really care nothing for the cause they so loudly prate about.

State News.

David E. Blodgett of Laconia was on Wednesday indicted for the murder of his wife.

Says the Haverhill Bulletin: Newspapers in New Hampshire are not yet quite satisfied that the republican defeat in New Hampshire was caused by prohibitionists and internal dissensions in the party itself rather than by outside influence. Hence the Concord Monitor is constantly attending to Butlerism and the appointment of Mr. Simmons to the Collectorship. The Portsmouth CHRONICLE, however, does not view the situation in this light, fully believing as we do that the cause of this defeat is almost wholly within the borders of the Granite State and can be found in republican ranks.

Butlerism.

A reporter of the Boston Globe has interviewed General Butler, and obtained from him the following definition of "Butlerism:"

Reporter—You see that the papers opposed to you are generally denouncing Butlerism. What do you understand by that?

Butler—I confess I don't quite understand the meaning of the term as they use it. They insist that the person of that name desires to become Governor of the Commonwealth by the votes of his fellow-citizens. And then they say, further, that he means to make that a stepping-stone to the Presidency. How being Governor will help him in that direction, unless he intends to be a good Governor, is more than I can imagine. If he should show himself there an incompetent, corrupt or weak chief magistrate it would be an insult to the intelligence of the people to think that being Governor would advance his supposed ambition; and as he is only to be made Governor by the votes of a majority of the people, such honorable ambition might well be confessed to be Butlerism. But another form of it seems to be desiring to promote the interests of one's friends, and not allowing them to be struck down, if possible to prevent it, by the hands of any body of men, however arrogant, and powerful, unless some wrong can be shown. In this phase of Butlerism, the President and Senate of the United States, by a two-thirds majority, seemed to share. Or, perhaps, that word means unnecessary labor to advance the interest of one's State and constituency by every proper means best adapted to that end; or, perhaps, it may mean leaving one's friends, family and home when danger to the country called, and foregoing all other considerations to fight for its honor, safety and integrity without stopping to count the cost. Upon the whole, I rather think that this is Butlerism. At least, I have never seen anything like it in any of those who are so loud in opposition. I confess to you, Mr. Reporter, that if this is not Butlerism I do not know what the meaning of the term is. Perhaps, however, I have omitted one other phase of it, and that is, supporting the administration and the party with which he acts, loyally and faithfully, in all measures for the good of the country—sacrificing personal ambition and hopes to keep the party intact while one's opponents are striving to belittle the Government, degrade its officers, berate action, and threaten to break up the party when even a subordinate officer is not appointed in accordance with their wishes. Upon the whole, on full reflection, I think this must be Butlerism. I happen to remember another phase—standing for the poor and oppressed against the rich and powerful wherever oppression shows itself, without counting the cost at which it is done, and receiving obloquy and abuse in return. Allow me to say that no sneak or hypocrite can be guilty of Butlerism.

Wanted to Blow the Organ.

A recent number of the Lawrence American says:

There is a good little boy in Lawrence who had long been fired with an ambition to blow the church organ on Sunday. The regular blower wasn't there last Sunday, and the organist put in the good boy as a substitute.

He instructed him minutely how he should pump air into the bellows. He must be careful and not work the handle by jerks and on no account must he allow the indicator, which showed the amount of air in the bellows, to rise above a certain point.

When it started up the boy must pump until it came down to the mark again, and there he must keep it. The organist went through the voluntary. All right; the boy was faithful. The choir sung the first tune; no trouble. Another hymn; the boy was there and the blowing was all straight. The minister read his text and proceeded with his sermon.

After a time the organist thought he heard something behind the organ. He listened and was very sure that the pump was going. The minister preached on, and an occasional sound behind the organ indicated that the boy was at his post. The organist couldn't reach him, and so the boy kept pumping.

He pumped through the sermon, the last hymn, the final prayer and the benediction. The organist played while the congregation retired and then climbed around to look at his boy. He was there all right—pumping.

He had been there keeping the bellows handle going for an hour and a half. When the bellows leaked a little and the indicator rose, he pumped till it came back. He said his arms ached a little but he'd come next Sunday if the man wanted him.

The little fellow made a mistake, but we commend his fidelity. All boys who work hard to get a place do not work hard after they have got it. The American adds that when the Lawrence reservoir is ready to be filled that boy had better be hired as pumper.

How Snow Blockades are Broken.

[San Francisco Chronicle.]

Once in a while, when the storm would lighten up, we could catch a glimpse of the great snow-plow, with its six engines, around some bend, driving into the drifts with a force that it would seem would move the world. These snow-plows are a curiosity, both in their construction and the manner in which they do their work. They are immense structures—I say structures, for they are as big as a two-story house, and weigh from 45,000 to 55,000 pounds. In front they are shaped like the iron prow of an iron-clad frigate, only the sharp, vertical portion of this prow changes into a flat surface where it approaches the ground. Attached to this flat or horizontal prow is what is called an "apron." This apron is attached to the prow by means of hinges. It lifts up and lets down directly on the track at pleasure, and when down is held there by large steel springs. When in motion this apron slides right on the rails, pressing hard on them, but from the rounded surface which it presents to them it glides over the joints and any other little irregularities with ease. The long prow is pushed under the snow, the apron scraping it clear from the rails, and lifting it up bodily it meets the vertical section of the plow which divides it, and hurls it off on either side. When running at a high rate of speed, as is often the case, these plows sometimes hurl the snow into the air fifty feet, and plunge it in huge masses into the deep chasm and canons. Some such scene as this was presented the other night when Mr. Fillimore, the Division Superintendent, brought the eastward-bound express train through with eleven engines. The scene was one of the wildest and grandest that has ever been witnessed on this road. It had been storming all day and night, and all the next day, and the snow had fallen and drifted some places ten and fifteen feet in depth. The train darted out from Colfax with three engines, but at Alta it took a fourth. A snow-plow with seven heavy fifty-five-ton engines went on ahead to clear the way, but at Blue Canon the plow stuck in a huge drift, and the whole force of the seven engines could not budge it an inch ahead. After shoveling awhile the express train and the snow train were coupled together, making a team of eleven engines, a snow-plow and six cars. Such a sight was never seen. The long chain of puffing monsters backed down for a mile or two, and then, taking a fresh start, came at the drift at the rate of forty miles an hour. The only wonder is that the plow was not crunched into sawdust. It not only stood this enormous strain, but it kept to the track and cut an eleven-foot passage in the drift with the precision of a surgeon's knife. With the power so increased, the plow cut its way through to Emigrant Gap. At one point near there the spectacle was magnificent. On a sharp curve on a steep embankment the snow had been piled up to the very height of the smoke-stacks of the engines for a distance of one thousand yards. The curve was so situated that it was in full view of the station at the Gap. The weather had cleared off and the moon shone brightly on the snow. In the distance, slowly forging ahead were the eleven black and begrimmed leviathans, while in front of them was the great plow throwing snow in huge masses like ocean billows, and rolling it down the mountain sides thousands of feet into the yawning chasm below. The smoke and fire from eleven funnels, the tops of which could just be seen above the drifts, the horrible noise and din of the puffing steam, and the great glaciers being thrown high in the air and tumbling down the mountain side, all furnished a scene which those who have not witnessed it can never appreciate.

—A Yale student, who is evidently in the "journalistic" department writes a twelve-verse poem which is entitled, "We kissed each other by the sea." "Well what of it!" asks a western journalist; "the seaside is no better for such practices than any other locality. In fact, we have put in some very sweet work of that kind on the towpath of a canal in our time, but did not say anything about it in print."

—Mrs. Paist has been elected to the Philadelphia School Committee, and will undoubtedly "stick."

"An Oshkosh Judge got four bars of soap for a marriage fee;" and yet, who enters Oshkosh leaves soap behind.

There is much comment on the editor of the Enquirer's remarking, "Next to pork, whisky is our main dependence."

The New York Mail says a poor German musician took poison because he had to choose between that and free soup.

Ask Them!

An advertisement of a medicine, however candid and conscientious it may be, does not always carry conviction with it. The public know to their sorrow that the boastful claims put forth in behalf of many so-called remedies are literally "a delusion and a snare." Probably the best use, therefore, that can be made of the space devoted to this notice of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is to invite those who read it to inquire of the parties who have tested the curative and preventive properties of the article what they think of it. We earnestly request all doubters to ascertain from such of their friends and neighbors as have used it, whether it is not a valuable and alterative as a protection against malarious diseases, or as a cure for indigestion, liver complaint, constipation, rheumatism, nervous debility, headache, low spirits, languor, billiousness, &c., what Hostetter's Bitters has done for them. There is no testimony so trustworthy as that which is the result of personal experience.

Victims of Obscure Diseases, seeking safety and restored health, should use Dr. Helmbold's Extract Buchu. This article is officinal and standard. It is, moreover, the only preparation that develops the full value of Buchu as a diuretic. It is a perfect specific for all diseases of the urinary organs in male or female. Beware of counterfeits and imitations, which unscrupulous parties are endeavoring to palm off upon Dr. Helmbold's reputation. Look out for the doctor's signature on the wrapper. For sale by all druggists.

ANAKESIS is without doubt, the most infallible easy and scientific cure for PILES, ever discovered. 20,000 grateful patients attest its virtues, and physicians of all schools endorse it unequivocally. Lotions, ointments, and electuaries are only a waste of time and money. ANAKESIS relieves pain at once and cures absolutely. It is the discovery of DR. SILSBEE, a scientific physician, and has been pronounced the greatest contribution to medicine of the age. Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. Depot 46 Walker St., New York.

NONE but a physician knows how much a reliable alterative is needed by the people. On all sides of us, in all communities everywhere, there are multitudes who suffer from complaints that nothing but alterative cures.—Hence a great many of them have been made and put abroad with the assurance of being effectual. But they fail to accomplish the cures they promise, because they have not the intrinsic virtues they claim. In this state of the case, DR. J. AYER & CO., of Lowell, have supplied a COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPARILLA, which proves to be the long-desired remedy. Its peculiar difference from other kindred preparations in the market is that it cures the diseases for which it is recommended, while they do not. We are assured of this fact by more than one intelligent physician in this neighborhood, and have the further evidence of our own experience of its truth.—[Nashville (Tenn.) Farmer.]

Local Matters.

Mechanics' Hall.

The first Geological lecture in the course of Professor Gunning on Tuesday evening, was a very interesting one, charmingly illustrated on the blackboard through the skilful hand of a master. The hall was well filled, but the listeners would have enjoyed the hour and a half much more if they could have had a tolerable atmosphere to breathe. It is surprising that in this enlightened day, when so much has been said and done about the importance of ventilation the builders of Mechanics' Hall have made no provision at all for this purpose. The windows would not let down at the top and even the funnel hole in the chimney was carefully closed; the air after fifteen minutes with the doors closed became very foul, interfering much with the comfort and health of those present. We think that this might have been the cause of the lack of strength at times in the voice of the Professor, for if he could have had good air, we have no doubt that he would always speak as he did for a part of the time, in tones that would reach his remotest auditor. *

Fires.

A fire was set in the woods belonging to Mr. Elihu Dennett, near Sagamore Creek, Wednesday afternoon, and after hard labor was got under before nightfall. The fresh breeze kept it swiftly on its course, the flames rushing with a roar to the tops of the trees and communicating to hundreds of branches sailed off in an ever-increasing area of desolation. The smoke drifted toward town in vast volumes until nearly sunset.

Shortly after five o'clock, fire was discovered in the attic of the house on the corner of Pleasant and Franklin streets, occupied by Mr. Joseph R. Curtis and recently purchased by the Young sisters. Mr. Curtis was about to remove, as the house was to be remodelled. His furniture was saved. No cause is assigned for the fire. The firemen were speedily on hand, but water was short and recourse was had to the mill-pond which was conveniently near. The firemen rallied well, the police cleared the streets adjacent and roped out the spectators, and finally two powerful streams of water were put on and into the burning building, which was a mass of flame above the second floor and on the roof. The neighboring roofs were covered with men throwing water, but just as the fire was being extinguished the residence of Mr. George W. Butler, across the street, caught fire from cinders, and the attic was soon in flames. A second alarm was given by the ward-room bell. The efforts of the firemen were immediately transferred to this building, the extinguishers doing good service. Holes were cut in the roof and the hook and ladder men were no less efficient than the hosemen in checking the fire. The fire clung stubbornly to the attic and the building was thoroughly drenched. The greater portion of Mr. Butler's furniture was removed to the ward-room. Mr. Butler's loss on furniture is about $1000; on house $1500 more. Insured for $2500. The loss on the building owned by the Young sisters is about $2500. The house of Mr. James W. Nutter caught fire, but was extinguished. The wind was blowing briskly, and as the adjacent buildings were wooden, the firemen are being congratulated warmly on their success.

Rebuked and---Repentant?

The following is from some one who (like us) has a vivid conception of the vast and self-sacrificing services of the late Charles Sumner in the cause of liberty and equal rights, and who also (like us) considers himself the editor of the CHRONICLE, and who therefore gets after us as follows because we did not choose to devote as much space as he thought proper to reviews of the life and character of the deceased Senator:

Messrs. Editors: You have acquired for the CHRONICLE the unenviable pre-eminence of being almost if not quite the only respectable paper in the United States which had not one word of grief for the death of Charles Sumner, or one word of admiration for his career. You did not even allude to the unanimous burst of grief, from every part of the country, which followed that death. After this you might surely have spared your readers the insult of copying the scurrilous words of a person like Don Piatt. Your readers can bear and have borne a good deal, but there is a point where forbearance ceases to be a virtue.

F.

Immoral and irrascible newspaper rage, on receiving such a communication as the above, would have got mad and sworn fearfully, thrown the letter in the waste-paper basket, and indulged in savage soliloquies concerning "cheek," etc.; but we, being moral and of even temper and mild disposition, and averse to even one-sided strife, simply laid the note aside for "copy," and had a good time over its contents. We were amused by several things: firstly, that our genial and unknown censor, "F," could make so many incorrect statements in so short a communication, not one of its statements being true; secondly, that Donn Piatt's assertion that if the true story of Mr. Sumner's domestic life is ever told, "he will be found in all its relations as pure, as high-toned and honorable as he was in his public life," (which we regarded as a remarkable tribute to the deceased Senator's character, coming from a noted cynic like Donn Piatt, who was no lover of his during life,) is "scurrilous;" and lastly, that "F" has not yet discovered the fact that the CHRONICLE is edited by its editors and not by its subscribers or readers. We were further gratified at learning of the powers of endurance possessed by our subscribers, endurance being an excellent thing to have around; and for the information that "there is a point where forbearance ceases to be a virtue" we are duly grateful. We sincerely hope that our subscribers in general, and "F" in particular, will be careful not to strain their forbearance beyond a safe tension on our account, nor to do their consciences violence by reading, against their inclinations, the paper which we edit and which nobody else manages or will manage so long as we are its editors. For the benefit of "gratis" editors, including "F," we republish the following apropos paragraph:

The Utica Observer observes: In Utopia every man will run his own newspaper. But while we remain on top of this sorrowful earth, only a limited number can devote themselves to journalism. To the remainder belongs the inestimable privilege of grumbling. * * A newspaper to be of any benefit to a political party must do its work in its own way. Criticism of its method is perfectly legitimate. If a man doesn't like his paper let him say so. If he thinks he can make a better one let him make it. But common fairness demands that he should speak only for himself, and not profess to speak for others whom he does not represent. If he will sometimes pause to consider that he is only one of twenty thousand in the list of a newspaper's readers, he may lower his tone somewhat, out of sheer surprise that he constitutes so small a fraction of the great whole.

Laconics.

The annual notice of the Assessors to the tax-payers of the city will be found in another column. Mr. R. K. Oxford is chairman.

A full meeting of the proprietors of the Union cemetery, or their representatives, is called for, to meet at the store of the clerk, Mr. Edmund M. Brown, on the 6th of April, "to choose officers and to take such action in regard to repairs and improvements as they shall see fit."

A good farm is offered for sale in our advertising columns to-day,—the milk farm of Mr. Peter Emery, near the Plains,—with valuable stock, a good supply of farming gear, etc. If not sold, the farm will be let to a responsible person.

Mr. Charles A. Berglund advertises his annual trip to Sweden for the purpose of procuring skilled domestic servants, and requests that families desiring Swedish help will notify him at once. Mr. Berglund has furnished Swedish girls for domestics, to a number of families in this city, and in every case we believe they have given entire satisfaction both as to trustworthiness and ability.

Willie E. Nowell, the eminent young violinist, will give a grand vocal and instrumental concert at the Temple on Tuesday evening, March 31st. He will be assisted by Harlow's full band, Miss. Clara Nickels of Boston, soprano, and a male quartette consisting of Messrs. Chase, Nowell, Harlow and Ilsley. Miss Aggie E. Plumer, who is well known as one of the most accomplished pianists and most careful and judicious accompanists our city has produced, will also assist, and master George M. Nowell, only twelve years of age, will accompany his brother in several duets for piano and violin. This concert promises a feast of good things for music lovers, and the Temple should be crowded to its utmost capacity.

The Concord Monitor crawls through a smaller hole than usual in intimating that because we deny the statement that the Simmons affair caused the republican defeat in this State we ought to prefer the election of that chief of political humbugs, Henry L. Dawes, to the U. S. Senate,—a man whose speech in the House just before election afforded the democrats the only argument capable of doing damage in that campaign. That Concord chap's head must be very thick, judging by the stupidity he displays; and his intimation that we would not have said anything against Dawes had we known (as we did know) that Butler preferred him to some others, shows just what the Monitor's "independence" is worth and that its editor was brought up to follow "leaders" most submissively,—as we were not.

The Sunday School of the Court street Christian society will give another concert, this evening, which if as entertaining as previous ones should fill the house. The doors will open at 6.30; concert at 7.30. Admission ten cents.

Our exchanges speak in high terms of Mr. Burbank's readings. He certainly ranks high among new aspirants for fame, possessing a noticeable finish and feeling, while his pathetic and serio-comic efforts are particularly successful.

The charming melodies of the Jubilee Singers will doubtless attract a large audience, Sunday evening. It will be their first appearance here since Prof. Thompson went "moverin' aloug." The new leader, Mr. Bradley, has the class in fine training, and has made the best selections for the concert.

Capt. Jonathan Young on Tuesday assumed his duties as executive officer at the navy yard. It is reported that Commo. J. C. Howell will remain as commandant of the yard until next spring.

Wyzeman Marshall, Esq., of Boston, is engaged to play Damon with the Portsmouth Dramatic club in this and neighboring cities.

Rand & Co. have removed their Drive Store from No. 5 Market street to better accommodations under the Franklin House, where they have for sale a large stock of gentlemen's furnishing goods, German worsteds, millinery, etc.; they also have the agency for the "Domestic" sewing machine.

Among the most pleasing announcements of entertainments to come is that of the concert by the band from the Asylum for the Blind at Boston. Possessed of keen senses, the members of the band produce most exquisite music. As their programme largely consists of popular music, a large audience will doubtless attend. It will be unquestionably one of the most enjoyable concerts ever given here.

Rev. Daniel Austin is to present to the Jubilee Singers a pulpit, bible and hymn book for their new church.

A Young Bride Abducted.

A romantic marriage with an affecting denouement was consummated in Saratoga last week. It appears that on Thursday evening, on the arrival of the train from New York at the Saratoga depot, a lady and gentleman alighted and proceeded to the American Hotel, registering as Mr. Westcot and wife. Mr. Westcot is a native of Saratoga, and was several years ago one of the proprietors of the old Congress Hall Hotel. He is a gentleman of good address, about 50 years old, and has been for several years a widower. The bride is a beautiful young woman between 18 and 19 years of age. it is said, of high birth and good family. On Thursday the newly-married couple dined at the public table, but after this the lady did not appear in public. It is said that she passed the time in weeping and regretting her hasty marriage. On Friday night some young men of the village paid the married couple the compliment of a serenade. Mr. Westcot felt so pleased and flattered that he invited the party of serenaders into a saloon near by, and treated them very handsomely. The mysterious conduct of the bride occasioned but little gossip until Sunday, when a carriage stopped in front of the hotel. Presently four persons entered the hotel in an excited manner. One of them was an officer and another was a stranger. The party, without any ceremony, proceeded to the room in which sat the unhappy bride still grieving and weeping. On the door being opened, the bride rushed into the arms of her father, who, it appeared, had come to rescue her. She hurried on her bonnet and cloak, and entering the carriage, they were off for Albany before the husband had learned of the affair. When the bridegroom returned to the hotel and found his bride gone, he was quite protrasted. Later in the day he gave a Sun correspondent an account of the affair from the beginning. While in the city recently he advertised for a young lady to take charge of his little daughter. A lady replied in person, giving her name as Kate Bunting. She said she was attending a boarding school in Princeton, N. J. ; that her parents did not live happily together and were separated; that her mother lived in Bordentown, N. J.; and that her father was a broker and spent his whole time in New York; that her tuition at the Seminary was so much in arrears that she had been notified that unless it was paid, and at once, she must leave the institution; that her mother was not able to help her, and her father did not seem to be inclined to do so; that she did not know what she should do, and that seeing the advertisement, she responded to it. Having listened to this statement, Mr. Westcot said she was too respectable a girl to take a menial position, and he offered to marry her. She desired Mr. Westcot to give her a reference, and they drove to the store of a prominent merchant ; Mr. Westcot left the carriage, and the merchant and the young lady were left to converse together. On Mr. Westcot's return, she said she was satisfied as to his references, and that she would marry him. Whereupon they drove to the residence of the rector of the Church of St. Timothy and were married, received their marriage certificate, and left the presence of the minister as husband and wife, and had so lived together and acted toward each other until, Mr. Westcot claims, she was unlawfully stolen away from him.

A Butler County, Pa., "Claimant."

[Beaver Radical.]

John Fowler of Cherry Township, Butler County, Pa., went "away to the wars" in 1862. He was married when he left, and in addition to a wife he had three children. John was also the owner of a farm of one hundred acres, and had it well stocked besides. Some time after he entered into the service of his country he was taken prisoner by the rebels, and then the next news which reached his home was that he had died while in the hands of the enemy. His wife, or supposed widow, married a young man, only nineteen years of age, about five years ago, with whom she is now living on the farm. A few days ago the supposed lost soldier, John Fowler, returned, but looking quite different from what he did when he left. His wife, it is said, does not recognize him, or care to recognize him, while the neighbors say he is the veritable and real John Fowler who went to the war. After being about the neighborhood of his alleged old home for a few days he left, but before doing so gave notice of his intended return on the first of April to reclaim and repossess his farm. He does not make or intend to make any demand for his wife, but does for his farm, and, if so, we presume there will soon be some legal proceedings heard of. A singular fact about him is that he never wrote a letter or sent any word home, and as yet gives no very satisfactory account for his long absence. There are various suppositions, among them that he had become insane after being taken a prisoner and confined in some Insane Asylum in the South. But how this and other matters may be will yet have to come to light.

His wife married the second time in good faith and honestly believing him dead, and, it is said, bears a good character. We give the case as we have heard it, so far, and if the said returned John Fowler proves to be genuine and not an impostor, it will create rather an interesting state of affairs in his family. His wife drew a pension until her second marriage, but no administration was ever had on his estate, and the farm remains just as it was when he left.

—"What," exclaimed the fashionable Fitzwiggle to the exquisite Miss De La Sparrowgrass—"what would you be, dearest, if I should press the stamp of love upon those sealing-wax lips?" "I," responded the fairy-like creature, "should be—stationery!"

SCROFULA.

SCROFULOUS HUMORS.

If VEGETINE will relieve pain, cleanse, purify and cure such diseases, restoring the patient to perfect health after trying different physicians, many remedies, suffering for years, is it not conclusive proof, if you are a sufferer, you can be cured? Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood, in the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the Great Blood-Purifier. The great source of disease originates in the blood; and no medicine that does not act directly upon it, to purify and renovate, has any just claim upon public attention. When the blood becomes lifeless and stagnant, either from change of weather or climate, want of exercise, irregular diet, or from any other cause, the VEGETINE will renew the blood, carry off the putrid humors, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, and impart a tone of vigor to the whole body. The conviction is, in the public mind as well as in the medical profession, that the remedies supplied by the Vegetable Kingdom are more safe, more successful, in the cure of disease, than mineral medicines. VEGETINE is composed of roots, barks, and herbs. It is pleasant to take, and perfectly safe to give an infant. In Scrofula the VEGETINE has performed wonderful cures, where many other remedies have failed, as will be seen by the following unsolicited testimonial:

A Walking Miracle.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir:—Though a stranger I want to inform you what VEGETINE has done for me.

Last Christmas Scrofula made its appearance in my system—large running ulcers appearing on me as follows: One on each of my arms, one on my thigh, which extended to the seat, one on my head, which eat into the skull bone, one on my left leg, which became so bad that two physicians came to amputate the limb, though upon consultation concluded not to do so, as my whole body was so full of Scrofula they deemed it advisable to cut the sore, which was painful beyond description, and there was a quart of matter run from this one sore. The physicians all gave me up to die, and said they could do no more for me. Both of my legs were drawn up to my seat, and it was thought if I did get up again I would be a cripple for life.

When in this condition I saw VEGETINE advertised, and commenced taking it in March, and followed on with it, until I had used 16 bottles, and this morning I am going to plough corn, a well man. All my townsmen say it is a miracle to see me round walking and working.

In conclusion I will add, when I was enduring such great suffering, from that dreadful disease, Scrofula, I prayed to the Lord above to take me out of this world, but as VEGETINE has restored to me the blessings of health, I desire more than ever to live, that I may be of some purpose to my fellow man, and I know of no better way to aid suffering humanity, than to endorse yon this statement of my case, with an earnest hope that you will publish it, and it will afford me pleasure to reply to any communication which I may receive therefrom.

I am, Sir, very respectfully,

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever acquired a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY!

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION
CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulty.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

BEHOLD!
WILSON'S
SUPERPHOSPHATE
At Auction!
My plan of selling Superphosphate without consignment has proved so successful and has given such universal satisfaction to the Farmers, that I have decided to pursue a similar course this season, and shall make arrangements so that the Farmers in all the principal towns in New England can have an opportunity of purchasing some of my Superphosphates, either of the dealers or of my agents. I have none out on commission, and shall send none out in that way. No goods will be sent from the works until sold, and purchasers can thus rely on receiving fresh goods whenever they choose to buy. The experience that I have had in selling Superphosphate on commission, has taught me that the plan is not the right one. In many instances the goods are not properly taken care of, but often remain exposed to the weather, summer and winter, and the purchaser who buys from a lot which has thus lain through several seasons may (and perhaps justly) complain that the Fertilizer is not up to the standard, when in reality the goods were of extra quality at the time they left the Manufacturer, and would still have been had they been properly cared for. It is to avoid this and other abuses that I decline to commission my Superphosphate.
My Agent M. D. Lawrence will be at the following places at the time named, ready to receive orders, prices to be fixed by auction.
The only Fertilizer that has ever received a SILVER MEDAL from the N. E. AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

The Wheelwright Deed.

At a special meeting of the New England Historical Genealogical Society, held at the rooms on Somerset street, Boston, recently, Rev. N. Bouton, of Concord, read a very interesting historical address inquiring into what is known as the Wheelwright deed. This is an instrument bearing date at Squampscott, Exeter, May 17, 1629, purporting to be a conveyance on the part of four Indian sagamores, or chiefs, to John Wheelwright and four others, of a tract of land extending along the sea coast, bounded by the river of Piscataqua, from Salmon Falls, down this river and along the seashore to the middle of the Merrimac River at Newburyport, taking in the Isles of Shoals, up the river to Haverhill and twenty miles further northwest into the woods, thence across in a straight line northeast and southwest, striking the Salmon Falls river at or near Rochester. The deed purports to be witnessed by John Oldham and Samuel Sharpe, two English gentlemen, and by two Indian chiefs. The delivery and possession to Wheelwright was in the presence of six persons.

The first historical account of the deed, said the speaker, was by Dr. Belknap, in the first printed volume of his history of New Hampshire. It was also found in full in the provincial papers of New Hampshire. Its authenticity was denied by the late historian, John Lorimer, and more in detail by the late James Savage, but the question of its genuineness was still unsettled in many minds. It was therefore a question fairly within the province of historical inquiry; the more so, at the present time, when it was in the files of the superior court of New Hampshire, and on record in the recorder's office. He wished them to take notice at the outset that after the introduction of the Wheelwright deed early in May, 1629, nothing more was heard of it till August, 1707. The question was whether that deed was true and authentic or a forgery.

First he made an examination of the instrument itself. It was dated May 17, 1629. This was the starting-point. If the date was true, then other true and undisputed dates of official documents and events would compare harmoniously; if otherwise, all would be discordant and contradictory. It was noticeable that the deed antedated the several grants of land held or improved by those who were said to be witnesses to the delivery and possession of that to Wheelwright. It antedated by more than a year the actual settlement in the Massachusetts Bay. Therefore the question was instinctively asked how it was possible for an instrument that spoke of the settlement in Massachusetts Bay, as already existing, to be consistent with truth and reality? If it was said that its language did not require so strict an interpretation, but that it might refer only to the groups of settlers along the Massachusetts coast, the obvious answer was, that those settlements were always spoken of by their separate names.

Secondly, the deed purported to have been signed in the presence of John Oldham and Samuel Sharpe, on the 17th of May, 1629. There was positive proof that just one month before that time Oldham was in England. The average passage of a vessel in those days to America was eight weeks. There was also positive proof that Sharpe did not arrive in this country till the 29th of June, 1629. Therefore, as respected those two witnesses, the deed was a forgery.

Third—it purported to have been delivered to Wheelwright on said day in presence of Walter Neale, governor, and George Vaughan, factor, and Ambrose Gibbens, trader, for the company of Laconia. But the grant for the company of Laconia was not even obtained till six months after, and Walter Neale did not come over as governor till the summer of next year, 1630. Ambrose Gibbens did not reach Piscataquack till at least July, 1630, and George Vaughan, the trader, came next year. The instrument further said that the other witnesses to the delivery of the deed were Richard Vines, governor, and Richard Bonithon, assistant of the plantation of Saweo, Thomas Wiggin, agent, and Edward Hilton, steward of the plantation at Hilton's Point. In regard to Richard Vines, the actual grant of Saweo to him was not made till February 12, 1630, and he was in no sense made governor till September, 1630. As to Edward Hilton, all that was necessary to be said was that he could not have signed officially before his patent was obtained, which was March 12, 1630, and the delivery thereof in July, 1631: and if he signed at all, he signed away to Wheelwright all the lands which he had several years before been cultivating—all the lands which his patent afterward covered.

Fourth, the deed purported to have been delivered to John Wheelwright in person, late of England and then of Massachusetts Bay. But John Wheelwright never was heard of in this country, till he arrived in Boston May 23, 1636. There was no Massachusetts Bay Company or settlement in this country in May 17, 1629. The full force of the objection that he came over before 1636 did not lie in the absolute impracticability of the thing, but chiefly in the pretence that he came then as a member of the "Massachusetts Bay." But the deed further purported that all of Wheelwright's associate grantees were then of Massachusetts Bay. Not one of them could be found in the country at that time. Then, again, it purported that the Indian sagamores in 1629 were inclined to have the English inhabit amongst them. The chief of all kept himself cautiously aloof from the English at least fourteen years after the settlement in Massachusettes Bay,—making his submission in 1644.

In this connection there came in another item of some importance,—"What did Mr. Wheelwright pay the Indian sagamores for 1,044,000 acres of their land?" The deed said it was a competent valuation in goods already received, in coats, shirts and victuals or kettles. He had some curiosity to know how Mr. Wheelwright could have obtained these articles and how he got them there. Taking into consideration the supposed or supposable circumstances in which he made the trade, there was an inherent improbability, not to say impossibility, that he should make payment in that sort of goods and acceptably to the Indians. But there was another objection; that was, the moral anachronism found in it. The meeting for trade and speculation in Indian lands, on the 17th of May, 1629, with and by a minister of the Gospel, turned out to be on the Sabbath, a day held sacred by all the Puritans, and by none more so than by those of Massachusetts Bay.

This he called a moral anachronism. It was a libel on the fair name and character of Rev. John Wheelwright, a direct contradiction of what was known of him. Such a trade with the Indians on such a day was inconsistent with his known Christian and ministerial character. His [Mr. Bouton's] theory was that it was necessary to fix some day for a general meeting. In doing this the framers of the instrument forgot to look into the almanac, and pitched upon a date at random. The fact that it happened to fall on the Sabbath was therefore self-evidence of the falsity of the deed. Allied to this was another anachronism which made Rev. John Wheelwright false to his word as given in his contract. Again it was admitted on all sides that in April, 1638, he made a bona fide purchase of a large tract of land about Squamscott: That was to say, if the deed of May 17, 1629, was true, then he bought and paid a second time for land every acre of which he already owned.

The speaker discovered also in the deed what he might call an anachronism of usage and forms. Of the two actual and true Indian deeds which passed to Wheelwright in his purchases April 3, 1638, one consisted of sixteen lines and the other of seventeen lines, on a printed octavo page. These, in simple words and form, were fair specimens of all the early deeds of that period; but the pretended deed of May, 1629, occupied four octavo pages, 142 lines, drawn up in all the technical precision and forms of law, in seeming imitation of a royal grant or patent from the company in Plymouth. It was like conversing in classic language and courtly style with babes; the dialect of the schools with savages. It was unnatural. Its speech betrayed it. If it was asked who drew up the instrument, he could not say. It was not, in his opinion, the work of one head, if it was of one hand. He would ask and demand why the deed, if it was genuine and valid, was not heard of till so long after it purported to be drawn? Why did not Mr. Wheelwright produce it in his purchase of the Indians in 1638? Where was it during the twenty years in which the case was pending? Why did not Mr. Chief Justice Waldren put it into the hands of the attorneys and tell them there was the basis of his claim? But no, this was reserved to the last moment, to the final trial in 1707. In closing he wished to add that the facts adduced relieved Mr. Wheelwright of all complicity with the fraudulent transaction.

A short discussion followed the reading of the paper, in which all agreed that there was no doubt but that the deed was a forgery. A vote of thanks was returned to Mr. Bouton for the paper, and the meeting adjourned.

Railroad Matters.

The annual meeting of the Maine Central Railroad, on the 25th, was the largest ever held in New England, it being understood that a contest would ensue between the Eastern and Boston & Maine interests for supremacy. Before the election came off, however, a compromise was made, and the vote for Directors, over 30,000, shows that five-sixths of the stock was represented. Messrs. Wooldredge, Lothrop, Morrill and Frank Jones, Directors of the Eastern, were chosen Directors of the Maine Central with nine others. Mr. Morrill was re-elected President, and the meeting voted nearly unanimously to ratify the contract leasing the road to the Eastern. It is said this result will close the antagonism between the Boston & Maine and Eastern. The Maine Central earned for its stock-holders, last year, $737,576.34, an increase over 1872 of $120,738.44.

The Eastern Railroad by its contract with the Portland and Ogdensburg Railroad does not indorse its bonds or take any burden for the completion of the road. It is simply a traffic contract by which the Portland and Ogdensburg road guarantees to send its Boston freight by the Eastern road, and that in turn agrees to set aside a certain percentage of profits derived from the freight so sent for the payment of the coupons of the former corporation, taking its first mortgage bonds in pay.

The death of Mr. Sumner leaves Mr. Chandler, of Michigan, the senior Senator in continuous service. Mr. Chandler's term began on the 4th of March, 1857, and he has completed seventeen years' service. Next after Mr. Chandler is Mr. Anthony, of Rhode Island, who entered the Senate in 1859, and next after him are Messrs. Sherman, of Ohio, and Howe, of Wisconsin, who became Senators in 1861.

On the second ballot Hoar fell off one vote, Adams and Whittier gained one each, and Verry was left out in the cold.

The Plantation of Jeff Davis.

[Cor. Detroit Free Press.]

We approach the banana zone space. All day we have wound our slow way along the swollen river, between low banks covered with forests of cottonwood, cypress and live oak, heavily draped with Spanish moss—dark, funereal. At intervals among the trees, relieving their gray dreariness with its pale greenness of stem and foliage, grow dense patches of cane, and at others large clearings ridged by the plow with lines running transversely to the river's course, slope away from the river into the dreary woods—cotton plantations. All the houses faced the river, at a little distance, and near them stood rows of little brown cottages—negro quarters. There are no shade trees, or but few, and all looks neglected and "shiftless." Few of these places are in the possession of original owners—or rather those who owned them before the war—and many of them are carried on by negroes either as lessees, owners or stewards. The glamour has fallen from my eyes, cast there by what has been written concerning the planter's life.

The ravages of the river are a continual astonishment to me. Everywhere I see the broken ends of levees terminating at the river bank, which when built was parallel to the stream and at a considerable distance from it. Gen. Taylor's plantation is partly washed away—the house itself has gone down the river. A "cut off" across Jeff. Davis' plantation has carried away hundreds of acres, apparently, and left house and quarters far inland, their rear to the stream.

Natchez is the pleasantest town I have seen for many a day. Before the war it was, by reason of its beautiful and healthy site, a favorite place of residence for the wealthy planters of a long stretch of the river. The Chickasaw bluffs at that point came fully out of the river, and at a considerable height, perhaps 200 feet. A "dugway" climbs sidewise up the bluff, and at the top the city stands overlooking the country for many miles in every direction. Natchez was settled many years ago, and has many of the characteristics of many of the old towns in Pennsylvania. The houses generally open directly upon the walk. The streets are narrow, the sidewalks well flagged with brick, banked by square, deep bricked gutters, between which and the roadway stand rows of handsome old shade trees. About those houses which have any grounds attached I observed daffodils, violets and hyacinths in bloom, and the roadway was bordered with myrtle blossoms. I saw no carriages in the quiet old streets save an occasional phaeton, carrying generally two ladies and a servant, or sometimes a gentleman friend in the "dicky." But saddle exercise is universal in all the South, so far as I have seen it, with both sexes.

Baton Rouge, lately the capital of Louisiana, is another sleepy old town, with low, one-story frame cottages buried in orange and magnolia trees, and with grass-grown streets. The old State House—a stately, white, sham-marble building in handsome but now neglected grounds—stands desolate, overlooking the river. Its walls only remain, the front pitted with marks of shot which it received from federal guns while the rebels yet held the town. It was gutted by fire, by accident and by design, after the federal forces occupied the town.

From Baton Rouge down, the character of the country, or more correctly, of the improvements, shows a marked change. "The coast," as this range of the river is called, is all sugar plantations, and here I find what I have been looking for—large, handsome residences, green lawns, beautiful shade trees, neat whitewashed "quarters," generally hidden from the houses by thickets of trees, and a general aspect of comfort and elegance. On each plantation is a brick sugar mill. These plantations, like the cotton lands, have largely passed into new hands.

A Terrible Situation.

[Scribner's for April.]

The following passage from Jules Verne's new wonder-book, "The Mysterious Island," now appearing serially in Scribner's Monthly, gives no idea of the apparently hopeless plight in which this author delights in placing his heroes:

A terrible situation, that of these unfortunates! They are evidently no longer masters of the balloon. Their endeavors were fruitless; the envelope of the air-ship decreases more and more. The fluid escaped without any possibility of retaining it. The descent was visibly accelerated, and, an hour after noon, the car was suspended not more than six hundred feet above the ocean.

It was, in fact, impossible to prevent the flight of the gas, which escaped freely through a large rent in the sack of the balloon.

By lightening the car of all the objects which it contained, the passengers had been able to prolong their suspension in the air for some hours. But the inevitable catastrophe could only be delayed, and if some land did not disclose itself ere nightfall, passengers, car and balloon would have finally disappeared beneath the waves.

The only manœuvre still left to perform was accomplished at that moment. The balloon passengers were evidently energetic people, who knew how to look death in the face. Not a single murmur had been heard to escape from their lips. The car was only a kind of wicker case, unfit to float, and there was no possibility of maintaining it on the surface of the sea, if it fell there.

At two o'clock the balloon was scarcely two hundred feet above the water.

At that moment, a manly voice, that one whose heart was inaccessible to fear, made itself heard. To that voice responded no less energetic voices.

"Is everything thrown out?"

"No; there is still ten thousand francs in gold."

A heavy sack fell at the same instant into the sea.

"Is the balloon rising again?"

"A little, but it will be long in falling back."

"What is there left to throw away?"

"Nothing."

"But there is! The car!"

"Let us cling to the net, and into the sea with the car!"

It was indeed the last only means of lightening the air-ship. The cords which held the car were cut, and after its fall the balloon ascended two thousand feet.

The five passengers hoisted themselves into the net, above the ring, and supported themselves in the labyrinth of meshes, looking down into the abyss.

Every one knows with what static sensibility balloons are endowed. To throw out the lightest object is sufficient to provoke a toppling from a vertical line. The apparatus, floating in the air, is like a bulance, of mathematical precision. One comprehends then, how when it is lightened of a relatively considerable weight, the toppling will be abrupt and important. That is what happened on this occasion.

But, after having poised itself an instant in the upper zones, the balloon began to redescend. The gas continued escaping from the rent, which it was impossible to repair.

The passengers had done all that they could. Henceforth no human means could save them. They had nothing more save the aid of God to count on.

At four o'clock, the balloon was only five hundred feet above the surface of waves.

A sonorous barking was heard. A dog accompanied the passengers, and held himself imbedded near his master in the meshes of the net.

"Top says something!" cried one of the passengers.

Then, at the same instant a strong voice was heard.

The Fire-Escape Dog.

There is a noble band of heroic men in London, who have charge of the fire escapes. Samuel Wood, one of the bravest of these brave men, has saved nearly one hundred men, women and children from the flames. Much of Wood's success, however, is justly due to his wonderful little dog "Bill," around whose neck the parishioners of Whitechapel have placed a silver collar, in token of his valuable services during the nine years that he has filled the important post of "Fire-escape Dog." "Bill," like his master, has to be very wakeful, and at his post of duty during the whole of the night, and therefore he sleeps during the day close to his master's bed. He never attempts to run out of doors until the hour approaches for them to go to the station. "Bill" does not allow his master to sleep too long. He is sure to wake him if he is likely to be late. How the dog knows the time is a puzzle, but know it he does. When the fire-escape is wheeled out from the Whitechapel churchyard, at 9 o'clock, "Bill" is promptly at his post. When an alarm of fire is heard, "Bill," who is at other times very quiet, now begins to bark most furiously. Wood has no occasion to sound his rattle, for the policemen all around know "Bill's" bark so well that they at once come to render their invaluable help. If the alarm of fire takes place when but few people are in the streets, "Bill" runs around to the coffee houses near, and pushing open the doors, gives his well-known bark, as much as to say, "Come and help, men; come and help." He has not to bark in vain; his call is cheerfully obeyed. In dark nights the lantern has to be lit, when "Bill" at once seizes hold of it, and like a herald runs on before his master. When the ladder is erected "Bill" is at the top before his active master has reached half-way. He jumps into the rooms, and amid thick smoke and the approaching flames runs from room to room, helping his master to find out the poor inmates. On one occasion the fire burned so rapidly, and the smoke became so dense that Wood and another man were unable to find their way out. They feared that escape was now hopeless. "Bill" seemed at once to comprehend the danger in which his kind master was placed, and the faithful creature began to bark. Half suffocated, Wood and his comrade, knowing this to be the signal, "follow me," at once crawled after "Bill," and in a very few minutes they were providentially led to the window, and their lives were saved.

Ask Them!

An advertisement of a medicine, however candid and conscientious it may be, does not always carry conviction with it. The public have to their sorrow that the boastful claims put forth in behalf of many so-called remedies are literally "a delusion and a snare." Probably the best use, therefore, that can be made of the space devoted to this notice of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is to invite those who read it to inquire of the parties who have tested the curative and preventive properties of the article what they think of it. We earnestly request all doubters to ascertain from such of their friends and neighbors as have taken this standard tonic and alterative as a protection against malarious diseases, or as a cure for indigestion, liver complaint, constipation, rheumatism, nervous debility, headache, low spirits, languor, billiousness, &c., what Hostetter's Bitters has done for them. There is no testimony so trustworthy as that which is the result of personal experience.

Victims of Obscure Diseases, seeking safety and restored health, should use Dr. Helmbold's Extract Buchu. This article is official and standard. It is, moreover, the only preparation that develops the full value of Buchu as a diuretic. It is a perfect specif ic for all diseases of the urinary organs in male or female. Beware of counterfeits and imitations, which unscrupulous men are endeavoring to palm off upon Dr. Helmbold's reputation. Look out for the doctor's signature on the wrapper. For sale by all druggists.

ANAKESIS is without doubt, the most infallible easy and scientific cure for PILES, ever discovered. 20,000 grateful patients attest its virtues, and physicians of all schools endorse it unequivocally. Lotions, ointments, and electuaries are only a waste of time and money. ANAKESIS relieves pain at once and cures absolutely. It is the discovery of DR. SILSBEE, a scientific physician, and has been pronounced the greatest contribution to medicine of the age. Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. Depot 46 Walker St., New York.

NOW but a physician knows how much a reliable alterative is needed by the people. On all sides of us, in all communities everywhere, there are multitudes who suffer from complaints that nothing but an alterative cures.—Hence a great many of them have been made and put abroad with the assurance of being effectual. But they fail to accomplish the cures they promise, because they have not the intrinsic virtues they claim. In this state of the case, DR. J. C. AYER & CO., of Lowell, have supplied a COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPARILLA, which proves to be the long-desired remedy. Its peculiar difference from other kindred preparations in the market is that it cures the diseases for which it is recommended, while they do not. We are assured of this fact by more than one intelligent physician in this neighborhood, and have the further evidence of our own experience of its truth.—[Nashville (Tenn.) Farmer.]

White Veal.

Messrs. Editors: I noticed in your paper a few days ago, an article from the Secretary of the S. P. C. A., calling the attention of the public to the sale of white veal, leading consumers to believe that in this, our local market, the kind of veal alluded to is exposed for sale. The paragraph does great injustice to the butchers and retailers in this city, because if such an inference is drawn it is wholly incorrect. There may be instances of killing calves in the manner alluded to, in some of our large city markets, but such a thing is not done in this city, and we simply desire to set the people right in the matter, by assuring them that all veal meat sold in this market is properly killed and dressed, and therefore safe to eat. BUTCHER.

[Note. Years ago the barbarously cruel practice of "bleeding" calves before killing them, to make the meat white, was not unknown in this city, we having ourselves seen the poor creatures staggering and falling from weakness thus induced, when we were of a suitable age to "hook Jack" from school and visit the depots and slaughter-houses for fun; but we have not heard of anything of the kind being done of late years, and hope that the present butchers of the city are too humane to inflict unnecessary torture on any animal.—Ed. Chron.]

Laconics.

Among the impersonations this evening by Mr. Burbank will be "Rip Van Winkle," which is highly spoken of by our exchanges. We hope he will receive the encouragement his entertainment will merit; as in that case the Temple will be filled, if we may judge from what is said of his abilities by the press of other places and the people who witnessed his Parlor Entertainment at the Rockingham House a few weeks ago. See advertisement.

The house of Col. Peirce, recently burned at Greenland, was the residence of Capt. Champernowne, 200 years ago.

C. Coffin Harris, Esq., formerly of this city, has been appointed Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the Sandwich Islands.

A buggy containing two young men was capsized and smashed to pieces on the corner of Atkinson and Court streets, Thursday, through bad steering. The men and horse escaped unhurt, but the carriage was completely demolished.

Chas. H. Hayes and A. J. Norton, of Greenland, arrived home from Clinton County, New York, on Wednesday, with sixty choice milch cows, fifty of which are for sale. Ten pure bred Ayrshires (raised by Dawes & Co. of Montreal) will be retained by Mr. Hayes as the nucleus of a herd to replace that burned last May.

Mr. Ulysses D. Tenney, the celebrated portrait painter, returned to this city from a three week's absence in New Haven, on Thursday evening.

One is Enough.

[Dover Democrat.]

The Masquerade Ball last night at the City Hall was very far from being what we would call a success, and while it is generally customary for the Press to draw the veil of charity over all honest, accidental failures, yet as a faithful chronicler of all the events transpiring in our city we do not feel that it would be just to withhold our criticism from such an ill-conceived and conducted an affair, as last night's Masquerade. The costuming was a poor farce. The order that was kept did not come up to the general expectations. In one part of the room several persons dressed in character as negroes, played ball with a large turnip, which somewhat would fall among the dancers, and the players would rush among them to obtain it. Some played at football with their clown's hats, kicking them into the circle of dancers, interrupting and annoying them again and again. Taken as a whole, we must express our unqualified condemnation of this Masquerade, and will conclude this criticism by using the term we have heard a dozen use in describing it —viz: silly.

A New Story of Lincoln.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette writes to that paper as follows:

Whether or not the following anecdote has been published I do not know, but it is worthy of wide circulation, and I tell it to you as it was told to me.

Soon after the issues of the late war had been raised, and the Secretary of the Treasury had made an issue on the subject of raising the wind which should blow the storm over—and our subsequent happy issue safe and sound justified the wisdom of the blow—there appeared in an illustrated paper a cartoon representing Mr. Chase as feeding gold to a United States goose that naturally laid greenbacks for goosebills.

It was a great crisis in the life of the nation, and the great Secretary was keenly watching the pulse in the right arm of the body politic; therefore, he might well be apprehensive of any depressing influences at such a time. He went straight to the President with the paper, and denounced the lampoon as destructive of our credit, in every point of view reprehensible, deserving of prompt and condign punishment, and added with excited emphasis, "I would myself give a thousand dollars to make an example of its author!" Beaming upon the Secretary an indescribable look of mingled humor, sagacity, wisdom and esteem, Mr. Lincoln gently said: "From which end would you pay, Chase?"

—It has been decided in Delaware that a man is not necessarily drunk because he tries to unlock the front door at midnight with the butt end of his tobacco box.

—The Chicago Times, after noticing the report that physical exhaustion, following a forty-eight-hour session at draw-poker, hastened the death of Police Commissioner "Hank" Smith, of New York city, earnestly appeals to some Chicago patriot to inveigle the heads of the Chicago police into a quiet game.

A True Story.

[Sonora (Cal.) Democrat.]

There is a deep gorge just north of Geyser Peak known as Devil's Canon. The Hog's Back range is its southern boundary and a high mountain separating Big Sulphur Creek from the canon forms its northern wall. The stream which runs through the Gorge tumbles over a rocky bed of boulders hurled in wild disorder from the adjacent mountains. Little Sulphur Creek comes in from the southeast, sweeps around the foot of Geyser Mountain, forming a half circle, and is joined by the water from Devil's Canon. In the fork of the two streams rises Geyser Peak, 3,470 feet above the sea-level, a bold landmark, familiar to all residents of this and Russian River Valley. The old Foss trail to the Geyser Spring wound round its crest, from which thousands of travelers from all parts of the world have looked down into the gloomy depths of Devil's Canon, the scene of the adventure we are about to relate.

Years ago, when Santa Rosa was a scattering hamlet, when only here and there a fence obstructed travel in any direction over the broad untilled plains, a well-known pioneer citizen, still a resident of this township, started to visit a sheep ranch on Big Sulphur Creek, just beyond the section first described. He was dressed in the half-Spanish, half-American style peculiar to the ranchero of that day. His horse was little, muscular, and high-spirited, comparisoned after the California style—a headstall of hair ornamented with colored tassels, a bridle with heavily-plated Spanish bit fastenings. About the horn of the saddle was coiled a rawhide riata. Leaving the site of the present town of Healdsburg, the rider took an obscure trail leading northeasterly in the direction of his sheep camp, which he expected to reach before sundown. The trail led over spur after spur jutting out from the main range of the Mayacamas mountains. Before the traveller realized the fact, the lofty hills above and around him were clothed in the purple hues of a midsummer sunset. When winding around the narrow trail on the eastern face of Geyser Peak, the sun sank beneath the horizon. The canon beneath him looked dark and uninviting—wedge-shape, like a valley turned edgewise in the hills. Between him and his destination, Devil's Canon and the ridge dividing it from Big Sulphur Creek still intervened.

He commenced the descent on a trail not followed without care even by the broad light of the sun. Urging his horse he was soon amid a grove of lofty pines, whose crests, first below the level of the vision, soon after formed a dark bulwark behind him. He reached and crossed safely the rocky bed of the stream, and commenced to ascend the opposite side, which was precipitous and bare. It was now quite dark; He trusted solely to the instinct of his horse, which struggled up the steep ascent, sure-footed and strong of wind. His dog, a constant companion, kept close beside him. After some time he reached a place which afforded sufficient standing-room to rest his jaded horse. Supposing he was near the summit, he forced the horse, which manifested a strong disposition to go in a contrary direction, along a way which seemed to the rider smoother and more direct. Passing over the level space he perceived they had commenced to descend, and supposed that he had crossed the summit of the ridge, when he felt that his horse was slipping; its fore feet were extended and haunches down. Faster and faster they went! Realizing the danger as they came beneath the branches of a stunted oak, the rider sprang from the saddle, holding in his hand the riata, to which he clung with the instinct of despair; one end was about the horse's neck, and the slight caught round the oak on the opposite side of which the rider had fallen. Hand [illegible] over hand, by the stout raw-hide, he climbed up the steep ascent and grasped the tree. The riata, relieved of its heavy strain, rattled around it; there was a thumping sound as the horse endeavored to hold his footing, a crash and breaking of brush, a wild, half-human shriek, an instinct of appalling stillness, and then a crushing thud! Terrified at his narrow escape, the traveller remained he knows not how long, clinging to the friendly oak, cold beads of sweat rolling down his forehead. He groped his way up the hill, clinging to the undergrowth, cutting, as occasion required, a foot-hold with his knife, reaching the summit in safety. The light of a waning moon, which rose above the horizon, enabled him to find his way down the mountain to Big Sulphur Creek, which he followed up to his sheep camp, located near the place where the Cloverdale and Geyser Springs toll house now stands. Next morning he returned to the scene of his frightful adventure, and found where he had left the trail and turned in the direction of the precipice. Below the stunted but firmly rooted oak a track was broken through the chapparal. Descending the base of the precipice he found, wedged in the jaws of Devil's Canon, the body of his gallant steed crushed to a jelly! The dog had found and apparently remained beside the dead horse through the night. With a mingled expression of pity and pleasure, it crouched and fawned about the feet of its master.

—Says the Chicago Times: Mrs. De Geer has indited a letter to the peculiar mayor of this summer-ridden city, in which she says: "Mayor Colvin, I love your soul in Christ." Mrs. De Geer is evidently mistaken in the locality. Mayor Colvin's soul, if he has a soul, is situated elsewhere.

—A fat French lady says, "I am so fat that I pray for a disappointment to make me thin. No sooner does the disappointment come than the mere expectation of growing thinner gives me such joy that I become fatter than ever."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY. DROPSY AND RUMORS,

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures a thousand ills, simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

SCROFULA.

SCROFULOUS HUMORS.

IF VEGETINE will relieve pain, diseases, purify and cure such diseases, restoring the patient to perfect health after trying different physicians, many remedies, suffering for years, is it not conclusive proof, if you are a sufferer, you can be cured? Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood, in the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the Great Blood-Purifier. The great source of disease originates in the blood; and no medicine that does not act directly upon it, to purify and renovate, has any just claim upon public attention. When the blood becomes lifeless and stagnant, either from change of weather or climate, want of exercise, irregular diet, or from any other cause, the VEGETINE will renew the blood, carry off the putrid humors, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, and impart a tone of vigor to the whole body. The conviction is, in the public mind as well as in the medical profession, that the remedies supplied by the Vegetable Kingdom are more safe, more successful, in the cure of disease, than mineral medicines. VEGETINE is composed of roots, barks, and herbs. It is pleasant to take, and perfectly safe to give an infant. In Scrofula the VEGETINE has performed wonderful cures, where many other remedies have failed, as will be seen by the following unsolicited testimonial:

A Walking Miracle.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir:—Though a stranger I want to inform you what VEGETINE has done for me.

Last Christmas Scrofula made its appearance in my system—large running ulcers appearing on me as follows: One on each of my arms, one on my thigh, which extended to the seat, one on my head, which eat into the skull bone, one on my left leg, which became so bad that two physicians came to amputate the limb, though upon consultation concluded not to do so, as my whole body was so full of Scrofula they deemed it advisable to cut the sore, which was painful beyond description, and there was a quart of matter run from this one sore. The physicians all gave me up to die, and said they could do no more for me. Both of my legs were drawn up to my seat, and it was thought if I did get up again I would be a cripple for life.

When in this condition I saw VEGETINE advertised, and commenced taking it in March, and followed on with it, until I had used 16 bottles, and this morning I am going to plough corn, a well man. All my townsmen say it is a miracle to see me round walking and working.

In conclusion I will add, when I was enduring such great suffering, from that dreadful disease, Scrofula, I prayed to the Lord above to take me out of this world, but as VEGETINE has restored to me the blessings of health, I desire more than ever to live, that I may be of some purpose to my fellow man, and I know of no better way to aid suffering humanity, than to endorse you this statement of my case, with an earnest hope that you will publish it, and it will afford me pleasure to reply to any communication which I may receive therefrom.

I am, Sir, very respectfully,
WILLIAM PAYN

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

SUPERPHOSPHATE

At Auction!

My sales of selling Superphosphate without consignment has proved so successful and has given such universal satisfaction to the Farmers, that I have decided to pursue a similar course this season, and shall make arrangements so that the Farmers in all the principal towns in New England can have an opportunity of purchasing some of my Superphosphates, either of the dealers or of my agents. I have none out on commission, and shall send none out in that way. No goods will be sent from the works until sold, and purchasers can thus rely on receiving fresh goods whenever they choose to buy. The experience that I have had in selling Superphosphate on commission, has taught me that the plan is not the right one. In many instances the goods are not properly taken care of, but often remain exposed to the weather, summer and winter, and the purchaser who buys from a lot which has thus lain through several seasons may (and perhaps justly) complain that the Fertilizer is not up to the standard, when in reality the goods were of extra quality at the time they left the Manufacturer, and would still have been had they been properly cared for. It is to avoid this and other abuses that I decline to commission any Superphosphate.

My Agent M. D. Lawrence will be at the following places at the time named, ready to receive orders, price to be fixed by auction.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,

For all the Purposes of a Family Physic

Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Flatulence, Dizziness and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood,

are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

Daily Chronicle.

Love in a Pullman Car.

Among the pleasantest things in an itinerant Bohemian life I count the perpetual meeting at most unexpected places of people whom you have known before in widely different localities. An hour ago my friend and I started for a stroll on this matchless Galveston beach. All the afternoon we had sat on the upper gallery, watching the long, low surf-crests that crept so slowly and surely landward; all the afternoon we had listened, in the pauses of our light chattering, to the ceaseless refrain which those same white-capped waves were chanting, till the beauty of the scene and the siren song tempted us down to the shore. Oh, it was lovely, sauntering thither over the oleander-planted walks, breathing their rich, exquisite perfume and gathering handfuls of the pink blossoms. A few carriages had come for the regular sunset drive; some German women were gathering shells; a few children, with bare, dimpled feet, were wading out into the coming waves, to run back with screams of laughter when some swifter billow washed up higher than the rest; and over the whole picture there rested the mellow glow reflected from the crimsoned west.

The occupants of the carriages raised their eyebrows in polite amazement as they rolled past us, for a pleasure walk was beyond their comprehension; and my friend laughed, telling me that she always knew Northern visitors because they loved to wander a pied, and Texans never do.

"I'm sure they regard me as mildly insane for my long walks; but, see, this time we have companions in our madness," she continued, pointing to a pair who were standing a little distance beyond.

"Evidently a bride and groom," I asserted, for

"Both were young and one was fair," and there were the usual unmistakable symptoms of recent ownership quite apparent in the air of the young man, who just then folded the lady's wrap more closely, and caught her fluttering veil till she had fastened it securely; and in the act she turned her face toward us, startling me with its familiar look.

"Isn't she beautiful?" said my friend.

I answered her absently, since I was hunting every nook in my memory for the counterpart of the fair girl before us. I was sure I had known her—but where?

An impertinent wave came hurrying up the beach, and in a moment the bride's dainty boots would have suffered, but my lord clasped her swiftly, and raising her rain back a few steps, coming close to us. I knew then where I had seen the happy pair, but I went very soberly toward them, only quietly saying:

"So this is what came of that journey?"

"By Jove!" ejaculated my hero in round English tones, seizing both my hands in a grip that nearly crushed them, while the bride blushed, laughed, and added her graceful greeting.

Wasn't it an odd encounter? I last saw those young people at Cheyenne in September, 1873; now they met strolling on the shore of the Gulf, and my friend asserted that we had picked up something better than shells this time, for she demanded the story at once; and I will tell it to you just as I told it to her.

On Friday, September 12, 1873—I like to be accurate—the San Francisco train stood on the track at Omaha waiting the arrival, from the opposite side of the Missouri, of Eastern passengers. There were four Pullman cars attached; three were already filled, or engaged by telegram, and the officials in charge were grumbling because "Boss Tweed" and his party occupied six entire sections. The "Boss" stayed closely in his compartment, for Nast had made his face so perfectly familiar to every one that he encountered more staring than he liked. His daughter, a stately, dignified lady, waited the start with evident impatience, while the young gentlemen—his sons and their friends—stood in a group on the platform, smoking, apparently enjoying the curious looks which were naturally levelled at them. They were bound for the Yosemite, and I have always marvelled that, when once so far away from Gotham, the "Boss" didn't know enough to sail for Hong Kong and stay there; but that "marvel" is not essential to my story.

We were picking away at lunches, eating California grapes, and doing the hundred listless things one always does while merely "waiting," till the scream of the approaching "transfer train" sounded shrilly out, and we looked with interest at the new passengers. Some of them deserved our regards; others didn't but we watched them all, mentally summing up each particular case, and utterly ignoring them thereafter, or else resolving to win their friendship.

The first group comprised a man, his little, inefficient, washed-out looking wife, a strong-minded nurse, and two children, destined to be our torments.

Next came a widow and her daughter; the daughter wore glasses and was a goose; the mother, only paying for a single berth, grumbled and fretted most impolitely when the other seat and berth of the section was assigned to a tall, spirited-looking English girl, with whose splendid eyes and queenly ways I fell directly and deeply in love. But, dear friends, don't jump at conclusions, for she isn't my heroine of the beach.

Listening to the ill-bred matron, I hardly noticed a bevy of young girls who had entered at the rear door, or two dreadfully bridish brides and their spouses who had likewise claimed their places. My English beauty utterly disgusted with her vis-a-vis asked for a place in my section during the day, and we became so delightfully confidential in ten minutes that I learned she was from Nova Scotia; that this was the eleventh day of her journey, and that her destination was Sacramento; while the merry-faced, handsome young man whom she ordered about with such supreme nonchalance was her brother.

Meantime, we heard from the rear section peals of merry laughter; the aforesaid infants gave us peal on peal of dreadful yells, and we took dishonorable peeps in the tell-tale mirrors to watch the "spooning" of the brides. Our handsome young man roamed up and down, and finally, with a wicked mischievous face, came to his sister, suggesting that she should go and watch the view from the end of the car. I knew his motive, so I went too; but he made nothing that time, for his sister never even glanced at the pretty girls we passed. We looked from the platform a few minutes; our hero stood twisting his moustache with vexation, till, growing desperate, he remarked:

"Say, Madge! That girl with the dark eyes is stunning, isn't she? I wish you would make her acquaintance."

"Indeed! That's the view you admired, was it? Well, sir, I shall do nothing of the kind. I have no vocation for 'stunning' girls. Come, Mrs. D., let's go back!"

Evidently used to such snubbing, Tom—that wasn't his name, but we'll play it was—made a mocking salute, and retorted, laughing:

"Well, madam, I'm quite equal to helping myself. You just wait till you want to know some 'stunning' fellow!"

Madge only gave him a look of supreme contempt and walked off, tossing over her shoulder a command to fetch the hamper, for she was hungry, and no supper could be had till we reached Grand Island; then, turning to me, she said with an exceedingly ancient air, "Positively, that boy is too ridiculous! He gets silly over these American girls all the time; but I won't help him!"

"That boy!" I repeated with intense amusement; for the delinquent stood six feet high, and was evidently older than his monitress, who lectured him in the gravest fashion all the while we were nibbling at the contents of that never-to-be-forgotten hamper. It reminded me of the famous one which Mr. Wardle carried to the races, and I think we enjoyed it as much as Mr. Pickwick and his friends enjoyed their al fresco lunch, though the sleepy fat boy was not in attendance.

The usual funny scenes occurred during the stowing away process at night; but the long hours passed swiftly, and the "infants" greeted the morning with sundry howls of misery and fretfulness, which waked us all too soon. It was droll enough to see the way in which everybody peeped from their sections to investigate the "reason why," and then, having viewed the situation, each suddenly discovered all the other curious heads, and disappeared. The lamenting wail was from the stout lungs of a four-year-old boy this time. His mother, arranging her toilet placidly, paid no heed to his screams, and the little imp danced with passion. Suddenly Madge showed a vexed face between her curtains, and her ringing voice called out imperatively:

"Tom! for heaven's sake get a slipper and spank that child! He's quite too old to cry like that, and his mother doesn't seem to know enough to manage him!" Then she vanished.

Fancy the laugh! It began in a chorus of stifled chuckles, but she had spoken for us all, and a hearty endorsement sounded from every berth, while the amazed parent picked up her offspring, slapped him soundly, and looked round with a "Pleasema'am-what-else-shall-I-do?" face which was funnier than Madge's prescription.

Our train was "behind time," and breakfast was only a dim prophecy, so we beguiled the hours as best we might watching for buffaloes which wouldn't appear, spying several groups of the pretty, graceful antelopes, passing swiftly through wide spread settlements of the funny little prairie-dogs, and opening our eyes widely at the cactus which grew in such prickly profusion on either side of the track. I found the face of my English beauty more enchanting than anything else, for it was as changeful as her thoughts. Suddenly she exclaimed:

"I wonder where Tom can be!" and suiting the action to the word, she started in pursuit. She was only gone a minute; then with a comically rueful face, she begged me to come too. We found the deserter cosily tucked beside the very girl he had admired the day before, for both of them were occupying the same car-step, while the rest of the gay group were camped on the platform. Of course I laughed, while Madge evinced her presence by reaching over and energetically pulling a curl of the handsome head that was so dangerously near the young lady's rosy cheeks.

Tom started, looked round, and coolly said: "Ah, Madge! I thought it was you. Well, I can't very well move just now; but Miss Ellis, if you can look over your shoulder you will see my sister. Miss Fairfax, allow me to present Miss Ellis."

The scamp certainly showed good taste; for Miss Ellis was very lovely, both in feature and expression. She blushed a little, but bowed as gracefully as her position permitted, and her voice was singularly sweet when she said, "I find that Mr. Fairfax is an old schoolmate of my brother's. They were at Toronto together!"

It was Madge's turn to blush now; not a little, but furiously, while Tom's mischievous eyes danced with delight at her confusion, and I did some Yankee "guessing" about that "brother," which proved quite correct, and then I sat down to watch further developments and to enjoy the happiness before me. O youth and hope and beauty! What brave possessions ye are! Ye hold in your magical glasses such rare libations, and we drink such eager draughts, believing the visions they bring to heart and brain.

The train roared on. "Boss Tweed" came out and stood on the platform of his car, watching the strange, desolate lands we were passing; gentlemen consoled themselves with cigars; ladies tried all conceivable change of position and read persistently; while all the happiness and delight in the whole train seemed to concentrate in the knot of young people about me. Madge sent for the hamper, the young ladies opened their baskets, and when we reached Cheyenne I left Tom seated on a reserved water-pail, with all the gay girls around him pampering him by offers of the daintiest morsels, and my queenly Madge as merry as the rest directing at him a perpetual volley of saucy speeches.

They were all going through to Sacramento. My prophetic soul told me what would happen, for the imprisonment in a Pullman car for a week of two mutually susceptible young people has an almost certain result. Nothing in Euclid is surer than a flirtation, while something more serious is very apt to take place. Tom gave me his own version of the story, declaring fate had been too much for him, for during those days of travel he had grown so used to caring for Miss Ellis, so accustomed to playing a devoted lover "just to tease Madge!" that when their destination was attained the force of habit made him still seek the young lady, and "she seemed so fond of him, that well, really now, you know, a fellow finds himself in a queer position, and I had to marry her just to save her feelings!"

The pretty bride had heard all this before, so she only rejoined with the meekest air:

"I'm trying to show how sensible I am of his pure benevolence."

"Altogether an accident!" but what a delicious consequence! I am telling you a true story, dear friends, and if you will find out the history of many a marriage it will be found to have an equally small beginning.

"And Madge?" I think I hear you say. Well, Madge was going to Sacramento to complete her engagement to that same brother of Miss Ellis who had known "Tom" at Toronto, and Tom asserts that she rules him splendidly. I'd give something to see her eyes flash again, but to-morrow I am to say good-by to my hero and heroine, who sail for home, at Cape Breton; and Madge is keeping house in Sacramento.

Railroad Legislation.

The House of Representatives has adopted by a vote of 121 to 119, McCrary's bill to regulate the commerce by railroad among the several States. The bill enacts that all railroad lines carrying freight between the different States, whether owned by one or by various corporations, shall be regarded as employed in commerce among the several States, and shall be liable for any violation of this act. They are forbidden to charge more than a fair and reasonable rate for the transportation of freight or passengers; such rate to be ascertained and fixed by a board of railroad commissioners, to be appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, and to be the residents of each of the nine judicial districts of the United States; they are to be disinterested persons, and not to have any interest in the stocks, bonds, or property of any railroad, or any transportation company. This board of railroad commissioners is to institute a thorough investigation and inquiry into the rates, tables and compensation charged for transporting freights and passage over each of such lines of railroad, and into the reasonableness thereof, and as soon as practicable after such investigation and inquiry to prepare for the owners and operators of such of such lines, as per rate of schedule, a reasonable maximum rate of charges for the transportation of passengers and freight, and loss on or over said lines respectively. The scedule is to be duly authenticated by the board of commissioners and to be printed and kept posted up in each of the offices and stations of such railroad company, corporation or person. They may from time to time as circumstances may require, change, and revise the schedule, and shall give notice of such changes or revisions in the same manner.

The Temperance War.

One liquor retailer in Worcester, Mass., had pledged himself to sell no more liquor, at the continued solicitations of the crusading ladies.

The crusaders called on the Maryland legislature March 25th, and stampeded it, the members precipitately abandoning the hall to the feminine invaders. Those legislators evidently do not intend to be dragooned out of their regular nourishment, if a brilliant retreat in face of the enemy will prevent it.

At Ironton, Ohio, a saloon-keeper filled a large pitcher with beer, and, glass in hand, requested a number of the spectators to drink while the ladies were praying. A majority of the liquor men condemn this action, and consider it a foolish trick.

At Dayton, Ohio, Col. Brown, Governor of the Soldiers' Home, has closed up the liquor saloons in the vicinity of the Home by prosecuting the keepers, and announces that he "will keep the west suburbs of Dayton clear of rum-holes" by legal process, while the ladies take care of the city. This addition of the military forces to their strength gives the lady crusaders great encouragement.

Readables.

The Mayor of Biddeford has had the safe and vault of the city building broken open. The records were seized. Respectable citizens of both parties denounce the action, preferring to have the question of the legality of the election of the members of the council decided by the courts.

A special Boston correspondent of the Springfield Republican, alluding to the Massachusetts Senatorship controversy, says: "Even Mr. Sumner's close friend and follower, Frank Bird, wants to put Nathaniel P. Banks in his place! It is all a struggle of the politicians, using the arts of politicians, and very much with the aims of politicians. Anything like self-sacrifice, like regard for the glory of Massachusetts, like maintaining the high moral plane on which Mr. Sumner moved in his Senatorial career, are forgotten in the hot pursuit of personal advantage, factional victory, party supremacy."

The will of Geo. Mitchell, the car-spring builder, of New York, admitted to probate recently, shows that his personal estate amounted to $3,000,000, and his real estate to $5,000,000.

The President has nominated Hon. Henry P. Rolfe to be United States attorney for the district of New Hampshire.

Collector Simmons of Boston testified on Thursday that he had persistently refused to aid Sanborn in his transactions until he received the written direction of the Secretary of the Treasury to do so. He gave an account of an interview with the Secretary in which he protested in strong terms against the operations carried on under this law, but the only answer he received from Mr. Richardson in reply to his explanation of what was attempted under it, and methods by which it was used to influence those attempts, was, "that if he would attend to his own business, the department would take care of what belonged to it." He stated that it was his decided conviction that ninety per cent. of the $50,000 collected in New England under the Sanborn contract would never have been collected through the regular channels.

The U. S. Senate has indicated its intention of agreeing with the House in limiting the currency to $400,000,000 instead of $382,000,000, by a vote of 31 to 26.

The Trustees of the Concord National Savings Bank have sued all the bondsmen of the defaulting cashier, Storrs. One bond is for $100,000, and is signed by twelve men and one firm; the other bond is for $20,000, and has seven signers. A majority of the bondsmen were willing to pay voluntarily or leave the question to referees, but some wished to contest the matter, which led to the suits. The action will not be tried before next autumn. The bondsmen represent a million and a half of dollars.

David F. Nelson, who ran away from North Carolina when a slave, and was a messenger boy for Henry J. Raymond's editorial room of the Times, and latterly a messenger for Postmaster James, successfully passed a rigid civil service examination, and on Thursday was promoted to a clerkship in the post-office in New York.

Earnest Mueller blew his brains out at Hoboken, N. Y., on Wednesday, because a young lady refused to marry him. He had just arrived from Germany, and letters of credit to large amounts were awaiting him.

A meeting was held in New York, Wednesday night, to arrange for a mass meeting in favor of burning bodies instead of burying them.

Two children, John and Hannah Carter, died on Thursday in New York from burns caused by their mother throwing a bottle of kerosene on the stove, while drunk. She was arrested.

John Chinaman's Progress.

A correspondent of the Graphic, writing from San Francisco, gives an extended account of the ceremonies at the Chinese joss-house on the Chinese New Year's Day, Feb. 15, and adds the following amusing incidents:

A knot of hideous hoodlums had been for a long time annoying the Chinese, shouting, hooting, flinging stones, and some getting in the way generally. The heathens bore this with silent patience. When their preparations were complete the hoodlums happened to be gathered together in the middle of the street. Revenge is sweet even to John Chinaman. He attached about fifty packages of crackers to the end of a bamboo pole, and with a dexterous movement he threw it, as a fisherman throws his rod, into their midst. Boys and crackers in one red burial blent; you never heard such a howling and such a scramble, hands and legs indiscriminately getting uppermost. And when that little pyrotechnic scene was over the pests were scattered, and not a hoodlum afterward assisted at the sacred ceremony before that particular house. I have previously said that John has no sense of humor. I retract; he has, though this incident proves it to be rather grim.

To trip up a Chinaman if he be lame, to run after him calling him pigtail or piggy, and above all to throw stones, are some of the standard delights of the hoodlum. Not very long ago a meek and puny Celestial was passing along one of the principle streets of this city, when a boy, "scienced," as they say here, in every species of juvenile wickedness, set upon him. The man bore it for awhile, but finally losing patience he gave the boy a sounding box on the ear. This gathered a crowd at once, and a man immediately proceeded to chastise the heathen; but the latter, throwing himself into boxing attitude, "polished him off in no time," and he measured his length in the gutter. Having finished one, John struck another attitude, and taking the whole crowd in with a glance, he said, in the shrill, piping tones of his race, "Come on allee Melican man there, me savee boxee, me boxes allee!" They admired pluck, so no one accepted his challenge. Where could that benighted heathen Chinee have learned the manly art of self-defense?

The Shirt that Opened Behind.

A man in Greenfield, whom we will call William, got up, the other morning, and proceeded to put on a shirt which his wife had just made for him after a new pattern. As she stood at the mirror, curling her hair, she heard a suppressed sound half-way between a groan and an oath, and turning round said, laughing, "Why, my dear!" "Shut up!" he ejaculated,—"you are a born fool. Never let a woman attempt to fit a shirt; she can't do it! it is one of the impossibilities." "But, William?" deprecatingly. "Don't you talk—let me talk. Do you think I'm going down town in this rig? A pretty disposition you've got; just because I happened to find a little fault, last week, with your ironing, you must go and make me a shirt without a bosom! Such malicious conduct, madame, is unpardonable. Shut up, I say, I won't hear a word; when a starched shirt-front is the only finery that a man indulges in, is he not excusable for being particular in regard to that, I should like to know? And this thing sets like the devil. Look how baggy it is here in front, and it feels behind as if there was a board bound behind me," walking up and looking in the glass, hitching up first one shoulder and then the other, after the indescribable manner of men trying a new garment. His wife dared not speak, but, bringing a good-sized mirror from the next room, she held it up behind him for a moment; and perceiving by his chop-fallen expression that he saw the point, and the front, she ran down stairs to settle the coffee, and see that Bridget had set the table geometrically. As William walked down to his office that morning, he said to the first friend that he met, "I'll tell you, Tom, that little wife of mine is a born genius. Look at this shirt, now; she cut and made it all herself. Do you see, it's open behind; no confounded button-holes to bother a fellow. Just send your wife up for a pattern." And it was by the way of Tom's wife Lizzie first knew that William was pleased with his shirts.

New Zealand and America.

We clip from the Otago, N. Z., Guardian the following paragraph relative to trade and intercourse between the States and the British colonies in Australia:

"The credit of the colony stands high in the English market; its natural resources are being developed with marvellous celerity; absolute peace prevails on the North Island, where Maori wars were long the drawback to progress; —all of which things point to a prosperous future. Nor is the least noticeable feature in the signs of progress the resumption of the English and Australian mail service via California, which New Zealand founded at its own expense, and in which it is now joined by New South Wales. Were the American Tariff less prohibitory, we could supply American manufacturers with a great quantity of raw material which goes past them to England, and take in exchange their manufactured goods; but we look forward to regular steamboat intercourse between the Pacific Slope States and New Zealand and Australia as certain, in the end, to lead to a modification of the American tariff, favorable to both countries. Our staple exports at present are wool, gold, and flax; but as settlement extends, the variety of our exports will be increased. A demand is certain to spring up for American lumber, owing to the conservation of our forests, which is being resolved upon, the supply at present being far from sufficient for the demand."

Parson Brownlow.

A letter writer, speaking of Senator Brownlow of Tennessee, says: He sits at the extreme left of the President's desk, so as to be near [illegible] He is a tall, dark-haired m[illegible] to his lips, with no color or life to any part of his body, save his restless eyes, which grow bright at rare intervals when some ringing war-cry on one side or the other of the chamber kindles the fire that disease has almost smothered. He never speaks, nor moves, nor calls a page, nor smiles, nor talks to his neighbor. Attendants carry him to his seat at twelve, and back to his solitary home at five o'clock. There he sits, during the long hours, silent and ghostlike, quivering, trembling, twitching perpetually with a terrible palsy—the ghost of the ancient Parson Brownlow. Such to-day is Parson Brownlow, of Tennessee—the once puissant campaigner of Southern journalism. He patiently waits the reading of the call-list of Eternity.

A Word About Trees.

[Ohio Farmer.]

Never plant sprouts from trees; twenty-four years ago I planted a small orchard of sixty-seven trees; fifty of them were seedlings and seventeen were sprouts from old trees. I planted them and the next day topped and grafted them about three and one-half to four feet high; they were well cultivated and cared for, and in about three to six years came in bearing and the sprouts from the old trees commenced dying one or two at a time, always sprouting at the root, while the seedling sprouted but little round the body. They were all planted the same day in the same lot, in a warm sandy soil on a high ridge, and to-day, my seventeen sprouts are all dead and gone, and I have only lost three of my fifty seedlings.

Business Notices.

Ask Them!

An advertisement of a medicine, however candid and conscientious it may be, does not always carry conviction with it. The public know to their sorrow that the boastful claims put forth in behalf of many so-called remedies are literally "a delusion and a snare." Probably the best use, therefore, that can be made of the space devoted to this notice of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is to invite those who read it to inquire of the parties who have tested the curative and preventive properties of the article what they think of it. We earnestly request all doubters to ascertain from such of their friends and neighbors as have taken this standard tonic and alterative as a protection against malarious diseases, or as a cure for indigestion, liver complaint, constipation, rheumatism, nervous debility, headache, low spirits, languor, biliousness, &c., what Hostetter's Bitters has done for them. There is no testimony so trustworthy as that which is the result of personal experience.

Victims of Obscure Diseases, seeking safety and restored health, should use Dr. Helmbold's Extract Buchu. This article is officinal and standard. It is, moreover, the only preparation that develops the full value of Buchu as a diuretic. It is a perfect specific for all diseases of the urinary organs in male or female. Beware of counterfeits and imitations, which unscrupulous men are endeavoring to palm off upon Dr. Helmbold's reputation. Look out for the doctor's signature on the wrapper. For sale by all druggists.

High Livers, those indulging in ease and pleasure, and those of sedentary habits, can prevent Boils, Carbunkles, Gout, Red Skin, Eruptions, Pimples, Constipation, Piles, Drowsiness, Biliousness, and other conditions induced by such habits, by taking from four to six of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets once a week, or, better still, one or two each night. Twenty-five cents a vial, by all Druggists. 715

ANAKESIS is without doubt, the most infallible easy and scientific cure for PILES, ever discovered. 20,000 grateful patients attest its virtues, and physicians of all schools endorse it unequivocally. SILSBEE, a scientific physician, and has been pronounced the greatest contribution to medicine of the age. Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. Depot 46 Walker St., New York.

Local Matters.

The Jubilee Singers

Are to once more "rise and shine, and give God the glory" in one of their delicious concerts, at the Temple, to-morrow evening. One peculiarity we have noticed among persons who have heard them sing, i. e., a general desire for all their friends to enjoy the same privilege. The quaint and touching music produced by the simple and yet expressive words and melodies lingers in remembrance long after their rendition. Another result is the general desire evinced by audiences to join in the shouts and refrains. More captivating songs cannot be found than these choruses, and after listening to the class now under Mr. Bradley's direction, a faint idea of the power and grandeur of the simple melodies of the slave and bush meeting gatherings on "the old plantation" may be conceived. The price of admission is but twenty-five cents. The programme includes all the favorite pieces previously given here, with several new "shouts" and choruses of the old slave days, now happily passed away forever.

City Affairs.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, leave was granted Mr. C. W. Carter to remove building from Chesnut street to Lincoln avenue, under direction of the Mayor. Leave was granted John W. Stavers to encumber Islington and Dover streets for building.

The Chief Engineer's request for the location of a gas post near the water stop on Hill street, was granted.

A notice was received from the County Commissioners of a hearing before them at the Town Hall in Newcastle on the tenth day of April next at ten o'clock A. M., on a petition for a highway from Newcastle to Lafayette road in this city.

Voted, That the City Solicitor be employed to attend said hearing and protest against the laying out of said highway.

James S. Seavey's declination of the office of Assessor was received.

William Bodge was appointed to collect the vital statistics and make the enrolment in Wards One and Two, and Jeremiah D. Goodrich, Jr., in Ward Three.

Laconics.

The Times pleasingly bears testimony to the fact that we conduct this paper to please ourselves, and thinks no administration paper would dare do so! We suspect our neighbor is endeavoring to sell his opinions very cheap, relying on his first posting the President on the qualities of Mr. Waite for Chief Justice, as an introductory.

Mr. Alexander Robinson has sold the "Ball place" at the Creek to Mr. Stephen Tobey, for $6000.

Ex-Mayor Adams has again been taken to the Concord Asylum.

C. N. Shaw & Co. will remove their business to one of the new stores now being remodelled by Mr. Hartley W. Mason, on Market street, formerly occupied by Mr. James A. Rand.

Mr. Terhune, of Terhune & Berry, is to publish a weekly paper. He has had some experience in that line.

If you want to advertise, advertise in a live paper. If you don't want to sell anything, advertise elsewhere.

Mr. J. B. Burleigh's sale of pictures is attracting considerable attention. The stock consists of many valuable paintings besides others really worth the amount paid for tickets. The purchaser has a chance of obtaining paintings worth $50 each in the distribution. Mr. Burleigh's sale last year resulted very successfully, being satisfactorily carried out. He is enabled by adopting this course to dispose of his stock at prices that could not be afforded were he to encumber his store with a constantly depreciating stock. All who buy, get their money's worth, and some get more. Mr. Burleigh invites the public to call and take a look at the paintings at No. 58 Congress street.

The young people of Rye had a calico party at the town hall, Thursday night, which was attended by many from Portsmouth, Greenland, North Hampton and other places. About seventy-five couples were present, Turner's quardrille band furnishing excellent music. The "gander party" from Portsmouth had reasons to "thank their lucky stars" that they went, the managers endeavoring to make things pleasant, and the ladies being as entertaining as could be wished. Commend us to Rye, and Greenland, and North Hampton for ladies as handsome as Portsmouth can boast, and that is all that need be said about good looks in this enlightened age and country.

"Spring, spring, ge-entle spring" is here, and no mistake this time. Ye gentle troubadour ground out "St. Patrick's Day in the morning" for two hours, in front of our office, Friday.

"One who has heard" informs us that on Washington street, Boston, there were formerly four firms in stores adjoining each other, viz; Adams & Eaton, Eaton & Gay, Thomas G. Atkins, and Lewis G. Pray. In another city two merchants occupied adjoining stores and the signs read "Jonathan Shott—Peter Fell."

We cannot give too much praise to the performances of the Band from the Asylum for the Blind. They are thrilling, and no one can listen without being charmed. Their execution is almost faultless. They appear here on Fast night.

Our advertising patrons are requested to hand in their orders for changes or new advertisements by 4 o'clock P. M., in order that their appearance in the next morning's CHRONICLE may be assured. By attending to this request our friends will considerably lighten the labors of our night compositors and foreman, without putting themselves to any inconvenience.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, March 26.

If I were writing you "all about dogs," I think I should be tempted to apeak to your readers about a pure "Wiley" setter now in your city. "Shot," in his almost spotless garb of white, with his large tender eyes and gentle ways is known to multitudes aside from every real sportsman in Portsmouth. At two years of age he was unbroken, and brought from Baltimore, his native place, by Mr. John S. Sides, his owner for eleven years past. It was thought impossible to properly train the dog when he came into his present owner's possession, and doubtless the Society with so many initials owe Mr. S. a medal for his proving that kindness may make a most valuable hunting dog of a canine that has been given over to hardness of heart. "Shot," at thirteen, is still so precious as a family pet, to say nothing of his value as "a dog that has been shot over," that he is not for sale. Indeed, I am a witness to the fact that $200 laid down for his purchase a number of years since were (was?) indignantly rejected.

Among the "Sons of Portsmouth" who have experienced a trial by fire in this city, are the well-known importers of woolen cloths, Fernald & Co. They are now located in finer quarters than ever, at 73 Hawley street, in Palmer, Bachelder & Co.'s elegant building. Having been burned out in the great fire, and once since, the Messrs. Fernald can offer nothing but the newest and choicest patterns to their friends.

Quite a leading agent for first-class music troupes from this city says that even to the death he'll be in the business, for when he dies he'll die-a-Payson.

The excellent working of the prohibitory law in this city is shown in the fact that on the 18th inst., —the same day on which the proprietor of Young's Hotel was acquitted by jury for illegally maintaining a liquor nuisance, and a very large stock of every grade of liquors ordered to be returned to him,—Mr. William Chandler, well and favorably known in your city during and since the war, was fined $50 for liquor selling. The heinousness of "Billy's" crime will be apparent to all in your city when I state that the offence consisted in retailing a fair amount of Jones' and English ales, at the wholesale depot of Hon. Frank Jones.

The Fire Department played upon more pianos last night, at the Ditson fire, than at any time since the fire of May 30, 1873. The music was hardly liquid, as the spray congealed even in the burning building, and dropped in hail upon the firemen, while even telegraphic wires were wrought into heavy cables of crystal. Mr. Albert H. Fernald, well known to all as a pianist and composer, loses a number of plates, manuscript music, and new pieces nearly ready for publication.

Much complaint has been made for years in relation to servants. Irish, colored and German have all failed—American domestics are not to be had. The Bureau of Central Charities some years since employed Mr. Charles A. Burglund to bring to this country trained domestic servants from Sweden. This class of help proved so satisfactory that Mr. B. was induced to make it his sole business to supply these servants, and last year he made three round trips to Sweden, bringing about 500 servants. All information may be had by addressing him at 11 Staniford street, Boston. That these servants are almost invariably Protestants will be nothing to their disadvantage.

The advertisement of a sensational physician in a leading paper of this city, a short time since, contained this sentence: "Letters of inquiry must contain stamp." Of course all such letters must bear their own stamp, as did Cain his mark upon the forehead, and Hester Pryme the "Scarlet Letter" upon her bosom. H.

Girls in Factories.

The Massachusetts Labor Bureau, in the annual report just issued, pronounces against the employment of girls under sixteen years of age in factories. It says: "Could we have the power given us, we would not allow a girl under sixteen to be employed in any kind of a factory or workshop. If she could be free till she reached the age of twenty, mankind would be the gainer. This is a physiological matter, and the result of our investigation of facts in this connection, and our careful consideration of the subject, leads us to express the hope that, if no other subject connected with the labor question is thought worthy of legislation, this may be selected for legislative study and action. No argument is necessary to convince the people of the importance of giving the years under sixteen in a girl's life to the growth and development of her organization, on the healthy condition of which so much depends—her own health, happiness, and usefulness, not only to herself, but to those dependent upon her either for care or sustenance."

—A writer in Lippincott's Magazine for April says that all the men in Japan, in saluting each other with profound bows, wear a smile upon their lips; and in whatever house you enter, you are treated with distinction. Contrast this with the Yorkshire bumpkin, who, when addressed by a gentleman on horseback, "Don't take your hat off to me; you'll frighten my horse," replied, "I won't a goin' to," or the New York gamin who, when accosted by a stranger with: "I want to go to the Fifth Avenue Hotel," replied, "Then why in thunder don't you go," and say whether polite barbarism has not its advantages over ill-bred civilization.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY DROPSY AND RUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, found in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

SCROFULA.

SCROFULOUS HUMORS.

IF VEGETINE will relieve pain, cleanse, purify and cure such diseases, restoring the patient to perfect health after trying different physicians, many remedies, suffering for years, and pronounced incurable, if you are a sufferer, you can be cured? Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood, in the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the Great Blood-Purifier. The great source of disease originates in the blood; and no medicine that does not act directly upon it, to purify and renovate, has any just claim upon public attention. When the blood becomes lifeless and stagnant, either from change of weather or climate, want of exercise, irregular diet, or from any other cause, the VEGETINE will renew the blood, carry off the putrid humors, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, and impart a tone of vigor to the whole body. The conviction is, in the public mind as well as in the medical profession, that the remedies supplied by the Vegetable Kingdom are more safe, more successful, in the cure of disease, than mineral medicines. VEGETINE is composed of roots, barks, and herbs. It is pleasant to take, and perfectly safe to give an infant. In Scrofula the VEGETINE has performed wonderful cures, where many other remedies have failed, as will be seen by the following unsolicited testimonial:

A Walking Miracle.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir:—Though a stranger I want to inform you what VEGETINE has done for me.

Last Christmas scrofula made its appearance in my system—large running ulcers appearing on my neck, one on each side of my throat, one on my thigh, which extended to the seat, one on my head, which eat into the skull bone, one on my left leg, which became so bad that two physicians came to amputate the limb, though upon consultation concluded not to do so, as my whole body was so full of Scrofula they deemed it advisable to cut the sore, which was painful beyond description, and there was a quart of matter run from this one sore. The physicians all gave me up to die, and said they could do no more for me. Both of my legs were drawn up to my seat, and it was thought if I did get up again I would be a cripple for life.

When in this condition I saw VEGETINE advertised, and commenced taking it in March, and followed on with it, until I had used 16 bottles, and this morning I am going to plough corn, a well man. All my townsmen say it is a miracle to see me round walking and working.

In conclusion I will add, when I was enduring such great suffering, from that dreadful disease, Scrofula, I prayed to the Lord above to take me from this world, but as VEGETINE has restored to me the blessings of health, I desire more than ever to live, that I may be of some purpose to my fellow man, and I know of no better way to aid suffering humanity, than to enclose you this statement of my case, with an earnest request that you will publish it, and it will afford me pleasure to reply to any communication which I may receive therefrom.

I am, Sir, very respectfully,
WILLIAM PAYN

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

SCROFULA.
SCROFULOUS HUMORS.

If VEGETINE will relieve pain, cleanse, purify and cure such diseases, restoring the patient to perfect health after trying different physicians, many remedies, suffering for years, is it not conclusive proof, if you are a sufferer, you can be cured? Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood, in the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the Great Blood Purifier. The great source of disease originates in the blood; and no medicine that does not act directly upon it, to purify and renovate, has any just claim upon public attention. When the blood becomes filthy and stagnant, either from change of weather or climate, want of exercise, irregular diet, or from any other cause, the VEGETINE will renew the blood, carry off the putrid humors, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, and impart a tone of vigor to the whole body. The conviction is, in the public mind as well as in the medical profession, that the remedies supplied by the Vegetable Kingdom are more safe, more successful, in the cure of disease, than mineral medicines. VEGETINE is composed of roots, barks, and herbs. It is pleasant to take, and perfectly safe to give an infant. In Scrofula the VEGETINE has performed wonderful cures, where many other remedies have failed, as will be seen by the following unsolicited testimonial:

A Walking Miracle.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:
Dear Sir:—Though a stranger I want to inform you what VEGETINE has done for me.
Last Christmas scrofula made its appearance in my system—large running ulcers appearing on me as follows: One on each of my arms, one on my thigh, which extended to the seat, one on my head, which eat into the skull bone, one on my left ear, which became so bad that two physicians came to amputate the limb, though upon consultation concluded not to do so, as my whole body was so full of Scrofula they deemed it advisable to cut the sore, which was painful beyond description, and there was a quart of matter run from this one sore. The physicians said it was me up to die, and said they could do no more for me. Both of my legs were as big as my waist, and it was thought if I did get up again I would be a cripple for life.
When in this condition I saw VEGETINE advertised, and commenced taking it in March, and followed on with it, until I had used 15 bottles, and this morning I am going to plough corn, a well man. All my townsmen say it is a miracle to see me round walking and working.
In conclusion I will add, when I was enduring such great suffering, from that dreadful disease, Scrofula, I prayed to the Lord above to take me out of this world, but as VEGETINE has restored to me the blessings of health, I desire more than ever to live, that I may be of some purpose to my fellow man, and I know of no better way to aid suffering humanity, than to endeavor to bring this statement of my case, with an earnest hope that you will publish it, and it will afford me pleasure to reply to any communication which I may receive therefrom.
I am, Sir, very respectfully,
WILLIAM PAYN

Daily Chronicle.

Ahead of the Dust.

[Chicago Times.]

Few persons who have traveled over either of the two great routes to the seaboard, to-wit, the Lake Shore or Fort Wayne, have escaped noticing the fact that the two roads run side by side for a distance of twenty miles or more before they diverge so much that the passengers on one train cannot distinguish the features of friends upon the other train, providing two trains are running alongside. A rivalry has existed between the operatives of the two routes ever since the completion of the Fort Wayne road. Over each route a through train for New York is dispatched, leaving this city every evening at 5:15. Because of the greater distance from the limits of the Fort Wayne depot, and the fact that they have to cross a draw-bridge over the South branch, the trains on this road do not get out quite so early as those on the Lake Shore, but, in spirit of fairness and banter as well, the boys on the latter route generally wait for the rival train, just to show that there is nothing mean about them, and that they scorn to take advantage of any little matter of draw-bridge or distance through crowded city. The engineers of the Fort Wayne route always come up smiling, and in the vicinity of Englewood, manage to close up near enough to pass the time of day and exchange other civilities with their brothers of the Lake Shore foot-boards. Then ensues a little test of the powers of each other's pets, i. e., their engines. This brings them to Grand Crossing, and also brings up the blood of the passengers of both trains, every mother's son of them preferring to go to hades at the rate of a hundred miles an hour rather than have the train they are riding on beaten by the rival. Such is the recklessness of American nature when it comes to rivalry.

From Grand Crossing to South Chicago the drivers of the iron racers jocky along "for a lead," as both have to stop again at the last-named place. Everything pertaining to their respective engines is carefully looked over, a good head of steam is obtained, and matters in general are put in shape for the grand struggle, as there are no more stops until after they part company. By this time the passengers are all alive to the excitement of the race. Watches are out, and every face wears a look of impatience as the air-brake is felt for the stop at South Chicago, as if it would have been far more satisfactory for the race to continue without losing a moment. Handkerchiefs flutter from every confronting window of each train. The conductors stand down on the lower steps of the car and hastily signal to the engineer to "light out." The imperturbable baggage-masters draw up their chairs and sit near the car doors gazing quietly at one another. The brakemen swing their hats at each other, and even the omnipresent train-boy forgets his peanuts, and, for a wonder, takes an interest in the race.

And how is it on the engine? How about the driver and the stoker who, after all, are doing this thing, and doing it alone, too? Let us see. On a recent occasion the Times representative was invited to "get up" at Grand Crossing and see it done just once; so he jumped off as the train slacked at the Crossing, and, running quickly forward, did get up, and, perched upon the narrow seat of the fireman at the left of the cab, he took a few notes "onto" as pretty a race as was ever run over this famous course. The rival train had a little the start of us, but our engineer thought he could get out of South Chicago even with them, and "then was when the fun would come." It had grown dark enough to have the sparks gleam brightly as the two engines vomited forth, with nervous, spiteful cough, great volumes of coal smoke mingled with steam, which streaked off away over the trains and lay like sullen storm-clouds over the low landscape. We left South Chicago well together, and each engine was soon put to lively work. As the firemen opened the furnace-doors, bright streaks of glaring, angry, red light would shoot backward through the mass of smoke and steam, for a moment lighting it up with a lurid glare that smacked of the infernal regions.

Faster and faster flew the driving wheels, and the lightning-like motion of the parallel bars bewildered the eye. The headlight of our engine seemed to throw its luminous rays ahead by jerks, lighting up a weird scene of low, sedgy marsh, sandy wastes, stunted pines, and sluggish lagoon through which lay the iron-bound course over which our ponderous engine was gliding at a fearfully rapid pace, seeming to give every energy to the struggle, as much as if it were a thing of life and reason. Side by side the two trains sped for many miles, ours leading by half a car length. Our engineer was one of the most careful on this road, and one who very seldom indulged in a race, but having a Times man "up" with him, he concluded it would never do to suffer a "scoop," as that is something the paper never allows, so to show what his pride of an engine could do, just before parting company with his rival, he gave the old machine a little more latitude, and the faithful assistant heaved in an extra dose of coal, when, with an intensified growl, away we sped at a rate of speed rarely accomplished by a locomotive, and with a parting screech of the steam-whistle we left the rainly struggling rival far in the rear. As the roads diverged we could see the engine of the opposition line plunging madly through the low oaks and pines, seemingly running twice as fast as we were.

We had jumped by switches, sidings, and stations, but now a coterie of red and green lights appears. The reverse bar is thrown over, the throttle-valve closed, the bell set to ringing by steam, and, with hand on the valve which governs the air-brake, the engineer, with great drops of perspiration standing on his brow, gently reins his glowing steed and stops the ponderous monster right where he can water it easily, and then remarks with great inward satisfaction, "Well, d—n 'em, they got it that time." Then as he gets down with torch and oil-can to make the grand rounds, the Times representative bids him a hearty good-night, and slips back to full-sized seats and lazy backs, and is greeted with the remark, "You were out there, were you? I wondered what had got into the old man."

The passengers are all elated over the victory, each one regarding it in the light of a new case of personal prowess quite as much as if they had run the engine, or, in fact, owned the road. No other topic entered into the general conversation, and as the train drew up to the supper station, sixty miles out of Chicago, every person on the train seemed to have a keen appetite, which the excitement of the grand race had begotten. Of course all of the passengers of that train will ever after swear by that road unless perhaps they should some time suffer dire defeat, and that would leave them in a quandary as whether they had been beaten fairly, and whether they did not not have more and heavier cars than the rival train. In a year or two more, when the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, the Canada Southern, and the Air-Line Railroads are completed, there will be many a lively race in that neck of woods which skirts the tower lake shore, so that the representative American may hope for any amount of fun of the rapid kind.

Daily Chronicle.

MONDAY, MARCH 30, 1874.

Readables.

Rev. Dr. Edward N. Kirk died suddenly from a stroke of paralysis at his home in Boston, Friday.

The Rhode Island assembly has passed a prohibitory liquor bill.

The Cambridge boat won the English University race, Saturday, beating the Oxford crew four lengths.

The District of Columbia investigation has developed the fact that the sum of $10,000 had been paid for flagging which had never been laid.

At Sharon, Mass., Wednesday, William Miller, aged thirty-four years, a cabinet maker, unmarried, nearly severed his neck with a scythe which he had suspended in a groove, guillotine fashion, some feet above a block upon which he reclined his neck. Several pounds of old iron was attached to the scythe, which was caused to fall by a cord, edge downward. Insanity from softening of the brain was the cause of the suicide.

State News.

Mr. Frank Freeman has been elected city treasurer of Dover.

David E. Blodgett, the wife muderer, who was to have been taken to the State Prison Saturday hung himself in the cell in jail Friday night. The body was not cold when found. He tore up a sheet, made a halter-knot in one end, and slipping the end through it and around his neck, he wound the other end around the bar of the window, his feet just touching the floor. He left a few lines, disposing of some of his effects, and giving directions how his body should be laid out, and asking to be buried at Springfield, Vermont. He has written a history of his life.

O. S. Addison's house and two barns at Hill were burned with furniture and hay on Friday.

Miss Amanda J. Bunker, a young lady about 25, was elected as superintending school committee of the town of Barnstead, at the recent town meeting.

What Killed the Herald.

Fifteen or sixteen years ago a man named Harvey started a weekly paper at Williamston, Ingham county, called the Herald. The town was small, the times dull, and Harvey was probably the laziest editor who ever had anything to do with a Michigan paper. The citizens encouraged him all they could, and finally the gentleman who had furnished most of the capital dropped into the office one Friday to see Harvey and spur him up a little. It was publication day, but the outside, only half made up, was on the stone, and not a line had been set for the inside. Harvey was in the yard back of the office, digging fish worms, and was called in.

"See here, Harvey, you are not doing as you should," commenced the gentleman; "here it is Friday and you haven't even worked the first side of your paper."

"I—see—I—haven't!" slowly replied the editor, looking in the drawer for a fish line.

"Well, when are you going to get the paper out?"

"Some—time—next—week."

"But this is not the way to do business, Mr. Harvey. When you came here didn't you agree to issue the paper every Friday?"

"I—presume—I—did," drawled Harvey, "but—I—didn't—know—the—fishing—was—so—good."

He took his rod and went to the banks of the Cedar, and when he returned the office was packed up in boxes marked "old type," and a note on the door read: "The Herald is dead—too many suckers killed it."

Fresh Currents.

[Cincinnati Times.]

The New York Herald isn't afraid of bears. It telegraphed its North Carolina correspondent to "go up old Bald Head."

We have been accustomed to seeing our paragraphs credited to others, but when the New York Comic Advertiser credits its paragraphs to us, it is playing it rather low down on one that never did harm to him.

Figuring on Tombstones.

A correspondent, writing of the old cemetery of Savannah, Ga., says:

"With the exception of the magnificent japonicas, which just now are in full bloom, there is but little for the tourist to admire, and yet a visit to this quaint old place is extremely interesting. What sorely puzzled me when first I went there was the fact that nearly all the people who were buried there, to judge from the inscriptions on the vaults and tombstones, lived to attain a remarkably high old age, such as father Methuselah might well have been proud of. For instance, to cite a few examples: On one tombstone I found the age of Hannah Tomlinson, when she obit, to be 711 years! a Charles Denver a brewer from Scotland, is, on the slab which covers his grave, said to have attained the ripe old age of 1,569 years! Then again we find quite a number of old citizens of Savannah buried here, whose ages, when they died, ranged from 200 to some 2000 years more or less! Certainly this, to say the least, was remarkable, and spoke highly for the salubrity of the climate of Savannah, even in those "good old days" when Yellow Jack was known to be a frequent visitor there. But the mystery was explained when I was informed that, during the occupation of the city by the Union forces in December, 1864, and the early part of 1865, several regiments were encamped in this churchyard, among which there were several boys whose trade before they became soldiers was that of stonecutters. In their leisure hours these individuals set to work to improve upon the age of the old departed, and, by putting a 7 before the figure 11, and a 1 before the 5, and a 9 after the figure 6, as space permitted, in this manner raised the age of Sarah Tomlinson from 11 to 711 years; and of the brewer from 56 to 1569 years."

Rolling the Ground.

A correspondent of the Germantown Telegraph writes: "On dry or wet ground the effect of the roller is found to be salutary. Plowed and prepared for sowing, dry land is much helped by the roller. The blades of grass spring up sooner and retain a firmer hold in the earth. In a season of drought, rolling has saved the crop, when without it the seed would have never sprung from the ground. In wet and heavy ground it is believed the roller, smoothing and hardening the surface, will leave the soil immediately beneath the surface in a better condition to generate the seed. On grass ground that has been heaved by the frost, the roller has an excellent effect in fixing the roots. Rolling the ground is also good when the land has been laid down unevenly the previous year. If the land is too dry, wait till just after a soaking rain, and it will work capitally. It is a good idea to roll plowed sowed ground before harrowing, as it presses down the furrows that would be turned back, and makes the surface less uneven, and the harrow pulverizes it much. We find that on an average not one farmer in four has a roller."

Only "Four Ones."

[St. Louis Journal.]

About two years ago a Missouri river steamboat left Fort Benton with a party of tough and well-to-do miners on board. There were also among the passengers three or four "brace men," and before arriving at Sioux City they had generally cleaned out the pockets of the miners. The boat stopped at Sioux City to wood up, and found, among others waiting to get on board, a ministerial-looking personage, with the longest and most solemn countenance that could be well imagined. He was dressed in a suit of black, wore a white stovepipe hat and choker collar, ornamented with a black neck-handkerchief. Well, he got on board, and the boat started down the stream. For two days he was unnoticed by the other passengers, but one of the sports at last thought he saw a chance to make something out of the sad and melancholy individual. The latter would once or twice a day step up to the bar, and, with a voice that was as mild and gentle as a maiden's, ask for "A glass of soda, if you please," and then he would pull a roll of bills from his pocket and take a quarter from their interior layers. Then he would say to the barkeeper, as if under a thousand obligations, "Thank you, sir," and walk aft again as if about to commit suicide. This thing had gone far enough, and the gambler I have spoken of at last approached him.

"Would you like a game of seven-up, sir?"

"Seven-up? What is seven-up? Please tell me, my good friend."

"Why, a game of cards, you know; just to pass away the time. Let us play a game."

"My good friend, I do not know anything concerning cards; I cannot play them."

"Well, come along, we'll show you how to do it." And the mild gentleman in black, after some further protests, at length consented.

They showed him how 'twas done, and they played several games. The gentleman in black was delighted. Gamblers want to know if he will play poker, five cents ante, just for the fun of the thing. Gentleman in black says he can't play the game, but they explain again and the poker commences. The gentleman in black loses every time. There are six men in the game. Each one deals before the gentleman in black, and ante has been raised to a dollar. Gent in black deals awkwardly and looks at his hand. Next man to dealer bets five—goes around, and bets are raised to one hundred dollars. Gent in black sees it and goes one hundred better. Gamblers look surprised but will not be bluffed. The bet had reached five hundred dollars—a thousand. All draw out except a Pike's Peak miner, who sees and calls him: "What have you?" "Waal," answers the gent in black, "I have—let me see,—waal, I have four ones."

The gamblers, who have suspicioned some time before, now look wild, and the light begins to dawn in the miner's mind. He leaned across the table and said in the most sarcastic tones he could command:

"Oh, you heave, heave yer? You d——d sanctimonious shuffler."

The gent got up from the table and handed one of the gamblers his card. It read, "Bill Walker, New Orleans"—one of the most successful sharpers in the country.

—Josh Billings says: I have often been told that the best way is to take a bull by the horns; but I think in many instances I should prefer the tail hold.

New Publications.

PRETTY MRS. GASTON is the title of a volume which includes two shorter stories besides the one which gives name to the whole. The author is J. Esten Cooke, who is well known to the reading public as the writer of several other works, among them "Larry of Eagle's Nest." "Pretty Mrs. Gaston" is an interesting, if somewhat sensational tale, and will command readers like the previous works of the same author. Orange Judd & Co. of New York publish the book; price $1.50.

THE LONDON QUARTERLY REVIEW for January (Am. reprint) contains three interesting biographical sketches, of the author of "Winkleman's History of Ancient Art," Mrs. Somerville, and John Stuart Mill; other serials are "Simplification of the Law;" "Sacerdotalism, Ancient and Modern," treating on the history and growth of Protestant confessions, and other ritualistic observances; "Lombard Street," showing the importance of the Cash Reserve of the banking department of the Bank of England, as the ultimate safety-fund of the English mercantile system; "The Deposition of the Future," of universal interest in these days when the labor question is being agitated all over the world; "Prosper Merimee's Lettres a une Inconnue," which have created such an extraordinary sensation in Paris; "Russian Songs and Folk-Tales," illustrating Sclavonic Mythology and Russian Social Life; and "The Difficulties of the Liberal Party." Leonard Scott Pub. Co., 140 Fulton street, New York; $4 per year.

"HARPER'S MONTHLY" for April contains the first of a series of papers by General George B. McClellan on army organization, which give to those unfamiliar with such matters some idea of the work of mobilizing and providing for an army, in order that there may be an efficient force in the day of battle. George M. Towle contributes an opportune sketch of the character and career of Oliver Goldsmith, opportune because the centenary of the death of the loved poet and humorist falls in this year. This article is a comprehensive and entertaining sketch, made more valuable by numerous illustrations. The Farallon Islands, near San Francisco, famous as the home of sea lions and multitudes of birds, are described by Charles Nordoff. The people who wonder how all the beautiful and startling effects of the stage are produced will find at least a partial satisfaction of their curiosity in Olive Logan's contribution, entitled "The Secret Regions of the Stage." Moncure D. Conway writes of Ilkley, in England, distinguished for its manufactures, its antiquities, and its association with the lives of Heber, Turner, the Brontes, the Fairfaxes and Robert Collyer. There is the usual abundant provision of fiction and poetry by favorite writers, and also an article on "The Detective Classes in the United States," the deaf, dumb, blind and feeble-minded,—concerning which, as a member of a commission of the State of New Jersey, the author, Charles D. Deshler, has obtained some valuable statistics, and makes some suggestions worthy of attention.

The April GALAXY contains two tributes to the late Charles Astor Bristed, a frequent contributor, one of them by Richard Grant White. It contains also an article by Mr. Bristed (Carl Benson,) entitled "My Private Grief against George San L." Two articles that will be certain to attract the attention of students of literature are "A Visit to Tourguenef," by Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen, and "A Breakfast with Victorien Sardou," by Albert Rhodes. Henry James, Jr., contributes a charming account of European travel, and there are good poems by William Winter and T. W. Parsons. This number of the GALAXY is the best one we have seen in a long time.

The feature of the new number of SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY is the beginning of a new story by Jules Verne, entitled "The Mysterious Island." The author of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," and "A Tour Around the World in Eighty Days," can hardly fail of being one of the most popular of contributors. This story is translated from the numbers of the French periodical in which it is now appearing, and will be illustrated by the original pictures. It seems that M. Verne thinks "Robinson Crusoe" and the "Swiss Family Robinson" were well enough in their day as marvellous stories, but that it is somebody's duty now to show how human beings left on a desolate island would manage to live by turning to account their scientific knowledge without a wreck to break up, and the several other fortunate circumstances that enabled the heroes of other stories to survive their calamities. Several of the characters are Americans, and they are wrecked on the mysterious island from a balloon that started from America. Edward King describes, by the aid of "Champe" illustrations, a ramble in Virginia from Bristol to the sea. Augustus Blanvelt contributes a long paper on "Christ's Resurrection, scientifically considered," which is not likely to be passed by by any who are interested in the current discussions of matters relating to religious faith. A sketch of John Hay, who wrote "Jim Bludso," is given, and also a portrait of him.

IN BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE for March we find continuations of the serials "Valentine and his Brother," and "Disorder in Dreamland," and the first part of a new story, "Alice Lorraine," which promises to engross the reader in interest. "The Two Speranskys—Part II.," tells of Elizabeth Speransky Bagreeff, who, though unhappy in her domestic life, was the centre of a brilliant circle in St. Petersburgh, was a great traveller, and the author of several novels and other books written in French. "Lord Stanhope and Historical Queen Anne's Reign" is, perhaps, the most striking article in this number. It contains sketches of many of the prominent men of the day, including Marlborough, Godolphin, "Orator Henley," etc., besides a brief notice of some of the more important events of that reign. There are also a pair of poems, "Horatian Lyrics," and two political articles, "The Elections of 1868 and 1874," and "Mr. Gladstone's Night Attack and its Results."

"THE WETHERELL AFFAIR" is the title of a new novel by J. W. DeForest, for sale at the book stores, and published by Sheldon & Co. We never take up a book written by this author without feeling that we have a work worthy of perusal and a plot that will cause regret to be interrupted in. Mr. DeForest we consider to be a foremost writer among Americans, and he takes occasion in this volume to introduce a novel writer who ably states the difficulties experienced in the United States by authors who are obliged to compete with the works of the best writers of other countries without any of the advantages of an international copyright law. The book is filled with ideas and arguments that enchain the reader's attention. We are inclined to think Tupper is a little too much quoted, but we nearly lose sight of this fact in the new exceedingly apropos way he is introduced by Mrs. Dinneford. Judge Wetherell's stern Puritanism has many models in New England life today and Edward Wetherell's dislike to being ruled by such an influence has many sympathizers. The gifted yet superficial Count has his prototype in American life, while the self-sacrificing Walter Lehman and the bluff philologist, John Bowbler, are less prominent. Neatoris, heroine, possessed of a sublime faith, is a character which the novelist has painted in his best style. We commend the book.

Shape of the Moon.

[Cornhill (London) Magazine.]

The continental astronomer, Gussow, of Wilna, has very carefully examined some of De la Rue's lunar photographs, taken when the moon was at opposite stages of her balancing motion, and by noting how much the several craters, etc., are displaced, he has found the means of determining the shape of the moon's surface. According to his measurements, the greater part of the visible surface must be regarded as an enormous elevation, rising in the middle fully 70 miles above the mean level. In fact, the moon, according to these measurements, would come to be regarded as egg shaped, the smaller end of the egg being turned earthwards—only it will, of course, be understood that, regarded as a whole, the moon's body would not differ very markedly from the globular form. It would be shaped, to speak plainly, like a nearly round egg.

To Remove Grease Spots.

The ordinary method of removing grease spots on articles of clothing, etc., by means of benzine is not always very effectual, and removes less than it actually spreads. To remove a grease spot from a garment place a thick piece of good blotting paper underneath the stain and another piece above it, after thoroughly saturating the spot with benzine. The hot flat-iron is now applied to the upper piece of paper and pressed on it for some time. The result is the complete absorption of the grease by the blotting paper.

There doesn't occur to us, at present, any objection to be offered to those views.

Business Notices.

Ask Them!

An advertisement of a medicine, however candid and conscientious it may be, does not always carry conviction with it. The public know to their sorrow that the boastful claims put forth in behalf of many so-called remedies are literally "a delusion and a snare." Probably the best use, therefore, that can be made of the space devoted to this notice of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is to invite those who read it to inquire of the parties who have tested the curative and preventive properties of the article what they think of it. We earnestly request all doubters to ascertain from each of their friends and neighbors as have taken this standard tonic and alterative as a protection against malarious diseases, or as a cure for indigestion, liver complaint, constipation, rheumatism, nervous debility, headache, low spirits, languor, billiousness, &c., what Hostetter's Bitters has done for them. There is no testimony so trustworthy as that which is the result of personal experience.

Victims of Obscure Diseases, seeking safety and restored health, should use Dr. Helmbold's Extract Buchu. This article is officinal and standard. It is, moreover, the only preparation that develops the full value of Buchu as a diuretic. It is a perfect specif ic for all diseases of the urinary organs in male or female. Beware of counterfeits and imitations, which unscrupulous men are endeavoring to palm off upon Dr. Helmbold's reputation. Look out for the doctor's signature on the wrapper. For sale by all druggists.

NONE but a physician knows how much a reliable alterative is needed by the people. On all sides of us, in all communities everywhere, there are multitudes who suffer from complaints that nothing but an alterative cures.—Hence a great many of them have been made and put abroad with the assurance of being effectual. But they fail to accomplish the cures they promise, because they have not the intrinsic virtues they claim. In this state of the case, Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., of Lowell, have supplied a COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPARILLA, which proves to be the long-desired remedy. Its peculiar difference from other kindred preparations in the market is that it cures the diseases for which it is recommended, while they do not. We are assured of this fact by more than one intelligent physician in this neighborhood, and have the further evidence of our own experience of its truth.—[Nashville (Tenn.) Farmer.]

ANAKESIS is without doubt, the most infallible easy and scientific cure for PILES, ever discovered. 20,000 grateful patients attest its virtues, and physicians of all schools endorse it unequivocally. Lotions, ointments, and electuaries are only a waste of time and money. ANAKESIS relieves pain at once and cures absolutely. It is the discovery of DR. SILSBEE, a scientific physician, and has been pronounced the greatest contribution to medicine of the age. Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. Depot 46 Walker St., New York.

—At Eureka, Nevada, recently, a citizen whose character had been defamed, cowhided the defamer, the latter party submitting as though he approved of the punishment, and then joining his flogger in a glass of beer. Soon afterward another party whose fair name had been tarnished, administered to the already much-flogged individual a second dose of cowhide. By this time the thing had become monotonous and the slanderer sloped without ordering a second glass of beer.

Auditor J. H. Ela has received a note written by his son, Lieutenant Frederick P. Ela, which states that, having suffered for months with diarrhea, and seeing no hope of recovery, he determined to end his existence by jumping overboard. This clears the deserters whom Lieut. Ela had in charge at the time of his death, from the suspicion of murder.

Mr. A. C. Hoyt has been chosen chairman, and Mr. Augustus Walden secretary, of the school committee.

Commend us to our braggart neighbor of the Times for boasting. Our cash receipts from advertising exceed in amount those of all other papers in this city combined, yet they bolster up their daily issue with distorted items that only show their weakness and petty jealousy. Occasionally they get angry at receiving wood type and shop-worn garments and odd sizes of shoes for their pay, and the gangrene shows itself in rage that is as laughable as it is harmless.

The attention of householders is especially invited to the City notice in another column, regarding the cleansing of vaults, only three days remaining in which such work can be done, the first of April being the limit.

The surviving officers and crew of the U. S. S. Kearsarge are talking of a reunion, this year. Captain Thornton, the ranking officer, is now in command of the Monongahela. Of the 162 members of the ship's company in the engagement with the Alabama, 45 were New Hampshire men.

Notwithstanding the previous appearance in and around the city of flocks of robins and the avant courier of the hand-organ brigade, snow to the depth of about two inches fell on Saturday morning. This did not seem to discourage the robins any, for they whistled merrily as ever at daybreak; but the hand-organ man, happily, was temporarily squelched. O! could we only have a two-inch snowstorm every morning in the year.

The fourth annual Ball of the Wolfe Tone Club will be given on the evening of Easter Monday, April 6th, in Congress Hall.

An Indian Patriarch.

[San Francisco Chronicle.]

There is an Indian in Nicasio, Marin county, who is 111 years old. He was born not far from where now stands the little village of Olema, and his early days were spent with his tribe in hunting and fishing along the shores of Tomales Bay. When the missionary priests founded their missions in this State, they sent bodies of armed troops out into the neighboring country to subdue and capture the Indians and bring them into the missions. There they were baptized and converted, and put to work planting vineyards and herding stock. The subject of this sketch, then a mere youth, was among the Indians so captured and domesticated. He was naturally apt and industrious, and soon became quite a favorite with the old Padres. He frequently assisted the officiating priest at the altar, and for a long time commanded bodies of their Indian troops and acted in the capacity of overseer of their vineyards and stock-ranges.

When the Mexican Government sequestrated the property of the missions and the power of the Padres was broken up and destroyed, he with the rest of the Indians was thrown upon his own resources. Since that time he has lived in various portions of the State, but for a considerable period of time at the Indian rancheria near the village of Nicasio. He is highly respected by the Indians, who supply all his wants. Until a few years ago he was quite active and vigorous, but lately he has been gradually declining in health and strength. Although so old, he is very intelligent and can relate many interesting events connected with the history of the missions. He speaks Spanish fluently, but has little knowledge of English. He is a devout Catholic and observes as far as possible all the practices and requirements of the Romish Church.

—A lady had her dress trimmed with bugles before going to a ball. Her little daughter wanted to know if the bugles would blow when she danced. "Oh no," said the mother, "papa will do that when he sees the bill."

—A Cincinnati paper has a local article headed "Water Works in this City." Considering the length of time and amount of raw material in the way of prayers and tracts and money that has been "put up" in that city, it is about time that water should work.

—The observations of a married man have led to the conclusion that money put into mirrors is a good investment, as they afford a marvelous amount of comfort and gratification to a woman. He says his wife thinks just as much of consulting her glass when she ties on her apron as when she ties on her bonnet; and while he goes to the door at once when there is a rap, she exclaims, "Mercy! Joseph, who is that?" and dashes for the looking-glass.

—Horace Lee, of Westport, Conn., employed at the Springfield armory, has invented a magazine revolver, having the simple excellence of an ordinary revolving pistol, with the power of firing a greater number of shots. His exhibited pistols are of two sizes, a cavalry weapon, firing twenty-two successive shots, and a pocket pistol firing twelve. The former is not heavier than Smith & Wesson's Russian pistol, and will cost in manufacture but a dollar apiece more. The Remington company have offered Mr. Lee a handsome sum for his patent. Some one in Utica has offered to give land for a factory, if a company can be organized to manufacture the pistols, and that is what it is now proposed to do.

—In 1870 Elizabeth Smith of Chicago made up her mind to get rid of her drunken husband John. She went to a secret-working divorce lawyer, and paid him ten dollars to secure her freedom. John heard of the matter, and so convincingly promised reform that Mrs. Smith paid the lawyer ten dollars more and told him to drop the proceedings. The husband thereafter behaved himself, and the pair lived happily. Lately he sold a house, and in the transfer of the title a record was found of a divorce granted in 1870 between Elizabeth and John Smith. The lawyer had already got the decree when the lady changed her mind, but did not tell her so. So they had been living over three years together unmarried. They went at once to a minister and were married over again.

City of Portsmouth.

THE PUBLIC ATTENTION is called to the following provisions of the City Ordinances relative to the vaults and privies:

"Open unventilated privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth.

And owners and occupiers of buildings having such vaults and privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of APRIL in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified."

Citizens desiring to have their vaults cleaned may send their names to HAVEN L. SCOTT, Superintendent of the City Farm, and the city teams will do the work for two dollars per load. Per Order.

An Open Letter.

To His Honor F. W. Miller, Esq., Mayor elect of Portsmouth.

The man whom the people have elevated from the humble calling of a "Miller" to his "Honor" his "Worship!"—May his mill grind out the public weal like the mill of the "Gods," "slow but sure."—"Honor and shame from no condition rise, act well your part, there all the honor lies."

Very humbly and truly your friend,

Im E. B. GOODALL.

Early Potatoes.

[Country Gentleman.]

A little care will secure early potatoes two or three weeks before the time they will be ready to use if planted the common way in open ground. Cut the pieces of the earliest sorts, and place them under an inch or two in a hot-bed, so closely in drills that they will touch, so as to economize room. When the ground is dry enough, set them out, usually after the tops have three or four inches. They will come on rapidly. If a frost should occur after they are set out, they may be protected with newspapers, but we have never known them to be materially injured, even if the tops were nipped a little by frost. Next to a hot-bed, they may be easily sprouted in a warm room. Even when the sprouts grow accidentally, potatoes may be had some days earlier by carefully preserving the sprouts in setting them out.

Cultivation of Smilax.

Mr. J. Vick, than whom there is no better authority as a florist, gives the following directions for the household culture of this plant, now so much used in floral decorations, for twining in the hair and for trimming party dresses: "With little care it can be grown successfully as a house plant. The seeds should be sown in a box or in pots in the house, and should be kept moist till the young plants appear. The seed being rather slow to germinate, you must not think it bad if it does not make its appearance in two weeks. The young plants should be potted off into three-inch pots as soon as they are three or four inches high. Once a year the bulbs should be allowed to dry off and rest. They will start into growth again in about six weeks. The vine does not require the full sun, but it will grow well in a partially shaded situation. It can be trained on a small thread across the window or around pictures. It is a climbing vine, and will attach itself to a string in just the right condition to use for wreaths, etc., or when required for lighter work, the branches which become entangled can be separated."

—An Indiana paper thus politely expresses an opinion of a judge: "He knows just about as much about law as a mule of mineralogy—the chances being in favor of the mule."

—An Irishman being asked in court for his certificate of marriage, showed a big scar on his head, about the size of a small shovel.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often removes the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus lonely, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair regrows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY DROPSY AND RUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

BEHOLD!
WILSON'S
SUPERPHOSPHATE
At Auction!
My plan of selling Superphosphate without consignment has proved so successful and has given such universal satisfaction to the Farmers, that I have decided to pursue a similar course this season, and shall make arrangements so that the Farmers in all towns in New England will have an opportunity of purchasing some of my Superphosphates, either of the dealers or of my agents. I have none out on commission, and shall send none out in that way. No goods will be sent from the works until sold, and purchasers can thus rely on receiving fresh goods whenever they choose to buy. The experience that I have had in selling Superphosphate on commission, has taught me that the plan is not the right one. In many instances the goods are not properly taken care of, but often remain exposed to the weather, summer and winter, and the purchaser who buys from a lot which has thus lain through several seasons may (and perhaps justly) imagine that the Fertilizer is not up to the standard, when in reality the goods were of extra quality at the time they left the Manufactory, and would still have been had they been properly cared for. It is to avoid this and other abuses that I decline to commission any superphosphate.
My Agent M. D. Lawrence will be at the following places at the time named, ready to receive orders, price to be fixed by auction.
The only Fertilizer that has ever received a SILVER MEDAL from the N. E. AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood, are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are cute and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organs into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send testimonials of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as sure. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

Charles Sumner.

[New York Nation.]

The passing tribute which the world seeks to render to a great man at his death is never a record of both his virtues and his faults. By it, however, we may measure approximately the estimate which mankind for the time places upon his character and works, and judge with tolerable accuracy whether he belonged at his end to the present or the past. The two deaths which have fallen upon the country during the present month present this contrast. Mr. Fillmore's shows how small a dot on the chart of history a Presidential term a century hence will appear. The newspapers have had to remind their readers that he was President, and have had little to say besides speaking approvingly of his fair character and patient industry and honorable impartiality. These are not virtues to be lightly spoken of, but they do not fill the measure of greatness. The Presidential office by usage takes a man out of an active participation in the affairs of the country, and as his term of office drops into the past his works seem to follow it and not him. Mr. Sumner, one would have said, had about reached the end of his career, but the feeling which has been universally evinced shows that the career had, in fact, not yet closed when death divided him from it. Always an antagonist of some one, and never knowing a moment of political calm or peace, he goes down to the grave lamented by that class which has learned to lean almost exclusively upon him, and respected by the great body of those with whom he differed and with whom he warred.

We do not measure this respect by the adulation which has been poured out at his obsequies. Our public press speaks well rather than discriminatingly of the dead. The spectacle of senators choked with grief at the loss of a man who did not generally respect them, and who spent much of the failing strength of his latest years in dealing them the heaviest blows that he was capable of giving, is a spectacle which does not move the heart nor mislead the understanding. Nevertheless, both now and hereafter, it must be seen that his death produced a great effect upon the public mind, attributable to something more than gratitude for past services or a sense of dependence upon services yet to come. The public have never leaned upon Mr. Sumner, nor can it be said that they have felt for him any of that affection which is frequently bestowed on public men. For a brief period—that is, during the exciting days of the war—they went over toward him, and his extreme views became for the time their views; but for the greater part of his life he has been a thorn in the side of the majority. It was inevitable that it should be so, for the working life which he embraced was the advocacy of a weak minority; and this advocacy consisted in proving to all men who differed with him that he upheld the right and they the wrong. If he had gone down a few years sooner, there would have been a sense of relief in many men's minds, but, as it is, he has fought out well-nigh all his battles, and in his fall nearly all men are ready to forget the disquietude he has caused them, and, remembering only his undaunted devotion, yield him the tribute of respect and admiration.

His personal character is easily analyzed, and in it there is little or nothing to be unfolded or explained. Every man who has intelligently reading the daily newspapers has seen the full picture. Devotedness and culture, two qualities not likely to be united in popular belief, were his chief characteristics. On the one side there was the giving up of his entire service to what he believed to be the greatest of causes upon the world's stage, and, on the other, an elaboration in every detail of his public and private life. His policy was equally clear. There are no mysteries to be explained or contradictions to be reconciled. It was a transparent policy, and consisted simply in always attacking by the most open means. Upon the chess-board of statesmanship he was no strategist, and if he ever went upon it, it was to knock to pieces the moves of others. Of all our statesmen who were prominent before, during, and after the war (those three differing stages of our history equivalent in their conditions to three generations of life) he was the only one who has not been charged with inconsistency. This cannot be attributed to a solitary rectitude of character, but to the fact that he aimed from the beginning at an object which could only be attained at the end. He drew a line at the first so far in advance of what was, and so close to what was to be, that in the then condition of things it must have remained an impracticability. In his march toward this line he was harassed and checked and apparently beaten, but, so far as concerned his individuality, he never halted or deviated. From time to time concessions were made, not in the hope of satisfying him, but to satisfy the public as they drew nearer to Mr. Sumner's position. He took these concessions as they came, but never upon the condition that he would not immediately demand more. In fact, he never gave up all that in his extremest views he sought to attain, and hence he was never inconsistent. Most assuredly, what he was at the end, that he had been at the beginning. Events had moved forward faster and further than ever before in the history of the world, but they had not quite reached the line of rest which he traced when, a quarter of a century ago, his public life began.

But for these reasons it must be said that Mr. Sumner did not arrive at the full responsibilities, nor indeed assume the true duties, of a statesman. We do not for a moment the vulgar cry, not yet forgotten, that he was "nothing but an Abolition orator," and we fully believe the statement that he made about the time of his last re-election, in which, with honestly earned self-approval, he pointed to his faithful, assidous diligence, extending to every legislative duty which had been confided to him. Neither do we doubt that while ordinary politicians derided him as a man absorbed in "the negro question," he was really giving more care and attention to ordinary legislative topics than nine-tenths of the Senate. Nevertheless, he took into his guardianship a part rather than the whole, and remained always something more than a magnificent advocate but something less than a true statesman. Statesmanship is the science of guiding and governing the world as it exists; of using present means for the redress of present evils; of conceding wisely where concession is indispensable, and of leading men by a practical road though toward an ideal end. Such a science requires a sense of guardianship over the whole; the sacrifice of much that is a matter of sincere conviction; the power to stop short of what may have been projected; and the moral courage that is not afraid of an honest inconsistency. At the beginning of this half-century it was the office of true statesmanship to educate as rapidly as might be the masters for emancipation and the slaves for freedom; and then at the proper time to end slavery with the smallest possible jar that could be given to the social system of the country. It was the policy of Mr. Sumner to war upon slavery by all constitutional means; to end it at the earliest possible moment regardless of all consequences; and to force it to such extremes that, to use his own words, it would "die like a rat in its hole." Such being his nature, there has never been a time and there never could be a time when a majority of the people would have confided the country to his care. As to that portion of the people who have of late years believed in him, and have had good reason to believe in him, it has not been the confidence of a minority of society in any just sense of the term, but of a class as against other classes. In the great battle for their rights, they knew that, if he was not supremely wise, he was supremely faithful; but the confines of the field limited their trust in his judgment. The lack of practical statesmanship in the present day is also strongly illustrated by Mr. Sumner's public life. That a man so learned, so painstaking, so unsparing of labor, so conversant with the experience of other nations and of our own, should have done so little to perfect the practical working of our Government or to provide for the actual necessities of the people, shows how completely we have overlooked that necessary part of real statesmanship. To understand it fully, we have but to glance at Mr. Webster preparing himself for legislative work by reading through all of the English statutes, and carefully studying every work and speech and pamphlet that had been published on finance, or we have but to turn back to that earlier group of statesmen who dealt not merely in Declarations of Independence, but brought their disorganized and impoverished country into the rank of prosperous nations by every practical detail of intelligent statesmanship.

The niche which Mr. Sumner has filled in our history seems to have been built for him. By nature and by education he was peculiarly fitted, not for persuading, pleasing, instructing, or guiding—not, in short, for the ordinary work of the world, but for extolling what he thought was noble and denouncing what he thought was wrong. At an earlier day, he would not have had such auditors, and at a later he would not have had such themes. There was a concurrence, too, of time and place. Massachusetts was certainly the only State that would have sent Mr. Sumner to the Senate, and was probably the only State that would have upheld him as firmly. He entered Congress as a representative man from the lower portion of the country ready to be represented. When Mr. Sumner went abroad, his recovery uncertain and distant, no place-hunter ventured to suggest the necessity of having an active man in his stead, and the State kept his chair empty—a constant menace to the South as to how she would be represented. When it was known that he would be unable to resume his duties, Massachusetts, though a Free-soil member could not well be spared from the Senate, re-elected him by the unanimous vote of one House and the almost unanimous vote of the other. His numerous re-elections have been in part avowals that what the State did in former times she still stands by, and recognitions of the fact that her own history in the conflict with slavery was almost identical with his. Further: it had been his painful good-fortune to have suffered in the conflict as soldiers suffer in the field. The blood of a Massachusetts senator had literally stained the Senate Chamber for a cause which Massachusetts believed sacred, and a deep and honest hero-worship resolved that he should alway remain in that Senate, a witness of the State's fidelity both to the cause and to him. Whether he would have been again re-elected may be doubted. The resolution of censure was a trick betimes to break his power where it was strongest—in the sensibilities of the people.

It may be that not the least useful effect of his life will be the lofty example which it furnishes to young men of wealth in our frivolous and mercenary day. In youth he practised the intellectual discipline of age, and in age he was actuated by the undisciplined earnestness of youth. The small fortune which, in a common prase, "was just enough to ruin a young man," he used in the work of self-culture. We may note his manly beauty and fastidious dress, his elegant accomplishments and hereditary connection with the fashionable and pleasure-seeking circles of society, to bring out the contrast of his work on the American Jurist the reports of the Circuit Court, the teaching in the Law School, his edition of "Vesey," his prolonged study of art and modern languages, and his assiduous intercourse with the most elevated and able men in every land.

As to his absolute integrity, it is needless for his eulogists to speak. To say that no Administration ever bought him with its political patronage; that he never tried to debauch his party with the same plunder; that he never used his place to rob the Government or to prey upon the citizens; that suspicion never smirched his name with charges of ill-gotten gain denied with artful duplicity; that he was never silent when he believed he ought to speak, nor voted for a bill when he knew he ought to vote against it, is to tell men what they already know—to tell them that the sun rose yesterday and the day before. We see defects in his character and errors in his course, but above them rises the majesty of a pure life. And the eulogy that he would have preferred himself is that which may be most truly pronounced upon him; his life was devoted to an unending effort to secure for a wronged and degraded race the rights of men.

Bad for the "Administration."

The Maine Standard, edited by Hon. Eben F. Pillsbury, after giving the administration fits about the navy yards, says:

But the democrats of New Hampshire will now have in their power to put an end to such infamous intermeddling in the local affairs of their State by the general government, and we hope they will have the firmness to do it promptly and thereby administer a much needed and wholesome rebuke to the present administration.

That advice, if followed, will settle "the present administration" without a doubt; a "wholesome rebuke" from "the democrats of New Hampshire" is more than any administration could stand. Did Mr. Pillsbury ever read the story of the goat which alighted on the horn of the ox, and fancied his weight might be oppressive? The Standard continues:

Let them, as soon as the next Legislature is organized, proceed to inaugurate the necessary measures to so change the organic law of the State defining the right of suffrage, that no man shall be allowed to vote at any election who has within thirty days previous thereto, held any office under, or been in the employ of the general government, with such exceptions and qualifications as may be deemed necessary.

What a tremendous fellow the Hon. Eben must be? The proposition to disfranchise all persons who within thirty days of a State election have "held any office under or been in the employ of the general government, with such exceptions and qualification as may be deemed necessary," reminds us of the action of another Maine patriot, residing in Kittery, who in the good old days of Andy Johnson and "my policy" went around soliciting signatures to a petition to the selectmen of that town to insert in the election warrant a clause "to see if the town would vote to tax United States bonds!" He only managed to get six signatures; so the clause mentioned was not inserted in the warrant, Kittery did not vote to tax the bonds, and the Union therefore still exists, the desperate and fratricidal conflict, Kittery vs. The United States, having happily been averted. But it is not certain that "the democrats of New Hampshire" will be so magnanimous as their brethren of Kittery; they may decide to shatter the national government by disfranchising all its officers and employes,—in which case we suggest that they extend the rule still further, and prohibit corporation employes from voting. If they think this prohibition too sweeping, they can limit its application to the railroad or other corporations whose employes vote at the dictation of Mr. Weston and his friends. But the simplest and most effective plan (and one quite as feasible as the one proposed.) would be to prohibit any one, whether employed by the general government or the railroads or not employed at all, from voting, unless he vote the straight democratic ticket. This, we think, would fix things just about right.

Readables.

Lester Seymour, an adventurer, who recently went to Pittsfield, Mass., and engaged Mrs. Scott-Siddons to give a reading there, paid that lady with a worthless check for $250, pocketed the entire receipts (about $500) and fled, leaving other bills to the amount of several hundred dollars. Mrs. Siddons being under engagement to the Boston lecture bureau, the $250 loss falls on them.

Information has been received in Portland that Captain Frank Russell, of the brig Wenonah of that port, had absconded from New Orleans with $3000 in freight money and had bonded the vessel for $2000 more. He has been captain of the vessel several years. Nothing is known of his whereabouts.

Five hundred and seventy-five State troops and a battery have arrived at Susquehanna, Penn., to keep the peace between the Erie Railroad and its striking employes. The latter allowed the passenger trains to go, but would not permit the freight trains to move. Negotiations looking to a treaty of peace are pending.

Marshal Serrano's attack upon the Carlists at Bilboa, Spain, has been successful, the Carlists having been driven by the republican troops.

The House Committee on Civil Service Reform on Thursday examined Hon. J. H. Ela, Fifth Auditor of the Treasury, in regard to the allowances made to internal revenue collectors, etc., with a view of fixing stated salaries for such officers instead of any and all allowances.

The decision of the Congregational council to settle the controversy with Plymouth church was rendered on Saturday. It advises continued fellowship with the church, while expressing disapproval of the action which was the occasion of the calling of the council.

W. L. Tirrell, the Covington, Ky., correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, shot and killed Hon. Harvey Myers at Covington, Kentucky. The shooting was the result of a grudge of long standing.

The mayor of Bangor has directed the city marshal to notify all liquor dealers to stop the traffic, and notice was duly served on them all on Friday. The hotel keepers were notified.

Remarkes the Charlestown Advertiser: Poor Dawes is in a bad way for a Christian statesman and unwashed Credit Mobilier. He says that he was sacrificed last year for Senator because opposed to Gen. Ben., and is now to be sacrificed again because Gen. Ben. is supposed to be friendly to him. But that's not what's the matter. The ruffled shirt republicans now oppose him because it is believed by them, that, to succeed, he swapped horses in the middle of the stream, and it isn't their fault if he has wet his feet.

The ballot for Senator in the Massachusetts legislature, Monday, gave Dawes 85, Hoar 73, Curtis 72, Adams 15, Banks 7, scattering 4. No choice.

State News.

On Monday night, a son of Mr. Frank Annis of Londonderry was painfully injured. He was taking hay from the barn floor when a young woman, who was throwing it from the scaffold, and who did not know the boy's whereabouts threw the fork. One of the tines struck the boy in the back of the neck and penetrated to his lungs. Although it was thought at the time that the wound was fatal, the boy is in a fair way of recovery.

A distressing accident occurred at Orange recently, by which a little son of Jeff Chase was probably fatally injured. Some school children were at play throwing an iron ball, when the child ran between the players, the ball striking him upon the head and fracturing his skull.

John Letndre was seriously injured at the Amoskeag Axe Factory in Manchester on Friday by the explosion of a grindstone. He was thrown a distance of fifteen feet. His recovery is doubtful.

The report that Dartmouth College had come into possession of a piece of woodland worth $100,000 through the efforts of one of its trustees, is now said to be entirly without foundation. It may have started from the fact that there is a prospect that the lands owned by the college in the White Mountain region would increase in value on the completion of the new railroad.

Russell Phelps' 100th birthday was honored in Gilmanton by a social gathering of his neighbors, on March 14th.

Mr. James Fellows was at work in his planing mill at Dorchester on Thursday, when his glove caught in the rollers, and his left arm was immediately drawn in the machine. Luckily, the belt had been removed, as is customary in planing the last board, and the pressure of the arm in the rollers stopped the motion. Here Mr. Fellows was held tightly by the arm and begged his men to liberate him by cutting off with their knives the wounded member. No one having the courage or inclination to do this, he borrowed a knife of one of them, and, with his free hand, cut himself loose from the planer. He is now doing well.

—Recent experiments have demonstrated that by putting cut flowers in a vase, with a little water, under a glass shade, they will be preserved for a long time in fresh beauty. Some maidenhair fern thus treated was as perfect at the end of a fortnight as when it was first placed under the glass. It is suggested that this blooming might be still further prolonged by inserting the flower stems in white sand instead of in water alone.

—Some of the Alabama negroes are not unmindful of their equality before the law. It was only the other day that a lady met an old colored woman in Montgomery whom she knew. She met her with "howdy, Aunt Marie." The aged negress raised herself erect, placed her arms akimbo, and remarked loftily, looking sidewise: "I ain't yer ant, and I ain't yer uncle; I'se yer ekal!" and indignantly passed on.

—One of the western members of the Massachusetts house, who has found daily more and more difficulty in elbowing his way to his seat through the crowd of custom-house and internal revenue officials who have thronged the State house corridors, went down to the custom-house the other day, wandered through the entries and up stairs, looked at the protraits of the honorable men who in former years had filled the collector's chair, and finally drew off his overcoat and sat down with an air of expectancy. Soon after, one of the men who receive a salary from the custom-house and do their hardest work at the State house, came in and nodded, with a look of inquiry, as much as to say, "What are you here for?" "What time does the legislature meet?" innocently inquired the member. "At the usual hour, I suppose," was the wondering reply. "Doesn't it meet here?" "No, indeed; what do you mean by such a question?" "Why," said the member, with a quiet smile, "you fellows from the custom-house have moved into the State house, and I supposed it had been arranged that we were to meet here." The silence which followed showed that the joke was not enjoyed equally by all who heard it.

—"Everything about the Atcheen war," says an exchange, "is spicy. It began about pepper, is carried on by soldiers armed with maces, and now the troops are all mustered on both sides, and the Dutchmen will probably finish up the meal by swallowing them all without salt."

Business Notices.

Ask Them!

An advertisement of a medicine, however candid and conscientious it may be, does not always carry conviction with it. The public know to their sorrow that the beautful claims put forth in behalf of many so-called remedies are literally a delusion and a snare." Probably the best use, therefore, that can be made of the space devoted to this notice of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is to invite those who read it to inquire of the parties who have tested the curative and preventive properties of the article what they think of it. We earnestly request all doubters to ascertain from such of their friends and neighbors as have taken this standard tonic and alterative as a protection against malarious diseases, or as a cure for indigestion, liver complaint, constipation, rheumatism, nervous debility, headache, low spirits, languor, billiousness, &c., what Hostetter's Bitters has done for them. There is no testimony so trustworthy as that which is the result of personal experience.

Victims of Obscure Diseases, seeking safety and restored health, should use Dr. Helmbold's Extract Buchu. This article is officinal and standard. It is, moreover, the only preparation that develops the full value of Buchu as a diuretic. It is a perfect specific for all diseases of the urinary organs in male or female. Beware of counterfeits and imitations, which unscrupulous men are endeavoring to palm off upon Dr. Helmbold's reputation. Look out for the doctor's signature on the wrapper. For sale by all druggists.

None but a physician knows how much a reliable alterative is needed by the people. On all sides of us, in all communities everywhere, there are multitudes who suffer from complaints that nothing but an alterative cures.—Hence a great many of them have been made and put abroad with the assurance of being effectual. But they fail to accomplish the cures they promise, because they have not the intrinsic virtues they claim. In this state of the case, DR. J. C. AYER & CO., of Lowell, have supplied a COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPARILLA, which proves to be the long-desired remedy. Its peculiar difference from other kindred preparations in the market is that it cures the diseases for which it is recommended, while they do not. We are assured of this fact by more than one intelligent physician in this neighborhood, and have the further evidence of our own experience of its truth.—[Nashville (Tenn.) Farmer.]

ANAKESIS is without doubt, the most infallible easy and scientific cure for PILES, ever discovered. 20,000 grateful patients attest its virtues, and physicians of all schools endorse it unequivocally. Lotions, ointments, and electuaries are only a waste of time and money. ANAKESIS relieves pain at once and cures absolutely. It is the discovery of DR. SILSBEE, a scientific physician, and has been pronounced the greatest contribution to medicine of the age. Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. Depot 46 Walker St., New York.

Local Matters.

Laconics.

The popularity of the Jubilee Singers has not decreased, judging by the large attendance at their Sunday evening concert. We missed the strong tenor of their late leader, but it was offset by the absence of his "everlasting gab." We would suggest that when an encore is called for, the audience would be as well pleased with a change of tune; but if no change of tune is made, two or three verses are sufficient. The repetition of a dozen is a little tedious, sometimes.

This evening is the time and the Temple the place, when and where music lovers will have a treat.—Master Willie E. Nowell's grand concert of vocal and instrumental music. Harlow's full Band will give some choice selections, Miss Clara Nickels and a male quartette will each sing several songs, Master Nowell will perform some solos on the violin, and Master Harry Bartlett, (son of Jas. P. Bartlett, Esq.,) will with his teacher play a violin duet. Attractions enough for one evening. See advertisement.

The following is a syllabus of Prof. Gunning's lecture to be delivered this evening in Mechanics' Hall: A segment of earth history through the rocks from the White Hills to the Rocky Mountains; two dynasties of the animal kingdom, their rise and culmination, the decline of the one, and death of the other The principal forms of these bygone creations will be drawn during the lecture, and the testimony they bear on the great question of the origin of species set forth.

A young daughter of Mr. Franklin N. Paul attended school on Friday and died of scarlet fever Saturday afternoon. Four children attending the same school, are ill with it, including a daughter of Mayor Marvin.

The Times want a glimpse at our circulation. How would you like a look into our wallet, neighbor? And by the way, won't you please advise us as to the quantity of food we shall eat, and the number of hours we should sleep.

Fire destroyed an old barn on the wharf at the southerly side of Noble's island, recently purchased by the railroad company. A lot of old traps belonging to Mr. Meshach Muchemore, were burned.

The new City Government will be inaugurated next Tuesday, April 7th.

At the annual town meeting at Eliot, Me., the following officers (democrats) were elected by twenty majority: town clerk, Howard Staples; selectmen, etc., Samuel Cole, John L. Jenks, Alexander Junkins; town agent, Jefferson Raitt; superintending school committee, Ichabod Cole; treasurer, William O. Jones; collector of taxes, John F. Raitt; constable, Percival B. Downing; auditor, Elisha G. Ferguson.

Ventilation and Mechanics' Hall.

EDS. CHRONICLE: Some one has called my attention to a communication in the CHRONICLE of March 26th. I indorse everything your correspondent has said about ventilation in general, and the ventilation of Mechanics' Hall in particular on the evening of my lecture. We have educated the eye and the ear, but in all that pertains to the lungs we are still savages of the Stone Age. Feeling that the ventilation was bad I made a request before taking the platform, that the windows should be dropped "a little." They were lowered too much, and some persons in the audience, feeling the air in gusts, had them closed. The mistake was in lowering the windows too much. If a hall must be ventilated in this way let the windows all be lowered a very little. It is my aim to have a proper regard for the lungs of my audiendiece, and those who honor me with their presence hereafter, shall not sit in foul air. W. D. GUNNING.

Fire at Hampton.

The house and barn of David Brown, of Hampton, near the town hall, were totally destroyed by fire, Monday afternoon, with their contents. Loss $7500; insurance $3500 or $4000. Other buildings near by were several times on fire, and had the wind been a little further north they must have been burned. Frank Perkins fell from the roof of a barn and dislocated one ankle, receiving also other severe injuries.

The New Orleans Prize-Money.

The Secretary of the Navy has sent an order to the fourth auditor of the Treasury, requiring that officer to pay the amounts of prize bounty money due for the capture of New Orleans and the destruction of the enemy's ships. The total amount of prize money proper is $530,000 and $200,000 additional bounty for the destruction of rebel vessels. The number of United States ships of war that took part in the engagements is forty-four, and the number of officers and men who will share in the prize awards is between 2500 and 3000. Of the amount of the award the Farragut estate will receive one-twentieth, or about $35,000. One of the causes of delay of this distribution was the consideration of the question as to what share the division commanders should have. Among those in this vicinity who will profit by the award are Carpenter Joseph B. Cox, U. S. N., (wounded in action,) of Kittery; Mr. Nelson Goodrich, who was highly complimented in the official report for sticking to his post (that of Boatswain) till the fight was over, regardless of a severe wound received early in the action from a piece of shell; Messrs. Gustavus Mason and Edwin Clark; the heirs of Walter Chesley, John Junkins, Wm. Hayes and Nelson Downing, Jr., (the latter killed in action,) all of the U. S. S. "Pensacola;" Thomas B. Gammon and William Ellison, of the "Portsmouth;" William Jellison, of the "Richmond;" Gunner Thomas Fortune, (now stationed at the navy yard,) of the "Verona," which went to the bottom during the fight with the forts and the rebel fleet; and several others.

Accident at Seabrook.

On Sunday, Jedediah Rowe, who is about 25 years of age, and James Wright, a lad of fifteen, went gunning for birds in a float, and while Wright was lying in the bow Rowe raised his gun from the bottom to fire at some ducks. The hammer caught in the seat and both barrels of the gun were discharged, the contents entering the back of young Wright's head. He died at eleven o'clock, Sunday evening.

Fast-Day Proclamation.

By advice of the Executive Council, I hereby appoint Thursday, the 9th day of April next, as a day of Fasting, Humiliation and Prayer, and recommend its appropriate observance as such by the people of this State.

It is our duty to honor this religious custom of our Fathers, both to show our reverence for their many virtues and to evince our humble recognition of entire dependence upon Almighty God for the many mercies and blessings which we enjoy.

Abstaining from our usual business avocations, let us unite on that day in public and private prayer and supplications to God for a continuance to us of His many favors and mercies: humbly imploring that by His blessings our labors may result in the welfare and happiness of all our people.

Beseeching His care for our republican institutions, that he will be pleased to guard them against injury from individual fraud and selfishness.

That He will guide those elected to rule over us to the enactment only of just and equal laws, such as will promote the welfare of the State, encourage among us temperance, morality and virtue, and incline the hearts of our people to a life of simplicity, sobriety, integrity and reverence for the law.

Given at the Council Chamber, in Concord, this twenty-fourth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and of the independence of the United States the ninety-eighth. E. A. STRAW.

—A negress 102 years old smashed in a neighbor's windows at New Haven a few days ago, but the police court let her off on account of her age.

—It is reported, says the Lawrence Eagle, that one of our peace-loving husbands a few months ago, agreed to give his wife three dollars a week to maintain comparative silence, deducting one cent for each superfluous word she uttered. She now owes him nearly enough to pay the city debt.

—"Old Probabilities" is at a discount. It is claimed that Captain McAleer of Pittsburg, Pa., is the only man on this continent who can to a certainty foretell the changes in the weather a month in advance; also when there is to be a rise in the river. His prophecies for the past five or six years has been so accurate that the coal men of Pittsburg have invariably consulted him in regard to a coalboat rise, and before the time arrives which he has predicted, the fleet is always put in trim to leave.

SCROFULA.

SCROFULOUS HUMORS.

If VEGETINE will relieve pain, cleanse, purify and cure such diseases, restoring the patient to perfect health after try g different physicians, many remedies, suffering for years, is it not conclusive proof, if you are a sufferer, you can be cured? Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood, in the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the Great Blood-Purifier. The disease or disease originates in the blood; and no medicine that does not act directly upon it, to purify and renovate, has any just claim upon public attention. When the blood becomes lifeless and stagnant, either from change of weather or climate, want of exercise, irregular diet, or from any other cause, the VEGETINE will renew the blood, carry off the putrid humors, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, and impart a tone of vigor to the whole body. The conviction is, in the public mind as well as in the medical profession, that the remedies supplied by the Vegetable Kingdom are more safe, more successful, in the cure of disease, than mineral medicines. VEGETINE is composed of roots, barks, and herbs. It is pleasant to take, and perfectly safe to give an infant. In Scrofula the VEGETINE has performed wonderful cures, where many other remedies have failed, as will be seen by the following unsolicited testimonials:

A Walking Miracle.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir:—Though a stranger I want to inform you what VEGETINE has done for me.

Last Christmas scrofula made its appearance in my system—large running ulcers appearing on me as follows: One on each of my arms, one on my thigh, which extended to the seat, one on my head, which cut into the skull bone, one on my left leg, which became so bad that two physicians came to amputate the limb, though upon consultation concluded not to do so, as my whole body was so full of scrofula that they deemed it advisable to cut the sore, which was painful beyond description, and there was a quart of matter sent from this one sore. The physicians all gave me up to die, and said they could do no more for me. Both of my legs were drawn up to my seat, and it was thought if I did get up again I would be a cripple for life.

When in this condition I saw VEGETINE advertised, and commenced taking it in March, and followed on with it, until I had used 16 bottles, and this morning I am going to wash down, a well man. All my townsmen say it is a miracle to see me round walking and working.

In conclusion I will add, when I was enduring such great suffering, from that dreadful disease, Scrofula, I prayed to the Lord above to take me on of this world, but as VEGETINE has restored to me the blessings of health, I desire more than ever to live, that I may be of some purpose to my fellow man, as I know of no better way to aid suffering humanity, than to enclose you this statement of my case, with an earnest hope that you will publish it, and it will afford me pleasure to reply to any communication which I may receive therefrom.

I am, Sir, very respectfully,

WILLIAM PAYN

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to health; gives vigor, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively appearance; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low state of the system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and its valuable cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most official cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

CONSUMPTION

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

SCROFULA.
SCROFULOUS HUMORS.
If VEGETINE will relieve pain, cleanse, purify and cure such diseases, restoring the patient to perfect health after trying different physicians, many remedies, suffering for years, is it not conclusive proof, if you are a sufferer, you can be cured? Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood, in the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the 'Great Blood-Purifier.' The great source of disease originates in the blood; and no medicine that does not act directly upon it, to purify and revivate, has any just claim upon public attention. When the blood becomes listless and stagnant, either from change of weather or climate, want of exercise, irregular diet, or from any other cause, the VEGETINE will renew the blood, carry off the putrid humors, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, and impart a tone of vigor to the whole body. The conviction is, in the public mind as well as in the medical profession, that the remedies supplied by the Vegetable Kingdom are more safe, more successful, in the cure of disease, than mineral medicines. VEGETINE is composed of roots, barks, and herbs. It is pleasant to take, and perfectly safe to give an infant. In Scrofula the VEGETINE has performed wonderful cures, where many other remedies have failed, as will be seen by the following unsolicited testimonial:

A Walking Miracle.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:
Dear Sir:—Though a stranger I want to inform you what VEGETINE has done for me.
Last Christmas scrofula made its appearance in my system—large running ulcers appearing on me as follows: One on each of my arms, one on my thigh, which extended to the seat, one on my head, which eat into the skull bone, one on my left leg, which became so bad that a physician came to amputate the limb, though upon consultation concluded not to do so, as my whole body was so full of Scrofula they deemed it advisable to cut the sore, which was painful beyond description, and there was a quart of matter run from this one sore. The physicians all gave me up to die, and said they could do no more for me. Both of my legs were drawn up to my seat, and it was thought if I did get up again I would be a cripple for life.
When in this condition I saw VEGETINE advertised, and commenced taking it in March, and followed on with it, until I had used 16 bottles, and this morning I am going to plough corn, a well man. All my townsmen say it is a miracle to see me round walking and working.
In conclusion I will add, when I was enduring such great suffering, from that dreadful disease, Scrofula, I prayed to the Lord above to take me out of this world, but as VEGETINE has restored to me the blessings of health, I desire more than ever to live, that I may be of some purpose to my fellow man, and I know of no better way to aid suffering humanity, than to enclose you this statement of my case, with an earnest hope you will publish it, and it will afford me pleasure to reply to any communication which I may receive therefrom.
I am, Sir, very respectfully,
WILLIAM PAYN

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,
For all the Purposes of a Family Physic
CURING
Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood,
are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

Daily Chronicle.

All Fools Day.

The custom of sending people on empty errands, and laughing at them, is common in every country in Europe and wherever the European races have settled. Two accounts are given of the origin of All-Fools Day. The Oriental scholars say it is derived from hali feast among the Hindoos, but the older opinion is that it comes from a celebration of Christ's being sent about to and fro between Herod, Pilate, and Caiaphas.

In Bayle it is related that Cardau, having found among his father's papers that prayers addressed to the Virgin Mary on the 1st of April, at eight in the morning, were of wonderful efficacy, provided a Paternoster and Ave Maria were added to them, made use of this rule of devotion on the most pressing occasions, "and found it to answer perfectly well."

The Romans on the 1st of April abstained from pleading causes, and the Roman ladies performed ablutions under myrtle-trees, crowning themselves with the leaves, and offered sacrifices to Venus. This custom originated in a mythological story that as Venus was drying her wetted hair by a river-side she was perceived by satyrs, whose gaze confused her:

"But soon with myrtles she her beauties veiled,
From whence this annual custom was entailed."

Forty years ago, in England, when buckles were worn on shoes, a boy would meet a person in the street with, "Sir, if you please, your shoe's unbuckled;" and the moment the accosted individual looked toward his feet the informant would cry, "Ah, you April-fool!" Another point of juvenile waggery was, "Sir, there's something out of your pocket." "Where?" "There!" "What?" "Your hand, Sir—ah, you April-fool!" Even the ladies in the olden time were not exempted from the raids; as one should say, "Ma'am, I beg pardon, but you've something on your face!" "Indeed, my man! what is it?" "Your nose, ma'am—ah, you April-fool!"

In Portugal it is thought very jocose to pour water on any person who passes, or throw powder in his face, but to do both is the perfection of wit. The Hindoos mark the festival by sending people on errands and expeditions that are to end in disappointment, and raise a laugh at the person sent. In Brand's "Asiatic Researches" it is said that a late Rajah was very fond of making huli fools, though he was a Mussulman of the highest rank. One of the pastimes was to send letters making appointments in the name of persons who were known to be absent, the laugh being always in proportion to the trouble given.

In a number of the Spectator which takes for its motto, "Laugh if you are wise," allusion is thus made to the foolories of the day: "But this little triumph of the understanding, under the guise of laughter, is nowhere more visible than in the custom which prevails everywhere among us on the first day of the present month, when everybody takes it into his head to make as many fools as he can. In proportion as there are more follies discovered, so there is more laughter raised on this day than on any other in the whole year. A neighbor of mine, who is a haberdasher by trade, and a very shallow, conceited fellow, makes his boast that for these ten years successively he has not made less than a hundred April-fools. My landlady had a falling-out with him about a fortnight ago for sending every one of her children upon some sleeveless errand, as she terms it. Her eldest son went to buy a half-pennyworth of inkle at the shoe-maker's; the eldest daughter was dispatched half a mile to see a monster; and, in short, the whole family of innocent children made April-fools. This empty fellow has laughed upon these conceits ever since. This art of wit is well enough when confined to one day in the twelvemonth; but there is an ingenious tribe of men sprung up of late years who are for making April-fools every day in the year."

In the Looker-On is an account of a curious character, a veritable oddity, who, for above forty years, had bent the energies of his little intellect to mischievous exploits. This man was heard complaining that, as All-Fools Day had just happened on a Sunday, he was below par. His journal for that of the preceding year was quite plentiful. Thus:

"1st of April, 1790.—Got up early this morning to prepare for business. Sally still a-bed. Flung the watchman a shilling out of the window to rap at my door and cry fire! Sally started up in a fright, overturned my best wig, which stood in the passage, and ran into the street half naked. Was obliged to give her a shilling to quiet her.

"10 o'clock.—Sent a letter to Mr. Plume, the undertaker, telling him that my neighbor, old Frank Fuz, who was married on Monday to his late wife's step-daughter, had died suddenly last night. Saw six of Plume's men go in, and heard old Fuz very loud with them.

"Invited all our club to dine at Deputy Dripping's, and invited him to dine with Alderman Grub at Hempstead. N. B.—The alderman is on a visit to his son-in-law in Kent.

"12 o'clock.—Received an order in the name of a customer in Essex, for six pounds of snuff, to be sent by the coach. Smoked the bite and kicked the messenger out of the shop.

"1 o'clock.—Afraid Sally would play some trick on me in dressing my dinner, so went to get a steak at a coffee-house. Chalked the waiter's back as he gave me my change. N. B. —Two bad shillings.

"Asked an old woman in Cheapside what was the matter with her hat. She took it off, and while I was calling her April-fool a boy ran off with my handkerchief in his hand.

"Gave Giles, my shop-man, a glass of brandy, which he took for a glass of wine. Giles unable to attend shop next day."

Daily Chronicle.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 1, 1874.

A Bad State.

Under a republican administration, life and property were as safe in Missouri as in Iowa or Illinois. Under a democratic administration everything is being rapidly reversed. Defiant outlaws are plundering and murdering without any attempt on the part of the authorities. State, county, or municipal, to bring them to justice. In addition to the Gad's Hill railway robbery, and the recent murder of Wicher and others, in Saline county a few days ago the office of the clerk of the circuit court was robbed of all its money, for the third time, and all indictments found against criminals were stolen and destroyed. Similar crimes are becoming common, and daily more common, throughout that State. The Governor sent a message to the House, Saturday evening, enclosing a communication just received from the sheriff, prosecuting attorney and clerk of the circuit and county court, which states that on the 18th of March one William Manks of West Plains shot James Miller in the head, then fled to the country, and refuses to submit to a civil process on the plea that he cannot obtain justice. Manks has 300 men ready to obey his call and defend him. On Thursday night thirty men rode into West Plains, headed by John Nicholson, who swore that they were going to see Manks have justice, and stating that the sheriff and other county officials and prominent men of West Plains were a band of conspirators sworn to take the life of Manks, and they (the Manks men) had them spotted and intended to kill the last one of them. The whole party went to the sheriff's office, dared him to arrest any of them or attempt it, and they would shoot him and clean out the town, saying that they were 300 strong, and intended to get their force together and resist the town. Even a "paternal government," if it offered some protection to life and property, would seem preferable to the entire liberty which leads to such a reign of terror as now exists in Missouri.

Readables.

Mr. Barnum has engaged two celebrated aeronauts to make a voyage across the Atlantic from New York to Europe, during the coming summer. The balloon is now building, and will be placed on exhibition in London before bringing it to this country.

It is noticed as a singular fact that Judge Curtis, who is the caucus candidate of the democrats in Massachusetts for Sumner's seat, was a whig member of the legislature that first elected Charles Sumner, and was so indignant at the coalition of democrats and free-soilers by which this was effected that he declared it as his legal opinion that it was indictable as a conspiracy, under the general law. Judge Curtis will not be elected, of course, nor will he probably long be adhered to.

Carl Zerrahn has sued the executive committee of the "World's Jubilee" for compensation for his services in 1872.

An infant son of Mr. Napoleon Gosselin of Meriden, Conn., met his death very suddenly by swallowing an inch No. 9 screw. The screw entered the windpipe, choking the infant in a short time.

John D. Sanborn's trial for conspiracy to defraud the revenue department is going on at New York.

Advices from France confirm the reported escape of Henri Rochefort and Pascbal Grousset from the penal colony of New Caledonia.

Late reports in regard to the battle before Bilboa, in Spain, show it to have been a very bloody struggle, and attended with an enormous loss for the royalists. General Primo de Rivera was mortally wounded. Latest advices through Carlist channels state that the fighting was renewed on Saturday and lasted all day. The republicans made the attack, and were repulsed at all points. The loss is heavy.

Frank Morgan of Springfield, Mass., shot his friend, Frank Blair, inflicting a probably fatal wound; the result of a quarrel.

William A. Glover has been sentenced to twelve years in the Massachusetts State prison for complicity in the Boylston Bank robbery.

Three men were killed and a number severely burned by the bursting of a steam pipe of a steamer at Memphis on Sunday night.

A severe drought is reported from many parts of Cuba.

A large mass meeting of the colored citizens of New York was held Monday evening in honor of the memory of Charles Sumner.

A grand ten-hour demonstration and torchlight procession will take place at Fall River on Thursday afternoon and evening. Three bands, 500 torches and innumerable banners with mottoes pertinent to the occasion have already been secured.

A few days since, Miss Sarah Littlefield, daughter of the keeper of the Stoughton, Mass., almshouse, aged eighteen years, by some means set fire to her clothing, and was so severely burned that she soon died.

Two of the Fall River schoolhouses have been closed owing to the prevalence of small-pox in those districts of the city in which they are located.

Queen Victoria has reviewed the survivors of the Ashantee war.

In the Louisville, Ky., Public Library Lottery, No. 964 drew a prize of $18,750; No. 21,101 drew $75,000.

Judge Benedict ordered the jury at Brooklyn, in the case of John D. Sanborn, to return a verdict of acquittal on the charge of conspiracy to defraud the revenue.

The Erie war in Pennsylvania, between the workmen who struck for their arrears of pay and the State troops, is ended without bloodshed.

The convention vote for Senator from Massachusetts, Tuesday, gave Dawes 95, Hoar 78, Curtis 76, Adams 15, Banks 6, scattering 4.

The District of Columbia "ring" is catching it right and left. Further investigation reveals the fact that F. H. Smith, official stenographer of the House, had a contract to furnish tree boxes for the sum of $56,000, $26,000 of which was profit. He had also other contracts. The contractor for building brick sewers, was also a brick burner; hard brick were taken from the kiln and sold for pavements, and the soft brick remaining were used very largely and almost exclusively for the sewers.

State News.

The only white graduate of the medical department of the Howard University at Washington, at the recent commencement, was Miss Mary A. Parsons, a New Hampshire girl, twenty-two years old.

Charlestown voted, at a recent meeting, to petition the State for the loan of one of the cannon captured at the battle of Bennington, to be used on the occasion of the celebration at Charlestown, July 4, 1876.

On Tuesday, the President withdrew the nomination of H. P. Rolfe to be district attorney of New Hampshire, and nominated Hon. Joshua G. Hall of Dover.

The Washington (D. C.) Republican gives an account of the annual rental of pews in the Metropolitan (M. E.) church in that city, and says there are a number of prominent pew-holders who have secured the right to the pews they occupy by paying $1000 in addition to the yearly rent. Among the prominent citizens named as doing so are President Grant, Hon. Thomas L. Tullock and Hon. M. G. Emery, the two latter from this State.

A meeting to form a New Hampshire Sportsmen's Club for the execution of the game laws, for the protection of hunting dogs, and to derise ways of keeping up friendly relations between farmers, wealthy land owners and the lovers of rod and gun, has been called to meet at Manchester, on April 7, at 10 o'clock.

An Ocean Horror.

The French steamship "Nil" has been lost on the voyage from Hong Kong, China, to Yokohama, Japan, and eighty persons drowned. Among the lost were the Japanese commissioners to the Vienna Exhibition. No other particulars of the disaster are given.

A Lady Reformer.

"B. L. Ower," in the Chelsea Public, relates the particulars of his conversion from the use of tobacco and rum to the odor of sanctity through the determined efforts of his Arabella. He says:

I am, as you know, a strong prohibitionist. I am in favor of closing every rum-shop—Sundays, and as early as 8 P. M. week-days. That gives all persons time to purchase what they want for home consumption, and the communion service, and prevents the poor laborer from spending his money and evenings in these dens of infamy. I can get along well enough without drinking at a bar. I therefore favor stringent measures. So far, so good. Arabella has never objected to my partaking of light wines, or porter. It never hurts me. I know when to stop. It exhilarates, but never intoxicates me. Arabella has sometimes intimated that I was over-excited. But that is just like a woman. They always imagine the worst. I knew better. However, Arabella wanted me to go with her to hear Mrs. Ricker, Monday evening. I had an engagement at the Club, but told her she might go and I would call for her at the close of the meeting. I got there just as the crowd were coming out. I found Arabella in the vestibule. She gazed at me with severe scrutiny.

"Benjamin, throw away your cigar."

"Why, my dear," said I, "I've just lit it."

"Benjamin," she said, solemnly, "unless you throw away that cigar I cannot walk with you."

"Why, Arabella," I said, generously yielding, "what's the matter, now?"

"You mustn't smoke any more, Benjamin," said she, softening and taking my arm, as we directed our steps homeward.

"Why not, my love?"

"Because it's wicked. Oh, Benjamin, such a lovely discourse! What a horrid creature man is!"

"Awful," I assented.

"Benjamin," said she, suddenly withdrawing her arm from mine, "you've been drinking."

"Nonsense, my love," said I, hastily putting a clove in my mouth, for we did break a bottle of champagne at the Club. "Some sweet cider at Tom Greeley's, that's all."

"Benjamin, we've both been very, very wicked. Oh, if you could only have heard Mrs. Ricker. She told just what a dirty, miserable, FILTHY creature man is."

"What did she say about the women, my dear?"

"She said that women are ministering spirits."

"So are rumsellers, my love—to any that can pay for their spirits. What else did she say?"

"She said that tobacco is just as bad as rum—and so it is, Benjamin."

"Some of it is a great deal worse, my dear," said I.

"And she advised women to have nothing to do with men who used it. She said that no woman ought to live with her husband if he persisted in using it, and—and—you've got to quit smoking, Benjamin."

"But, Arabella, my love—"

"No, I won't hear any excuses," she interrupted, as we entered the house, "you've got to quit, right off—now. Come, promise me you will, won't you, Benjamin?" she added coaxingly.

"But I'm not smoking now, little Arab."

"You know what I mean. I want you to promise—now—this instant—before I take my things off."

"Nonsense, my love!" said I. "Don't be foolish. Come, get me my slippers and a match, and sit down and finish that neck-tie that I am to wear to-morrow night."

And I took out my cigar-case and flung myself into my favorite chair. But Arabella wasn't to be suppressed in that way. She stood before me with bonnet and shawl still on, and looking as resolved as the Parcæ.

"Mr. Ower," she said, in firm accents, "I am determined. You must stop this beastly habit, now and forever. Mrs. Ricker is right. It is woman's heavenly mission to redeem the fallen and degraded creature, man. She must purge him of all those vile habits of intemperance and tobacco-using and so make him fit to mate with her pure and angelic nature. And it is in her own home that she must commence the work. It is upon those that we love and that love us that the reform should be first wrought. Nor will I shirk my duty. I am resolved to live no longer with a man who drinks and smokes. You must solemnly promise never to smoke another cigar, or—"

"Or what, Arabella?" I anxiously asked.

"Or I'll go home and live with papa."

Now considering that Poddlesby is a regular old smoke-stack, and that he chews about five pounds of tobacco per week, her method of reformation didn't look exactly consistent. When I reminded her of this fact she sank down into a chair and began to cry. I couldn't stand that. I ran to soothe her. Promised to promise her anything. I urged her to repress her tears, and thoughtlessly began to kiss them away. She started up with a gesture of disgust.

"Benjamin, you have been drinking!"

"Only a little sweet cider at Tom—"

"Don't tell me! Benjamin," she said, assuming an attitude of solemn warning, "you are preparing yourself for a drunkard's grave. The horrible pit already yawns beneath your feet."

"Let her yawn," I piously said. "I'm sleepy myself."

"Benjamin, you're a brute!" and she again commenced to cry. Touched, I again essayed to soothe her. "Go away. You're a cross old thing! You want to make me miserable." I earnestly assured her I had no such desire. I sought only her happiness. What should I do to prove it? I said I'd promise anything.

"Promise me, Benjamin, you won't smoke any more."

"Well, my dear, I won't—for a week."

"No, you must promise forever."

Well, the upshot of it was that I had to promise. This was three days ago, and I haven't broken it yet. It isn't such a great deprivation. But I pretend it is, to her. It magnifies her sense of victory, and my self-sacrifice.

Navy Yard Items.

One hundred and eighty-six men were discharged from the steam engineering department on Tuesday. This leaves less than two hundred workmen in that department.

The U. S. S. "Bluelight," which has been undergoing extensive repairs at this yard during the past few months, will be launched on Wednesday. This vessel was last year engaged in the service of the U. S. Fish Commission, along the coast of Maine, and it is understood that she will be similarly employed during the coming Summer.

The U. S. S. "Leyden," laden with knees for the department of construction, cordage for the department of equipment, and miscellaneous stores, arrived at the navy yard Tuesday morning, and is now being discharged.

Laconics.

On Saturday, April 4th, at 12 o'clock, M., a choice lot of milch cows will be offered for sale by auction, at the Hayes farm, at the Plains.

Extensive preparations are being made for the dedication ceremonies at St. Mary's church on Fast Day, April 9th. In addition to the regular choir, a number of the best vocalists in the city and Harlow's orchestra, who have for some time had Mozart's Twelfth Mass in rehearsal, an eminent lady singer from Boston will be present and perform the solos. Mr. R. E. Rider will preside at the organ, and Mr. Amos Pearson will conduct.

Mr. Charles P. Williams, of Kittery, recently found on his place (formerly part of the Whipple estate) a gold ring in a perfect state of preservation, which he thinks would be an interesting study to some antiquarian. On the inside is engraved "M Gob," also a triangle and the record "May 1726 Ætat 42—D. G." On the outside are emblems of some organization or order of knighthood.

A fine portrait of Mr. Charles Handy, an officer from Rhode Island in the revolutionary army, and grand-father of John N. Handy, Esq., which has been recently completed by Mr. U. D. Tenny, the artist, is on exhibition at J. H. Foster's book-store. It was painted from a miniature on ivory, the original being by Malbone in 1775. The painting represents Mr. Handy in court dress and is a striking likeness.

The Lawrence Eagle locates a poisoning case here which did not occur in this vicinity.

J. E. Ham & Co. are to remove their clothing goods to the store formerly occupied by Chas. H. Shedd & Co., Mr. A. L. Farnsworth, who "advertised exclusively in the Times," having failed to develope a great amount of business.

Old Time Chronicles, No. 109.

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

A copy of a newspaper 104 years old has just been perused. It is "The Boston Gazette and Country Journal," dated Monday, March 12, 1770. No numbering is put down; neither is the volume named, nor the price. It is a double sheet, some fifteen inches by twelve.

The arbitrary measures of the British government were being felt, and there is an account of spirited meetings just held in Roxbury, Acton and Littleton, protesting against those measures. British troops were quartered in Boston, and on the second page is a decided expression of opposition to this, and an account of efforts to induce the British authorities to have them removed.

Just one week before the date of this paper, what was called the Boston Massacre took place, in which by a collision of some of the citizens with a part of the British soldiers, four persons were killed. Of this an account was given in our last number, some of the particulars of which were gathered from a fragment of the preceding number of this same Boston Gazette. So on the third page of this paper is an account of the funeral of those killed. To make the massacre as impressive as possible the passions were addressed through the eye. The figures of four black coffins were placed in the columns. On each were small devices of a man's face in death, and other indications of carnage. The account states that the shops were closed, a large procession of citizens joining in the funeral cortege through the streets, making a very long procession, although it is stated they formed in ranks of six abreast. It was between four and five o'clock when the procession went to the grave.

Among the advertisements is one showing that slaves were held in that colony. There were in New Hampshire at that time. The advertisement is to the effect that John Langdon had run away from his master. He was 14 years old, had on dark frock and trowsers, dark striped hemp jacket, striped shirt, shoes almost worn out, and plain figured buckles of this country make. People were forbidden to harbor him under the pains and penalties of the law.

A Pleasant Situation.

[Max Adeler.]

Our young friend, Parker, went around the other evening to visit the two Miss Smiths. After conversing with them for a while, Miss Susan excused herself a few moments and went up stairs. Presently Parker thought he heard her coming, and stepped behind the door, suggesting that the other Miss Smith should tell Miss Susan that he had gone. But it wasn't Susan; it was old Mr. Smith in his slippers. As he entered he looked around and said to his daughter:

"Ah! ha! So Parker's gone, has he? Good riddance. I was just comin' down to keep my eyes on him. Hope he hasn't been proposing to you, Mary Jane. I don't want any such lantern-jawed, red-headed idiots fooling around here. He hasn't got the sense of a rutabaga turnip or money enough to buy a clean shirt. He gets none of my daughters. I'll shake the everlasting life out of him if I catch him around here agin, mind me."

Just as he concluded, Susan came down, and not perceiving Parker she said:

"Thank goodness, he's gone. That man is enough to provoke a saint. I was awfully afraid he was going to stay and put in the evening. Mary Jane, I hope you didn't ask him to call again?"

Then Parker didn't know whether to stay or bolt, while Mary Jane looked as if she would like to drop into the cellar. But Parker finally walked out, rushed to the entry, seized his hat, shot down the front steps, and went home, meditating upon the emptiness and the uncertainty of Smiths. He has not called since, and his life thus far has been unmolested by the head of the Smith family.

Mr. Brown and his Umbrella.

[Troy Press.]

Brown stood for over an hour on a street corner the last rainy day, holding a gigantic umbrella over him. When any of his acquaintances not similarly provided—who the day before would scarcely condescend to give him a nod of recognition—happened to see him they would smilingly salute him, inquire how he felt, were the family all well, etc., winding up by asking him if he was going up or down, as the case might be. "Yes, directly," Brown would say, "wait a moment." After waiting some time, and repeated nudges having failed to bring him, the friend who was so very solicitous about Brown's health would attempt to emerge from the shelter of the umbrella, when Brown would importune him to wait a moment longer, asking him (after he had already waited five or ten minutes) what was his particular hurry. At last the friend—who could not perceive anything so very funny in the neighborhood that should produce such a broad grin on Brown—with a look on his face as though he had just discovered that he had cashed a bogus check, would dive from under the umbrella and walk off as if he was mad at something.

The Pull Down Practice.

Death laughs when he sees the weak and feeble bled, blistered, salivated, opiumized, or griped with violent purgatives. He knows that under such treatment they cannot long survive. In direct conflict with this pull down practice is the principal upon which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters operate. The effect of this incomparable vegetable restorative is to build up the system and invigorate the constitution. It imparts appetite and assists digestion, enriches and cleanses the blood, regulates and tones the liver and the bowels, and establishes and perpetuates a healthy habit of body. By a happy combination of vegetable extracts—tonic, aperient and anti-billious—with a pure stimulant, these effects are simultaneously produced. There is no prescription of the pharmacopœia that has the same scope. You may find among its formulas scourges for the bowels, stimulants for the stomach, sedatives for the nerves, but no grand combination medicine that, like Hostetter's Bitters, is at once a tonic, an aperient, a corrective and an alterative.

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT. OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

It is used by Doctors of all schools.—Price $1.00. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Depot 46 Walker St., New York.

"The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth.

And owners and occupiers of buildings having such vaults and privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of APRIL in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified."

An Open Letter.

To His Honor F. W. Miller, Esq., Mayor elect of Portsmouth.

The man whom the people have elevated from the humble calling of a "Miller" to his "Honor!" his "Worship!"—May his mill grind out the public weal like the mill of the "Gods," "slow but sure."—"Honor and shame from no condition rise, act well your part, there all the honor lies."

Very humbly and truly your friend,

Ross Winans and his Son Tom.

From "Gath's" letter from Cheat River Old Country, West Virginia, to the Chicago Tribune, we take the following:

As we sit after our ride, in a little pavilion of Mrs. Hansen's Hotel at West Liberty, in sight of the old German settlement, we hear the locomotive, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, whistle.

"Ah!" there is Ross Winans' 'Camel's back' engine!" say we. "It does not whistle like the 'Mogul' they use nowadays, all plentiful with mighty driving wheels."

And then we hear again the wonderful yarn about Tom Winans, but we have it told over in the newest form, to get the Maryland idioms in it. The Colonel, who tells it, sticks his staff in the floor of the pavilion; for he had once been a surveyor, and is allowed his side arms in a state of civic repose, and he jabs away there at the important points, till the planks look like a housewife's collender.

"Tom Winans," says the Colonel, "is a romance, sir; Ross Winans was the prelude to him; Ross, the father, was a blacksmith, a man of prodigious originality. Ross Winans invented the common car-truck, you know, sir, which all the railroads use, and he spent years and $200,000 to recover from infringers. He ought to have had it—he ought to have had it—he ought, indeed, sir! He invented the Camel's back engine as well; and, while the Baltimore and Ohio Company employed him, he got from $8.0 gradually up to $1,200 per annum. When he struck up for $1,500 a year, one of the Board of Directors cut him off with the remark:

"What assumption! A mere Blacksmith receiving $1,500!" But it was then predicted that the mechanical right hand of the Company had been sacrificed by a set of pernicious ignoramuses. Igno-ram-uses, I say, sir!" repeated the Colonel, driving his Jacob's staff through a scantling.

"Colonel," we timidly suggest, "you began with Thomas Winans."

"Ah!" says the Colonel, "I am at that point again. Ross Winans set up machine-shops of his own and perfected his engine. Tom Winans was a journeyman machinist in that shop, and was familiar with that engine. At this period a Russian agent of the Czar was in the country looking up railroad improvements. Three engines had then been constructed in America—one at Patterson, N. J., one at Norris' shops, Philadelphia, and the third at Ross Winans'. The Russian got acquainted with a kinsmans of Ross', and asked him which was the best of the new engines in America. "Ross Winans' to be sure, sir," answers the dutiful kinsman. And forthwith the engine is ordered, and Tom Winans is sent out to Europe with it. On the way he met, aboardship, Harrison and Eastwick, also bound to Europe to build railways. They asked him to join them in partnership, and he consented. When they saw his engine they exclaimed. 'A contest with that is impracticable; Baltimore has whipped us out!'"

"But the Czar, Colonel?" say we, dodging the Jacob's staff.

"Ah! sir, there was a greater triumph of Baltimore manhood than the victories of our women who intermarried with the Bonapartes, the Wellesleys, the Osbornes, and other royal bloods. The engine was put up on the St. Petersburg and Moscow Railroad, then partly laid down. Tom Winans mounted the platform, and drove her along the grades. When he came down from the box, all grimy with smoke and cinders, the Czar, without saying a word, took his ring off his own finger and put it on our young mechanic's dirty hand. It was hyacinthe, clasped with a row of diamonds all the way round. There began Tom Winan's great fortune, sir. He made a noble fortune, and established his beautiful residence of The Crimea, at Baltimore. There he was perfecting, with his father, the celebrated cigar-boat which he esteems to be a success in principle to this day, when the war broke out. Baltimoreans generally objected to the aggressive course of the Government, and, when Ross Winans was thrown into Fort McHenry, Tom left the country in indignation. His beautiful place was left open all that period of absence—or about eight years—with servants, wine, and hospitality for all who came, and the proprietor meanwhile dispensed lavish hospitality in England, where the boys intermarried. Tom Winans is again amongst us, our greatest mechanic. Refined professional people like the painter Ames, make his house their home, and he is always at work with his head and tools. He will jump up in the midst of a conversation, and bore his gimlet into a piece of walnut furniture, to test or fix in his mind some momentary mechanical suggestion. His father has little relative wealth, and it is related that, some time ago, Tom protested with Ross for driving so bad a wagon and horse through the streets. 'Hang it, Tom!' said the old man, 'I'm poor; I can't afford your style.' Tom sat down and drew a check for $100,000. 'There father,' he says, 'you can't say after this that you can't drive a decent team.'"

—Theodore Tilton says it is the hardest thing in the world to bow and smile when a man weighing 200 pounds has stepped on your corn. It is a hard thing to do, certainly, says the Louisville Courier-Journal, and the man who thus bows and smiles, when he feels infinitely more like thumping himself and howling, and howling profanely at that, is a fraud against which the law should protect us.

—A small boy arose at a Sunday-school concert and began quite glibly, "A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell—and fell—" (here his memory began to fail him), "and—fell by the roadside, and the thorns sprang up and choked him."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY DROPSY AND RUMORS,

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent. Infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind; and become household words among not only one, but many nations, have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

Daily Chronicle.

The Story of Jock Williston.

[Aldine for April.]

"Some of our folks go over to the Island to meeting to-day; you'd like to go along, maybe?" queried our host at breakfast, on the morning of our second Sunday at L———.

"To the Island? Delightful! Let us go, of course."

"It's a good piece of walking from the landing to the church, you know."

"How far?"

"About two miles—up hill and down dale."

"Only two miles! A mere nothing!" we chorused, smiling at each other as we remembered how impassable two miles of our native pavement might have seemed on that midsummer day. But here with the wooing note of the sea in our ears and the strength of the salt air tingling through our veins, what might we not do and dare?

So light was the breeze, as we stood waiting on the beach, that we scarcely felt it strike our raised hands; yet the little boat which came to take us off caught the soft breath in her sails, and wafted us across the channel gently and noiselessly as a spirit.

I need not pause to describe the walk that followed, although we remembered it long afterward with keen delight. The undulating slopes robed with spruce and fir of marvelous symmetry and color; the gray outcrop of limestone rock rending the crisp carpet of short grass, and dry, brown moss spread along the road-side; the half-score little coves of wondrous beauty, where fleets of small boats, like white-winged water-fowl rocked lazily at anchor, and the blue water plashed softly upon tiny islets, whose quaint rock-work was veiled and garlanded by creeping vines and nodding harebells; and—far off—the line where sky and ocean met, embracing all with suggestions of the infinite harmony;—all these, then almost unprofaned, are grown familiar in these later years, even to most careless eyes.

The small, white church, with its odd cupola and slowly swinging bell, came in sight at length, crowning the summit of a gentle elevation. Entering, we took our places among the worshipers.

The greater part of the simple discourse I have long since forgotten, but the closing words, spoken in the low, musical voice of the preacher, as he bent above the pulpit rail, sound in my memory still:

"Hear, then, once more, the words of the text: 'That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.' Sometimes, my brethren, we look long for the brightness of that rising. Even the eyes that watch for the morning may scarce discern night from dawn. Yet there is no soul but some time—somewhere—stands in the shining of that Light. Every sacrifice of self, every victory of love, is but its broken reflection. God forbid any one of you, having felt the divine radiance, should go away again into the outer darkness!"

A hymn was sung, the fervent blessing asked, and, passing out with the congregation, we turned aside into the churchyard, to spend the hour of noonday intermission. Strolling about among the quiet graves, many of which, especially the resting-places of little children, were strewn tenderly with bright hued shells and pebbles, my attention was arrested by the contrast between the low, plainly carved stones around me, and a tall, slender shaft of the purest Italian marble, rising from a solid granite pedestal at a little distance beyond. Drawing nearer, I read in beautifully embossed characters:

In memory of
JOCK WILLISTON,
Who came to himself and to his Father's House,
On Christmas Day, 1849.
'They that sat in darkness, saw a great light.'

The brief epitaph, beneath whose quaint phrase some unusual significance seemed concealed, aroused in me a strong desire to know more of the quiet sleeper below. The wish must have been unconsciously betrayed in my countenance, for a wrinkled, kindly faced old lady, who sat upon a bench near by, with an open lunch basket, and two rosy grandchildren at her knee, suddenly beckoned me to a place beside her, saying, as if in answer to a spoken question,

"The words do seem odd for a gravestone, ma'am, but indeed the Lord's dealin's with poor Jock were past our findin' out. You never heard tell of him, I judge?"

"No—but I have never been here before."

"Likely enough, and yet every child on the coast could tell you the story. It was in the Portland papers, too—but—bless me! that must 'a' been nigh twenty years ago. No wonder you wouldn't remember."

The old dame's eyes brightened, and she paused, as if to please herself with the anticipation of an interested listener.

"You knew him, then, this Jock, as you call him?" I hinted gently.

"Knew him?" she answered with a musing smile. "I dressed him the night he was born,—a strong-limbed, hearty babe, with bright, black eyes, and hair as dark and curly as Jamie's here. That was Christmas Eve, and just one week afterward, on New Year's Day, the brig Sea Gull foundered off the Coast of Newfoundland, with Cap'n Williston and all his men, and so the poor baby never saw his father's face.

"Poor little Mrs. Williston! I can see just how she looked, lyin' there day after day, as white and helpless as a broken day-lily, with that little brown head tucked against her cheek; 'twas only the baby that kept her alive. She'd make me hold him to the light a dozen times a day. 'You're sure his eyes won't turn any lighter, Mrs. Dawson?' she'd say. 'You see the cap'n had a coal-black eye. And then again, 'He grows, Mrs. Dawson? You think he's very well, don't you?' in a voice that wistful, that I had a master fight with myself to keep the water out of my eyes, intead of answering her up right cheerful, 'Well? I should think he did, the little cap'n! And growin'? Look at that arm! Why! he'll be liftin' his mother off the bed before she knows it!' Then she'd smile a little pale smile, and put her two arms round my neck, poor thing! for she was scarce more'n a baby herself.

"Well, the time passed on, and little Jock grew up, as brave and handsome a lad as you could wish to see. It was real sunshine to my eyes to see him walkin' alongside of his mother, drawin' himself up, and keepin' step with her like a grown man. So tender of her, too, he was, leavin' all his mates for her if she was alone, and forever layin' out what he meant to do for her when he was a man. And what with bein' so fond and proud of him, she got to look, barrin' black dress, almost the same as when the cap'n was alive. Ah, me! I've thought a many times since how merciful it is in the Lord to let us see so little ways ahead. In the best of times, we're only ships in a fog, and have to steer by compass.

"The summer Jock was twelve years old was amazin' sickly all along the coast. I was high beat out nursin' 'Bijah Porter's wife through the typhoid, and had come home one Wednesday afternoon to get a little rest. As I was lyin' on the lounge, in a half-doze, the door opened, and Mrs. Williston come in. She never stopped nor spoke, but come straight across the floor, with a face white as a ghost. Then she put her hands on my shoulders, and says she, 'Mrs. Dawson, my Jock's got the fever.' I rose up like a flash, and put my shawl over my head, and went home with her. And I never came home, ma'am, for seven weeks. Awesome weeks they were, ma'am. The nights were worst. I used to feel as if we two were fightin' Death hand to hand for that boy, and he a tossin' on the pillow, his red cheeks sunk away, all his curly hair shaved close to his head, and in all that time never givin' us one reasonable word or look. It was the fourth week, when I minded one mornin', as Mis. Williston sat by the bed that her hair was turnin', but by the seventh, ma'am, when the fever left him, it was as white as mine is now.

"All but the last breath of life was burnt out of him, and when he did once begin to mend, it was so slow that it took us a great while to find out that any thing was wrong. It come to me, first, when I went into the bedroom, one afternoon, of a sudden. He didn't see me for a minute, and laid there a playin' with his fingers,—then, all to once, he looked up and laughed! That laugh! O ma'am! all the rest was as nothin' to that! I just sunk down into a chair, and groaned, 'O Lord! have mercy on his mother!' Not that!

"The Lord did have mercy on her, but not in my way. He took her home that next winter, and I've thought many a time that I'd like to 'a' been by when he explained to her—as I'm certain he would—some things that we down here waited years and years for, and many more, belikes, that we've never found out at all.

"Poor little Jock got well again—in his body—that was all. His mind was clean gone. He used to go about gentle and harmless as a lamb. Whilst his mother lived, he'd follow her every step she took, but more like a dog than a human child. If she sat down he'd drop down at her feet, and rub his head on her knee, like a dumb thing. Not but that he talked yet—a good deal sometimes—but all in a weak, senseless fashion, that'd half-break your heart. He didn't seem to know the reason of any thing—he might be half-starved and yet never think of eatin' unless you put the victuals before him.

"There was a while after Mis. Williston died that I had a little hopes of him. He used to wander around as if he was searchin' for something, and sometimes, all to once, an odd look'd come into his face for half a second—you'd 'a' said, to look at him, that he was just a goin' to find it, whatever 'twas. It was then he took the habit that stuck to him ever after, of clappin' both hands to his head and sayin', 'It's comin'!' 'What's comin', Jocky?' I used to say sometimes, and the poor boy'd stare up into my face with a dazed, wildered look for a minute, and then break out into one of his weak, senseless smiles.

"There was little or nothin' left to take care of him with; but not a man or woman on the island would ever 'a' let a child o' Cap'n Williston's come to want, let alone his bein' a poor unfortunate like Jock. So we all adopted him, as you might say, and he used to go and come from one house to another just as suited him. On the whole, he seemed to stick to me the most. You'll wonder at it, maybe, but the poor boy was real company for me, after all, bein' alone so much when Zebedee—that was my man—was gone off on his whalin' voyages.

"I used to be a master hand to read my Bible in them days, though my old eyes 've been too dim for it now this many a year. Thank the Lord, though, that I can see the page a'most as well as ever in my mind! I had a habit of readin' out loud a great deal, seemin' to get the sense better so—especially in the Psalms—and queer as you might think it, there Jock'd lay stretched on the rug, before the fireplace, a listenin' by the hour. I used to think 'twas the sound o' my voice he liked, for he didn't know enough to understand a single word rightly. But howsoever that was, hearkenin' to me readin' was one of the two things he seemed to like best in the world. The other was to go out with the men in the boats. Of course he wasn't of any particular use, but they all humored him, and sometimes, in the mackerel season, they'd keep him out for days and weeks to a time.

"But I must hurry along, ma'am, or I'll be tiring you out. All this while Jock was growin' up, and at twenty he was a great, strong fellow, standin' a good six foot in his stockin's. He didn't look that tall, though, owin' to his stoopin' some and walkin' with a shuffilin', shambilin' sort o' gait, such as you've minded in others, maybe, when the brain didn't hold the tiller.

"It was that same summer when Mabelle Devereux first came to the Island. Her father was a French gentlemen, who had lived a great many years in this country. Bein' out of health, he thought to try the sea air for awhile. I'm an old woman, and I've seen many a fresh face in my time, but never another that was fit to set alongside Mabelle Devereux'. There was a picture in Parson Ellet's parlor, over the mantelpiece, that came from over seas,—a Madonna he called it,—and I've heard tell that it was copied after the greatest picture of the greatest painter that ever lived. But that's neither here nor there,—only when I first set my eyes on Mabelle, sittin' one Sunday in Deacon Price's pew,—Mis. Price was aunt to Mabelle's mother,—I leaned over the forward pew before I thought what I was doin', and whispered to 'Bijah Porter's wife, 'Look there! There's Parson Ellet's picture stepped out o' the frame!'

A Havana letter states that incendiary fires are making great havoc among the sugar plantations over the whole island of Cuba. At a recent fight near Puerto Principe, some 400 Spaniards were killed and wounded, including some 30 officers killed. At one time the insurgents had possession of the suburbs of Puerto Principe, but reinforcements to the Spanish troops enabled the latter to recapture the position. During the fight 300 young men left Principe and joined the insurgents. The people at Manzanillo are alarmed at the non-arrival of expected troops, and are packing up their goods for flight. Sugar plantations can be seen burning all along the coast.

Messrs. Editors: In your weekly issue of March 26th I rainly looked for what I was confident I should find, viz.—a report of our annual election. I had supposed that among your splendid corps of reporters in our town some of the intelligent ones would have posted you on the facts, but it seems that neither your "Videx" at the corner, your "P" at the village, nor your "M" at the long sands have attended to duty, and it now devolves upon one of the least to report.

The regular republican nominations were made on the evening of the 19th, as follows:—Moderator, G. W. S. Putnam; Clerk, Charles O. Clark; Selectmen and Assessors, Samuel P. Young, Joseph H. Moody, Almon H. Merrow; Treasurer—, Joseph Bragdon, Jr.; Agent, Josiah D. Bragdon; Overseers, Charles Moulton, Asa. P. Simpson, Josiah Norton; Supt. Sch. Committee, Elizabeth Rogers; Auditor, G. W. S. Putnam. All these, excepting Messrs. Merrow, Simpson and Josiah D. Bragdon, and the lady candidate for school committee, held the same position last year.

A few of the disaffected or dissatisfied members of the caucus bolted these nominations and formed a union with a band of the unterrified, or what are better known as "the Bowdenites," together with some other "vites" (nameless evermore), and labored assiduously, by day, night and Sunday to effect the defeat of some of the regular nominees who will not quietly submit to the selfish schemes and desires of some of the bolters. None but a favored few were permitted to know what that bolters' and coppery ticket was to be, until Monday morning dawned,—and with it appeared the troops, who had been drilled the day before; and also the ballots, which, I'm told, were placed in the hands of experts at the corner and were freely distributed, as the "colored troops" came "marching" from the upper sections of the town. Meantime one of the knowing ones stationed himself at the "centre of gravity" and read and criticised from a town report. He probably "knew how t'was himself" as he had "been through the mill." He failed, however, to do any serious damage.

The genuine copperheads failed to put in an appearance; and as we, the "village boys," were "too many guns" for the bolters and the "ites," the result was the election of the entire regular republican ticket except Miss Rogers, who (by reason of voters having no faith in woman suffrage) was defeated and Rev. Joseph Freeman elected.

The beauty of the affair was to see the chagrin manifested by the defeated clique who had made such a great spread and display, and had offered to bet so freely on their success. It was really amusing to see the cloudy-even-unto-black-countenances, as they stood almost motionless to hear the decision of the doings of their wonderful selves, or rather what they didn't do!

It is now only to be hoped, by all candid citizens, that by the time certain people have tried a few more times to shove themselves in, when it is palpably plain they are not wanted, they may, from modesty alone, stand back and allow merit to be bestowed where merit belongs. Of course no person will accept these remarks as designed for any particular person. The coppery element, together with the bolters' strength, is not sufficient, any time, to beat "them darned village boys." If I have stated a word wrong I am willing and ready to stand corrected,—and as yet remain

A STRAIGHT REPUBLICAN.

A Midnight Sensation.

[Kansas City News.]

There was a big excitement near Hovelman's store, on East Eighteenth street, a few nights ago. An aged couple and a bull-dog reside there, and on the evening in question the peace and quiet of the trio were disturbed by the aggressions of a vagrant cow that "hooked" open the gate and entered the enclosure. The old gentleman heard the noise made by the cow, jumped out of bed, grabbed his cane, loosed Tiger, and attacked the cow. Now this cow had a varied experience with all sorts of dogs throughout the city, and was especially proficient in the art of handling a bull-dog. So, just as the old man caught the bovine by the tail, the said bovine lifted Tiger high up in air with her horns, and whisked out of the gate with the old man still hanging to her caudal appendage, and beating her to his heart's content with his heavy cane. The old man and the cow went flying down the street, and Tiger, after turning a somersault or two in the air, came down kersouse into the cistern in the yard, the top of which was open.

Now, the old lady, noticing that the noise in the yard had ceased, and wondering at the prolonged absence of her husband, stepped out into the yard to see what was the matter. She heard a splashing of water in the cistern, and, horror of horrors, she thought it was the old man.

Yell! Well, her shrieks would have drowned out the sound of Gabriel's trumpet had that angel entered into competition with her. The neighbors, alarmed at her cries, gathered around her at once, and in quite a crowd. "My husband's in the cistern?" she cried. "He can't swim!" "Oh! he'll be drowned, he'll be drowned!" and away went two or three for a ladder. The ladder was brought, placed in the cistern, and a man descended just as the old gentleman rushed in at the gate. He had heard a block or two away, as he was returning from his chase after the cow, that some one had fallen into the cistern at his house, and he believed it was his wife, for who else could be about there? Seeing the crowd of sparsely-dressed neighbors around the cistern, (the old lady had swooned away by this time and been carried into the house,) he ran into the crowd crying in the greatest agony, "Save her! Oh, my poor wife!" "Save your grandmother!" exclaimed three or four in a breath; "your wife says that you are in the cistern."

By this time the old lady had recovered sufficiently to resume her hysterical screaming again, and commenced yelling at a greater rate than ever, just as the man who went down into the cistern crawled out and exclaimed. "It's nothing but that—dog!"

The night was cold, the neighbors had not taken time to dress, and their bodies were cold and their indignation was warm when they learned what had disturbed their rest and dragged them from their beds at such an untimely hour of the night. They had one consolation, however—Tiger was as dead a dog as ever breathless lay.

The Sin of Dancing.

[Pall Mall Gazette.]

The clergy of the parish of Berchem, in Belgium, have, it appears, a conscientious objection to dancing. This is, unluckily, not confined to salatory action on their own part, but extends to the enjoyment of the pastime by others. Accordingly, one evening, a public ball being in progress, the priests resolved to make a stand against the objectionable practice, and enlisted the communal authorities on their side, as the Belgian clergy are, under the present regime, too frequently permitted to do. As early as 11 P. M. the ball room was invaded by the whole posse comitatus, the names, surnames, addresses and professions of those present taken down, and the guests ordered to retire. These, however, sturdily refused to move, unless expelled by bayonets. These weapons not being forthcoming, the police officers withdrew, having drawn up a report of the proceedings, and the fiddles began to play. At midnight, however, the whole force returned, desired the company to withdraw, revised the report and retired. The fiddles went on again. At one o'clock, again at two, the same imposing array reappeared, with the same result; but before three o'clock the police authorities and the dancers, like duellists, declared themselves satisfied, and matter stands over for decision before a competent tribunal.

—A good Yale sophomore, a missionary student, had a sister to visit him. The event was known and prepared for by wags, who stored his room with gin bottles, tobacco, cards, pipes, three cornered notes, and other devices of the Evil One. The sister was sad—so was the youth.

—Peace is preserved in a household in Elkader, Iowa, by a long withy raw-hide hung up in the bed-room of the juvenile portion of the family, bearing upon its handle this legend, "Boys, please be kind to your mother."

—A pelican which had been domiciled in the Zoological Gardens at Dublin for forty-two years died recently. The bird was supposed to be about eight years old at the time of his admission to the gardens, which would make him over 50 at the time of his death. Every effort was made to prolong his valuable existence by feeding him on live eels and whiskey punch; but old age prevailed, and he died peacably on the approach of the cold weather. He drank the punch with great relish; in fact, he had resided so long in Dublin that it must have come naturally to him, and this and the live eels prolonged his life for at least a fortnight.

The Pull Down Practice.

Death laughs when he sees the weak and feeble bled, blistered, salivated, opiumized, or gulped with violent purgatives. He knows that under such treatment they cannot long survive. In direct conflict with this pull down practice is the principal upon which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters operate. The effect of this incomparable vegetable restorative is to build up the system and invigorate the constitution. It imparts appetite and assists digestion, enriches and cleanses the blood, regulates and tones the liver and the bowels, and establishes and perpetuates a healthy habit of body. By a happy combination of vegetable extracts—tonic, aperient and anti-bilious—with a pure stimulant, these effects are simultaneously produced. There is no prescription of the pharmacopoeia that has the same scope. You may find among its formulas scourges for the bowels, stimulants for the stomach, sedatives for the nerves, but no grand combination medicine that, like Hostetter's Bitters, is at once a tonic, an aperient, a corrective and an alterative.

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT. OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

City Affairs.

A special meeting of the City Councils was held on the 31st ult. In the Aldermanic Board, the subject of providing some person to ring alarms on the depot bell, was referred to Committee on Fire Department with power.

The joint committee on finance presented a bill entitled "An ordinance making transfers of appropriations." The bill was read a first time and the rules being suspended for the purpose, was read a second time and passed. It was Sent to Common Council and was concurred in. The Common Council gave notice that they were ready to meet the Mayor and Aldermen in convention to choose an Assessor in place of J. S. Seavey, who declined to serve.

In convention, voted by ballot for an Assessor. Whole number of ballots, 14: Daniel H. Spinney, 7; Alfred Stavers, 7.

Second ballot: Daniel H. Spinney, 5; Alfred Stavers, 8; Robert C. Sides, Jr., 1.

Anonymous Letters.

The bull-dog which bites a piece out of a man's leg and then growls over the morsel may be detested by the bitee, but will certainly not be despised; the noisy brute which follows a man along the street, barking and bristling its hair, may be deemed worthy a kick or a whack with a stone; but the pitiable cur which yelps from behind a fence at the object of its displeasure, without daring even to show itself, is hardly deserving of contempt. If the old adage, "A barking dog never bites," is not strictly true, it is certain that the barking puppy which stands ready to dive under the woodshed at the least movement of the man it barks at will never do a great deal of damage; and in this class of curs we place the anonymous writers of threatening letters. A gentleman of our acquaintance who has in some way happily incurred the displeasure of one of these gentry, on Saturday received from the terrible chap a solemn warning not to venture on Washington street on the evening of that day, as "a gang was on the lookout for him and he would be carried home on a shutter, a d——d dead corpse!" The recipient of the latter happens to possess a grown person's full share of pugnacity, so (as it happened, oddly enough, that he had "business" on Washington street at the time mentioned,) of course he went where he had been warned not to go, and equally of course met with nothing sufficiently terrible to scare him. It used to be said of "farms down East" that the owner of forty acres was poor, but the owner of five hundred was irretrievably ruined; and the "gang" of sneaks may be estimated on about the same scale,— the more of them there are together the less likely they are to be able to muster Dutch courage enough to go 'round the lot, and that is the only kind of courage that will ever enable the "gang" of anonymous letter writers to face an average man.

Prof. Gunning's Lecture.

The second illustrated lecture on geology was given on the evening of March 31, and was fully as interesting as the first.

The speaker began by drawing and describing a section cut through the Alleghany Mountains. The section showed that these mountains rose from the sea after the period called "Old Red Sandstone." The birth of these mountains closed the first epoch of the earth's history. To show that for a long time after the Alleghanies rose the earth's crust was unquiet, the speaker drew a section along the coast of Nova Scotia which showed a great many changes of level between sea and land. This transitional period was the Carboniferous. Strangely sculptured weeds rose, tall as New England pines, over fens and bogs. They form our seams of coal. Nothing, the speaker said, has been lost, and the very colors of those primeval treeweeds are stored up in the coal. From the coal we distil a black tar and from the tar we get a crystal of matchless beauty. The speaker dropped one of these crystals, no bigger than a pin's head, into a tumbler of water and at once the water was colored the most brilliant violet. With this color, derived from the coal-plants, he painted some of the principal species.

Next in time after the Carboniferous came the Connecticut River sandstones, bearing the foot-prints of the earliest land-life in New England. From the foot-prints the speaker delineated and described two animal dynasties, the methods of their creation, their rise, culmination and death. He drew the Devil-fish of Victor Hugo and then two fossils which he had seen in the Post-office floor. Once they were chambered shells, floats of primeval Devil-fish. These were the ground patterns and the speaker went on to evolve from them a series showing the creative plan. Side by side with this dynasty rose the dynasty of reptiles. Enormous lizard-like creatures were drawn and described, from fossils found lately in Dakota. In them the creative thought was not clearly pronounced. They were huge immaturities—the unripe fruit of an unripe world.

The lecture on next Tuesday evening will be on "The World of Primeval Man."

The Piscataqua "Gondolas."

The second number of the Progressive Ship Builder gives the following description of the build, rig and performances of the freight "gondolas" in use on our river, from which a good idea of the extent and thoroughness of Mr. Griffiths' researches into even the humblest branches of practical ship-building may be obtained. He says:

"We shall give no special attention to the sloop, for the reason that for the vessel to be of any considerable bulk requires an unwieldy sail, and this type of vessel must soon be classified with the past, except for some very especial service. But that we may strictly still further impress the reader with the importance of light draught, we shall notice the 'Gondolas' used on the Piscataqua river, in N. H. These small vessels, of but twelve to sixteen inches draught when light, and four and one-half feet when loaded with thirty-five gross tons of cargo, are propelled by about 210 yards of sail; they have a small lee board on each side, and will work to windward and make good headway against the strongest tide-ways of that river, and are often a match for the pleasure yachts, built especially for speed, of double their draught of water; they have a length of sixty feet, are fifteen feet wide, and three feet eight inches depth of hold in the clear; their rig is that of sloop, with one short mast about ten feet above deck, placed within about five feet of the bow; the head of the mast has an iron sheave, over which passes a chain; to one end of this chain is suspended a yard of some sixty feet length, or the same length as the vessel, slung within ten feet of the heel or larger end, which reaches the deck when the yard is peaked and the sail set or brailed; the small end of the yard is reduced to some three and one-half inches, and receives the head or corner of the sail, which, in form, is like that of a gaff topsail, or somewhat of a triangular form, the tack being secured to the large end of the yard, while the sheet comes to a traveler across the deck, near the stern. The object in adopting this rig is to enable them to pass under bridges to which height the length of the mast has been adjusted; by slacking a tackle at the heel or fore end of the yard, the preponderance in weight of the peaked end of the yard with the sail upon it brings it down to a level with the mast-head, and parallel to the deck, and with this disposition of the sail and yard bridges are passed without inconvenience. This crude apology for a vessel costs, when complete, about $1,500, and we have no hesitation in stating, that for river service, such as is rendered by these vessels, the same amount of money cannot be invested in another type of vessel which can carry an equal amount of cargo in equal time on the same light draught of water, and pass the bridge obstructions which may be encountered, without necessitating the opening of draws.

[*This reminds us of an exciting race we once had, many years ago, with an empty "gundalow." We were up the river, accompanied by a select assortment of young ladies, in what was called one of the fastest pleasure-boats on the Piscataqua; and seeing the clumsy-looking craft coming down the Cocheco we laid-to for her off its mouth, intending to make the lives of her crew a burden to them by beating their old dugout clean out of sight. Unfortunately, we announced this intention to the young ladies, which added greatly to their merriment and our chagrin over the result of the race, for though we did beat our antagonist clean out of sight it was not exactly in the manner we had proposed. We had the wind dead ahead, and the way that miserable "gundalow" walked away from us, ahead and to windward, was a caution to boasting pleasure-boat skippers; and by the time we were half-way down the Gulf the old mud-cart (that was what our disgust forced us to call her) was rounding Freeman's point with the wind free, and going three feet to our one. We lighted a cigar and tried to smoke it and whistle "The Star Spangled Banner" both at once, to delude our companions into a belief that we didn't care anything about it; but it was of no use, for their hilarious mirth showed how plainly they perceived and how much they enjoyed our total discomfiture,—in fact, we believe those young damsels were the only persons who got any enjoyment out of that race, for we were mad clear through for a week afterward, and the "gundalow" men probably never suspected we were racing with them at all. But we learned one thing by our defeat,—that however safe it may be for a man to boast of what he has done, it is excellent policy for him not to boast of what he will do unless he desires to add to the poignant anguish of a possible defeat. P.]

Laconics.

The NEW HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE for this week contains six columns of local news.

Mayor Marvin was astonished Tuesday morning on reading in the CHRONICLE that his daughter was ill with scarlet fever, but the family physician, we regret to say, confirmed the statement. On Wednesday, two sons of the Mayor were sick with it.

It is reported that several changes in the Eastern railroad trains will take place next Monday. A number of trains will doubtless be taken off.

The Christian Society of Rye will give a Festival in the new Town Hall on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of next week. Carriages will leave the Franklin House for Rye at 7 o'clock each evening, taking passengers at 50 cents for the round trip. The usual literary attractions, and vocal and instrumental music, will be provided; and refreshments and fancy articles will be offered for sale.

The Times wastes about four inches of its valuable space to say that a certain boot firm advertises with it exclusively, has abandoned one store and condensed business. Publish news, neighbor!

The concert at the Temple, Tuesday evening, by Master Willie E. Nowell and assistants, was attended by a fair audience. The violin playing of Master Nowell and Master Harry Bartlett was creditable and pleasing, and Miss Nickels of Boston gave a fine rendering of several songs. This lady has a strong, rich and highly cultivated voice and an unaffected, ladylike manner on the stage which is very pleasing. Harlow's Band and the male quartette also performed their parts well, and altogether the concert deserved a much larger patronage than it received.

The Concord Monitor, having had all the experience it wants in "disciplining" the CHRONICLE, and given up the job, now stands well aside and daringly cries "stuboy" to another sheet,—an assailant which, if not much more powerful than the Monitor, at least displays much better courage. We don't wonder at the Monitor's last move; for an editor who has to read the Boston papers to find out what opinions he shall hold and whom he shall commend or oppose, will naturally look to other papers for assistance when overmatched. Our Concord brother has probably learned by this time that we form our own opinions,—incomprehensible though such conduct must seem to him,—and in time, if he only perseveres, may get through his head a knowledge of the fact that we also fight our own battles and never squeal for help from outsiders.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—It will be a matter of surprise and regret to many who have sung, Sunday after Sunday, "Sweet Hour of Prayer," and some of the other better known of our hymns, that their author, Mrs. Fanny Crosby, is now living in New York with her husband under the triple disadvantage of extreme poverty, blindness and advanced age.

—The steamship Dhoolia was wrecked in the Red Sea. Among the wreckage, sold for a mere song, was a box, supposed to contain nothing valuable, but afterwards discovered to contain damaged East Indian postage stamps to the value of about four lacs of rupees (£40,000). The stamps had been manufactured in England for the Indian post-office, and sent out as cargo with no proper description or declaration of value. These stamps are finding their way into India through various channels; they would have been no loss to the country if they had been at the bottom of the ocean, but, being found and sold, are likely to cost the government of India little short of £40,000.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown, or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

are the most compleat purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood, they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY DROPSY AND RUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY!

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

The Story of Jock Williston.

[Aldine for April.]

Concluded from yesterday.

"Mabelle was as good as she was pretty. I used to tell them that all the young men on the coast just stood afar off and worshipped her. The girls doted on her, too, —she seemed too different from all the rest to be the least bit jealous of. Old Mr. Devereux was masterly pleased with the Island, and I heard him talkin' with Parson Ellet once, at a clam-bake, about the 'hospitality of the inhabitants, and their remarkable sympathy with an invalid's sufferin's,' and it's bein' 'really rare, my dear sir, to find such delicate feelin' among the common people.' 'Common people,' indeed! I ached to speak up right there, and say 'You fool! so you think it's for you that twenty boats are ready mornin', noon, or night, with two or three stout young fellows to each one, to row or sail you where you like?' But I bit my lips, and held still, which was better for us both.

"All little children and brute beasts loved Mabelle at first sight, and it was no wonder that poor Jock took to her, too. She used to spend 'most all the pleasant days out-doors with her father, for Mr. Devereux, when he didn't choose to go out on the water, would have a great chair carried down to the shore, and sit there in the sun. Mabelle would ramble up and down the beach, or climb about among the rocks, coming around every little while to see if her father wanted anything. Jock got by degrees to followin' her for all the world as he used to his mother, before she died. Some girls wouldn't have wanted the great foolish fellow around, or would even have been afraid of him, maybe, but it wasn't so with Mabelle. She used to speak to him in her quiet, gentle way, and he minded her voice like a little child. It was wonderful how many things she made him do for her that nobody else would 'a' thought of trying to make him understand. I used to wonder sometimes if he'd had somebody like her when he was a little fellow and first lost his mind, if he mightn't partly have got it back again, after all.

"One afternoon I started to go down by the fish house that Tom Porter 'd left there dryin', and I'd promised him to see to. I went toward where Mr. Devereux was sittin' in his chair, and Mabelle standin' by him. There were three or four spruce-lookin' young men talkin' with them, that had come over that day in a yacht from Portland, and a little ways off, by the side of a rock, half-sittin' and half-lyin' in the sun, was Jock. I couldn't hear what the young men were sayin', but I saw they looked at Jock, and laughed, and in a minute one of them stepped up to him and gave his chin a pull, sayin' somethin' that set them all off again. I was close by them, and a sharp word was on the end of my tongue when something seemed to stop me and I looked at Mabelle. O ma'am, I'd never seen her like that! So tall and so terrible! Her whole body trembled, her eyes flashed, and a red spot burned in her cheek, and then went out in an instant and left her face like ashes. She didn't seem to walk toward Jock—she went as the wind goes. She put her hand on his shoulder, and he gazed up into her face. I'll never forget that sight. The same pitiful, dazed look that I knew so well come over my poor boy's face once more—his hand went slowly up to his forehead. 'It's comin'!' he said. 'Comin'?' she answered, in a low voice that rung like a bell,—'Yes, my poor brother! Yes, a thousand times! Comin' in God's time?' 'Mabelle! Why Mabelle!' said Mr. Devereux, but she did not seem to hear. Turnin' half about, she saw me. 'Go now with Mis. Dawson, Jock!' she said in her old voice, and he came to me in a moment. We walked on a few steps, and I looked around, and saw the young men standin' still with their eyes on the ground, and Mr. Devereux leanin' on Mabelle's arm, and walkin' slowly up the hill. Tom Porter and Ben Britton were masterly disappointed that the Portland chaps went home next mornin' instead o' stayin' for a week's fishin' as they'd given out they would. The boys had allowed to make a good bit out of them for odd jobs, but Mabelle and I kept our own counsel.

"Mabelle and her father went home in November, and a little while after, Mis. Deacon Price told me they had gone to France.

"The fall of 1840 was a hard one for folks as got their livin' by the sea. One gale beat close upon another, and more than one boat from the Island went to pieces. Winter came, at last, and it was a comfort to have the mackerel schooners all in, and settle down a little. Comfort, leastwise to some, more than to me, for Zebedee was away somewhere in the north seas, and many a gusty night I used to lay and never shut my eyes till daybreak.

"Christmas Eye came. All day the Island had been choked in a cold mist. Away to the northeast the gray bank of fog broke a little as the sun went down, and showed a pile of cloud black as midnight.

"Jock 'd been stayin' with me ever since summer. He didn't seem like himself that night, so restless and uneasy-like, and to see if I couldn't pacify him, I got my Bible and begun to read just where it opened, which happened to be at the eighteenth Psalm. He threw himself down and listened, but he had such a queer, wild look, that I shut the Bible after a little, and told him to go up-stairs to bed. He started docile enough, but at the chamber door he stopped so long that I spoke to him again:

"'Go on, now, Jock—that's my good boy.' He gave such a start that I was scared for a minute, then he put up his hand, and said, quite loud,

"'It's comin'! To-night!'

"Then he went up stairs.

"Somehow I couldn't go to bed. I felt as if something was goin' to happen. The very air wasn't natural. Before I knew it I'd be sayin' over to myself, 'It's comin'—to-night!' 'Twas no use tryin' to scold myself out of my feelin's, and so, at last, I just lopped down on the lounge with my clothes on. As I laid there, I could hear the wind risin' and the surf pound on the rocks outside of the bar. I heard the clock strike ten, and eleven, and then I must 'a' gone into a heavy sleep, for when I woke up all of a sudden, the last spark of fire was out and the room cold as a grave. The candle was burnt down into the stick, until there was hardly a gleam of light left. I got up, for I was shiverin' like an ague-chill, and as I walked across the floor, I felt the old house tremble in the gale, and the roar of the sea was like one long roll of thunder. Then, all to once—it's a dreadful sound, ma'am, in a night like that—I heard a gun, and in a minute more, another, and I fell down on my knees and prayed for the poor wretches perishin' out there in the storm. I couldn't abear to stay alone, so I put something around me and ran over through the storm to 'Bijah Porter's. They were all up, and 'Bijah and Tom had just come up from the shore. They couldn't make out anything, they said, and the sea run so that there was nothin' to do but wait for light.

"Toward mornin' the wind went down, and with the first streak of dawn, we all went down to the beach. There was a great crowd there a'ready, and after a good while we could just make out a big black thing, lyin' partly out of the water to the leeward of Pirate's Rock, not more'n a quarter of a mile away.

"'Poor creeturs!' said 'Bije, 'they must 'a' been all dead hours ago.'

"So nigh the land, and Christmas Day!' said Martha Price, who was a standin' close to me. Then she gripped my arm, and says she under her breath,

"'Ma'am Dawson, I dare to say that it's a cruel thing!'

"I couldn't answer her. I felt like a blasphemer, for 'twas my own thought she'd voiced.

"All of a sudden I heard a noise behind me, like some one runnin', and the crowd parted every way. I turned around, and for an instant, ma'am, I thought the sea 'd give up the dead it swallowed two and twenty years agone! Wasn't it Cap'n Williston that stood there, with black eyes flashin' and the salt spray frozen into his hair? A dozen women screamed, and old Mis. Price fell down like dead.

"'Jock?' I called out then, for I didn't know what I was sayin'—'O Jock! is it come?'

"He didn't answer. I doubt if he heard or saw me at all. He stood starin' out to the sea with such a face as I never saw on mortal man. All to once his voice, that used to be so weak like a child's, rung out strong and clear as a trumpet:

"'He bowed the heavens, also, and came down, and darkness was under his feet. And he rode upon a cherub and did fly; yea, he did fly upon the wings of the wind. His pavillon round about him were dark waters and thick clouds of the skies.'

"'He sent from above, he took me, he drew me out of many waters.

"'Thou wilt light my candle; the Lord my God will enlighten my darkness. For who is God, save the Lord, and who is a rock save our God?'

"The fog lifted up in the east, and the clear light touched his head. A minute more and the wreck was in full view. Jack turned like a flash and wrenched the glass out of Skipper Gibson's hand. He looked for an instant, then he dashed it down on the sand, and ran for the boat-house. The men looked at each other. Nobody seemed to breathe. Skipper Gibson was the first that spoke.

"'Men!' he said 'God calls us by a miracle!'

"It was like breakin' a spell. They ran, they shouted, they pulled down the boat. Jock was the first inside. Six times the swell beat her back, but the seventh she passed the breaker. Up and down over the white caps we could see her spring to the oars. The men told us after that Jock never spoke, but pulled with the strength of three, and that if in all those sensless years when he'd been so much upon the sea, he'd made the handlin' of a boat a study, he couldn't 'a' seemed to know better what to do. Skipper Gibson declared to his dying' day that he believed the spirit of his father came back into Jock's body that day; but I think, ma,am, that it was another Spirit enlightened that darkness.

"We watched them as they made fast to the wreck, and then we made out two men climbin' up the side and into the riggin'. We saw through the glass one dark thing and then another handed down; then somethin' seemed to fall and nothin' was clear for a little. The boat moved round and round the wreck, and headed for the shore. As it came nearer, we made out Skipper Gibson and 'Bijah and the others, but no Jock. A hundred hands stretched out to pull 'em in. The Skipper sprung over the ows.

"'Quick! quick!' he called out. 'Lend a hand, and we may save them yet!'

"Who was it, ma'am, do you think, that lay white and still in that boat-bottom? A woman, and an old man and a young! It was Mabelle, and her father, and poor Jock!

"I needn't tell you how we worked. We that live here know how to snatch life out of the very maw of the hungry sea. Mabelle and Mr. Devereux were nigher frozen to death than drowned. The captain of the ship had 'em lashed to the riggin', wrapped round and round with sail-cloth. Only that had kept them alive, and they two alone, of all on board, saw the sun rise after that awful night.

"But Jock—my Jock! We'd 'a' given our hearts to save him, but it wasn't to be. He climbed up first, the men told us, with the skipper after him, and cut the ropes himself. Mr. Devereux was handed down first, and then Jock lifted Mabelle in his arms, but just as the men in the boat took her from him, her cloak fell away and showed her face, white and set like death. Jock gave a great cry, threw up his arms, and fell over the ship's side. They picked him up in less'n a minute, but he must 'a' struck his head somehow, for there was a great bruise on his temple, and he never breathed nor stirred.

"I knew when I first set eyes on him that he was dead. I must 'a' fell, after they'd tried for hours to bring him to, and given up at last, something as Elisha did when the sons of the prophets came back from Jauntin' everywhere for Elijah, and he told them, 'Said I not unto you, Go not?' I thought the Lord had come so near in takin' poor Jock that we might 'a' seen 'the chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof.'

"He looked the image of his father in the coffin. Mr. Devereux couldn't leave his bed then, nor for weeks and weeks after, but he made Deacon Price go to Portland and get the best that money could buy—all rosewood and silver and satin and velvet. And such a funeral never was seen on the Island. I reckon that a thousand people stood in the graveyard and around the church and scarce a dry eye among them all.

"There was no end of fine-spun talk among the doctors. Three o'em came to talk with me one day seein' that Jock had been with me so much, to find out all they could about him—the 'nature of his disease', and so on. But I just made answer,

"'It's no use, gentlemen! Beggin' your pardon, you're no cause to meddle with this thing. It's the Lord's doin's, and it's marvelous in our eyes!'

"And so they went away."

"Mr. Devereux had the stone set up, but 'twas Mabelle that told them what to put on it. The old gentleman is dead, now, but Mabelle is married and lives in Boston, and every Summer she comes down to the Island and brings her little boy, and when the afternoons are pleasant you can see them sittin' here in the graveyard on this very seat. She tells him over and over what I've been telling you, and he never gets tired of listenin'.

"Always, when she's done, he says:

"'So that's why you named me Jock, mamma?'

"But bless me! there's the bell, ma'am. How I've been runnin' on! But you'll excuse an old woman whose life is mostly in the past."

Daily Chronicle.

FRIDAY, APRIL 3, 1874.

Readables.

Thomas Carr, an old gentleman of East Boston, Mass., was putting up a monument over the graves of his three children in the Catholic cemetery at Dorchester, when a headstone he was removing to make room for the monument fell upon him and crushed him to death.

Barque Credits, at Southampton, Eng., from New York, lost several men overboard during the trip, including the captain.

There is reported from New York the discovery of another establishment for the production of milk from swill-fed cows, and the details are very disgusting. It is reported also that a number of dealers, whose names are published in the Brooklyn Eagle, have for some time been selling this milk to families as that of the purest quality, to the amount of 12,000 quarts daily.

Tom McGehan, a notorious rough, was shot in the head by John Kochler, another lovely character, at Hamilton, Ohio, on the 30th of March. Both were drunk at the time, and Kochler failed to kill McGehan, for which he should receive condign punishment. It will be remembered that Vallandigham lost his life while acting as McGehan's lawyer, in his trial for murder, by the accidental discharge of a pistol with which he (Vallandigham) was demonstrating his theory that McGehan's alleged victim shot himself while attempting to draw his pistol from his pocket; and that two other persons soon after fatally shot themselves while showing how the accident occurred to Mr. Vallandigham.

Dr. Alfred Hitchcock, a widely-known physician, died at Fitchburg, Mass., March 30th.

A financial panic exists in London, and New York is getting fearful.

Seven persons were certainly burned to death in the fire at Millerstown, Penn., on the 1st, and it is believed that others lost their lives at the same time. The pecuniary loss was $250,000. Sixty-nine buildings were burned.

One of the most serious attempts at an "April Fool's" joke was made on Bowdoin square, Boston, by the placing of metallic cartridges on the street, near the horse-car tracks. They were discovered through the explosion of one of them which had been run over by a butcher cart, and on close inspection a number of unexploded ones were found lying on the ground, all pointed toward the Revere House. A box with the label of the Union Metallic Cartridge Company was also found, which had evidently contained twenty of the missiles, which were of a 42 calibre, of the class known as "shells," the slugs of which are half an inch in diameter. The ball of the shell exploded was heard to strike a piece of iron on Court street, and the force of the concussion was such as to crumble the paving-stone on which it rested. The fortunate discovery probably prevented what might have resulted in serious accidents.

The Spanish Carlists asserts that the movement of Serrano against the royalists before Bilboa entirely failed, and there was no fighting between the 28th and 30th of March. Fifteen thousand troops are on the way to reinforce Serrano. It is reported that the Carlist General Ollo has been killed. A final attack on Abanto was to have been made on the 1st of April.

A Havana letter says that the new captain general, Concha, when he arrives, will propose a temporary cessation of hostilities between the insurgents and the Spanish troops and volunteers, to be followed by a formal treaty of peace. The basis of the treaty will include a pledge that the island shall remain united to the crown of Spain, that the people shall elect representatives to the Cortes, that slaves shall only be interfered with by the consent of the owners, and in case emancipation should be decided upon, then the owners of slaves are to be indemnified.

It appears that only twenty pilgrims, instead of 117, were lost overboard recently from the Mediterranean steamer.

The State election in Rhode Island occured April 1st. There was no democratic nomination for State officers and the vote was very light. Henry Howard was reelected governor by a vote of 12,269 to 1509 for Lyman Pierce, and 107 scattering. Charles C. Van Zandt was elected lieutenant-governor, receiving 7679 votes to 6512 cast for William F. Sayles, the prohibition candidate. Joshua M. Addeman was reelected secretary of State and Willard Sayles attorney-general, with but little opposition. Samuel Clark was elected treasurer by a large majority over Henry Goff, prohibition. The chief interest in the election centered in the choice of members of the legislature, which will choose a United States senator. The new assembly is largely republican, as usual, but the senatorial question remains in doubt, and probably cannot be definitely determined until a trial of the strength of the respective candidates is had in the general assembly, the first Tuesday in June.

South Carolina strawberries were offered for sale in Boston on the 1st.

State News.

A singular accident occurred in Hinsdale, to John Brooks of Brattleboro', Vt.; he was thrown from a load of hay, and his spine was injured in such a manner that his whole body is perfectly paralyzed, his head alone remaining uninjured. He is quite conscious, converses intelligently, experiences no pain, but is dead to all appearances with the exception of his head.

Some of the laborers on the Nashua & Rochester Railroad, who have been getting $1.50 per day, have struck for $1.75. A dispatch from Nashua on the 1st said a hundred or more of the strikers were then wandering about the city, most of them staggering drunk, but there had been no breach of the peace.

Rev. D. H. Stoddard of Athol, Mass., who has accepted a call from Great Falls, preached his farewell sermon at Athol on Sunday, March 29.

Thomas M. Edwards has been nominated as the citizens' candidate for Mayor of Keene. The election will take place on the 14th instant.

The A. & W. Sprague Man'g Co.

Proceedings in bankruptcy have been commenced by the officers of the National Bank of Commerce, against the A. & W. Sprague Manufacturing Company of Rhode Island. Mr. Chafee, trustee under the Sprague mortgage for the creditors, has published a statement to the creditors of the firm, in which he says that the pledges made by the A. & W. Sprague Manufacturing Company, and A. & W. Sprague, to the general meeting of their creditors, that their property and their best energies should be devoted to the payment of their creditors, have, up to this time, been entirely fulfilled, and that he has been seconded by them in every particular. The trustee mortgage has been in force four months the first of April, and during that time a reduction of expenses in conducting the business of the mills and print works, equivalent to a saving of $350,000 per annum, has been effected. The statement closes as follows:—"More than twelve thousand persons, including men, women and children, are in the employ of the company and are dependent upon the mills and print works for their daily bread. Upwards of fifteen thousand people derive their entire or chief support from the industries connected with the business. Upon the filing of the petition I must close the various works and turn these people out of employment. The immediate loss which this will entail upon creditors will amount to at least a quarter of a million of dollars, and the calamitous consequences which will ensue to the operatives every mind can picture for itself. I will not yield to this necessity until I have declared my firm conviction that the A. & W. Sprague Manufacturing Company would, in the absence of proceedings against it in bankruptcy, be able to pay and discharge in full within a reasonable time every dollar of its obligations."

A Strong Wind.

On the night of the 30th March, at mid night, the signal station on the top of Mount Washington reported a northwest gale blowing at the fearful rate of 140 miles an hour—as shown by the anemometer—and a temperature 180 below zero. This is the highest force ever attained by the wind in New England, so far as we know. A gale of sixty or seventy miles an hour will often blow down trees. In the hurricane of the tropics, a force of 100, and even 110 miles an hour is not uncommon. No human being could stand before such a gale. The people in the chained-down but contrive to examine the anemometer without emerging—else they would be swept off boldly, and hurled down Tuckerman's Ravine. The roar of such a mountain gale is terrible beyond words.

A Plea for Corsets.

[New York Tribune.]

The opening lecture of Mrs. Walter C. Lyman's first course to ladies was delivered yesterday afternoon at Association Hall. The lecturer, while advocating most of the views recently advanced by women physicians on physiology and hygiene, made some wise modifications. Rules that will apply to aborigines need exceptions before being adopted by a civilized people. Perverted modes of living require, so to speak, perverted styles of dress. While health is largely dependent upon a right diet, it is still more dependent upon right breathing. A woman's animal spirits and her endurance are proportioned to her thorough inhalations and exhalations. If she be properly dressed, the ascent of stairs, as well as hills, may be made conducive to health. God, in creating particular portions of the body to perform special functions, did not intend one organ to perform the work of two. Fashion, however, demands that women crowd the organs of the thorax upon those of the abdomen, compress instead of expand the floating ribs, partly displace the stomach by the liver, and contract the space required by the lungs. But the lungs are to purify the blood. If they do not have room to perform their function, if the breathing, because of the wrong dressing, be light, the blood becomes imperfectly purified. Because so many American women are sedentary in their habits, the head is much of the time bent forward, the spine unduly curved above the shoulderblades, and the organs of the chest pressed downward. Many school-girls acquire curvature of the spine. Now if women cannot be cured of excess of inactivity the next best thing to do is to put them in a straight-jacket. Corsets are a result of modern modes of living. Women, however, who sit much, or very fleshy women, might better wear them than suffer from diseases that may result because they lack means of support. A woman who wears a corset cannot sit bent far over. The steels and bones of a corset distribute the weight which would otherwise cut into the body from skirts and other bands, and thus cause a torpid state of abdominal muscles. Corsets can be so made and so worn that a full and deep respiration can be taken. It would be safe to compare a half-dozen women who habitually wear corsets with a half-dozen who do not.

The Flying Trapeze.

The New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Sunday Mercury writes: "When I was a very little boy, I used to think it the height of human bliss to become a circus actor. I rather think that the average healthy little boy all over the world entertains the same erroneous idea. It is a very pleasant dream while it lasts; but, very fortunately, boys grow out of it, in cities at least. Country boys are harder to break of the delusion, and it is from among them that the circus gets its recruits. The poor fellow who was killed at the latter part of last week, in performing the trapeze feat, became infatuated by the tinsel and spangles when the circus visited the village in Massachusetts where he lived, and nothing could induce him to adopt any other kind of a life. He was active, and willing to learn, and had no difficulty in getting employment from the manager. He knew no fear, and would attempt without hesitation any act that he saw another perform, no matter how daring. He was called in the bills "The Monaech of the Air," from the daring feats he performed on the flying trapeze, and the applause of the audience only seemed to render him more eager to do some act of fool-hardiness that would add to their wonder. And what do you suppose he got for all this? Seven dollars a week! Less than one dollar and seventeen cents a night for risking his neck and getting killed at last. What a commentary this is on the infatuation of young men who give up the ordinary means of earning an honest living for the pitiful ambition to show off in spangled tights for seven dollars a week and a broken neck."

A Dog Eleven Months Dying of Grief.

[Brattleborough (Vt.) Phenix.]

The proprietor of one of the hotels in Richford, Vt., has a dog in his possession who is slowly terminating his days in grief for the loss of his master. The previous proprietor of the hotel owned the dog, which has black-and-tan blood in his veins, for almost eighteen long years, and was very much attached to him. The attachment was reciprocated by the dog, and about a year ago the master was taken ill and died. During his sickness the dog was shut up in a stable for the purpose of keeping him quiet, and of weaning him from his master, whose absence he would most likely loudly bewail in the manner peculiar to such animals, and shortly after the funeral the poor brute was liberated. He immediately instituted a search for the grave of his late master, and soon found it, and would not leave it for three weeks. He was subsequently taken home, and for the past eleven months has been well fed and kindly cared for by the present occupants of the hotel, but no amount of kindness and petting will elicit from him any manifestation of joy, and he will, no doubt, soon follow his deceased master.

The Pull Down Practice.

Death laughs when he sees the weak and feeble bled, blistered, salivated, opiumized, or griped with violent purgatives. He knows that under such treatment they cannot long survive. In direct conflict with this pull down practice is the principal upon which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters operate. The effect of this incomparable vegetable restorative is to build up the system and invigorate the constitution. It imparts appetite and assists digestion, enriches and cleanses the blood, regulates and tones the liver and the bowels, and establishes and perpetuates a healthy habit of body. By a happy combination of vegetable extracts—tonic, aperient and anti-billious—with a pure stimulant, these effects are simultaneously produced. There is no prescription of the pharmacopoia that has the same scope. You may find among its formulas scourges for the bowels, stimulants for the stomach, sedatives for the nerves, but no grand combination medicine that, like Hostetter's Bitters, is at once a tonic, an aperient, a corrective and an alterative.

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT. SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

The annual meeting of the Portsmouth Mercantile Library Association for the election of officers and the transaction of any other business that may come before the meeting, will be held at the Hall, No. 5 Congress street, this (Friday) evening at 7 1-2 o'clock. All members are desired to be present. Per order.

The Concord correspondent of the Boston Journal says Wm. M. Thayer of this city (late editor of the Times) is one of the persons named as being likely to be chosen clerk of the State Senate by the democrats, and Rev. A. C. Hardy of this city as superintendent of public instruction. Col. Pearson of the Concord People and James M. Campbell, Esq., of the Manchester Union, are at present the most prominent candidates for the position of State printer. Albert R. Hatch of this city and Joseph Burrows of Plymouth are the candidates for the speakership of the House.

The scarlet fever has assumed the form of an epidemic here, and has been very fatal thus far. Scores of children are ill with it.

The Blind Band from the Perkins Institute at South Boston, with attendants, the whole party numbering twenty-four persons, have engaged rooms at the Rockingham House. They are to give one of their splendid concerts at the Temple on Fast night, April 9th.

Three thousand yards of macadamized walks have been laid on Star Island, Isle of Shoals, the past winter, and a solid stone pier for landing passengers has been completed. The steamer Oceanic will make two trips each way, daily, between Portsmouth and the island, beginning on the 15th of June.

Mrs. John Norton lost the use of her eyes some four or five days ago, and has since been deprived, by death, of a husband, a brother and a son-in-law. Mr. Oliver F. Gerrish, her son-in-law, died March 30th and was buried on the 1st of April, and on the latter day her husband died in this city, and her brother, Mr. George S. Walker, in Boston. Mr. Walker's remains will be brought here for interment this evening, the funeral services taking place in Boston.

Lieut. Fred P. Ela.

A letter from Hon. J. H. Ela to Postmaster Peirce, gives all the particulars known concerning the recent death of Fred P. Ela, U. S. M. C., who disappeared from on board the steamer Great Republic on her last trip from Japan. It seems Lieut. Ela had been pronounced unfit for further service by a medical board, on account of chronic diarrhea, and ordered home with a recommendation of sick leave; and the steamer's surgeon states that his complaint exhibited typhoid characteristics. He left a letter to be sent home in case anything happened to him, in which he says he had concealed from his friends what he had suffered since he was in Shanghai in June last; that he was no better and felt he had but a few weeks longer to live, at most. Lieut. Nichols, U.S. N., a fellow passenger on the Great Republic, left Lieut. Ela at about 7 o'clock one evening to go to the smoking room, and about twenty minutes later his servant went to his stateroom and found it empty, his cap and one slipper being afterward found on the guard outside his room. The night was cold, dark and rainy, and two men stationed aft saw and heard nothing. This is the substance of what has been received from Lieut. Nichols and the surgeon of the steamship, and is probably all that will ever be known concerning Lieut. Ela's death. There can be little doubt that his mind was unsettled by long continued and acute physical suffering and the consciousness that he had no hope of recovery. He was a very pleasant, unassuming young man and a good officer, and was deservedly popular; and in this city, where he was well known, he has left many warm friends to regret his early death, and not (so far as we know) a single enemy.

An Old Trick Revamped.

A friend has sent into our office two lots of mail matter recently received by him, with a suggestion that we advertise the "generosity and shrewdness" of his correspondents. The first lot consists of a handbill setting forth the advantages of investing in the Magnolia (Iowa) Gift Concert enterprise, as "only $10,000" of the $165,000 realized from the sale of tickets would be "devoted to charitable purposes," leaving $150,000 to be distributed among ticket holders and $5000 to pay the incidental expenses. In addition to the handbill was a very imposing-looking ticket, and a "circular to editors" announcing the gift of a "complimentary," only asking in return "a few complimentary remarks in your editorial columns," or (if the recipient is not an editor) that the ticket and circular be shown to the "beneficiary's" friends.

The second lot of matter consists of a "notice" that N. H. Bancroft & Co., of Chicago, are authorized to receive all money on account of the great Magnolia scheme, Messrs. Maynard & Co., the enterprising projectors, not being able to look after that branch of their immense business; and a "special notice" that "your ticket" has drawn a prize valued at $200, on which five per cent. must be paid before it is forwarded. The fortunate ticket-holder is strongly charged to send bills only, postal money-orders not being wanted, as "none but distributing offices have funds enough on hand to pay" the immense amounts received by Maynard & Co.

It would seem that such transparent tricks have been exposed openly and often enough to destroy all hope of the swindlers' success in fleecing any person, even if the documents did not bear the thief's mark in every line; but there must be fools enough yet left in the world to make the business pay, or it would be given up. This lottery-prize-and-percentage dodge is very old, the only new thing about it being the "circular to editors" and the modest request for "a few complimentary remarks in your editorial columns." Of course such fellows as Maynard & Co. take the best of care not to send any of their precious documents to any editor; but the simple-minded greeny who doesn't "take the papers" and thereby keep himself posted in such matters, on receiving the "complimentary" would be almost certain to imagine that similar ones were sent to editors, and that of course the whole thing must be conducted on the square. The thieves' receipt of the coveted percentage would follow as a matter of course.

A Right Cat in the Wrong Place.

[Troy Times.]

Last night a cat belonging to the American House, and afflicted with temporary insanity, entered Breece's "Occidental" saloon, and ran along the marble counter back of the bar, pursued by another cat, also afflicted with temporary insanity. When the first cat arrived opposite the large mirror she glanced in and saw another cat confronting her. Then the music began. Such a growling and squabbling! She lashed her tail fiercely, and at every switch down went several of the delicate and costly glasses which ornament the rear of the bar. Finally the cat thought her opponent was about to make a spring, and concluded to get the start. So away she went at the mirror with a fierce bound, and away went cut glass decanters, Sevres China ornaments, Bohemian glass vases, and other bijouterie, etc., to the value of $80. Meanwhile, the other cat, which had been pursuing, stopped in blank astonishment, and seemed to wonder what under the sun could possess the other cat to take on so. In the meantime, George Taffe ran up to the French Opera and borrowed Louchard's big hat and knotted stick together with a pink umbrella, and returning made such a violent assault upon the cat that she retreated and gave up the fight with her imaginary opponent.

Means of Checking Coughing, Sneezing, Etc.

[Dr. Brown-Sequard.]

There are many facts which show that morbid phenomena of respiration can also be stopped by influence of arrest. Coughing, for instance, can be stopped by pressing on the nerves on the lip in the neighborhood of the nose. A pressure there may prevent a cough when it is beginning. Sneezing may be stopped by the same mechanism. Pressing also in the neighborhood of the ear, right in front of the ear, may stop coughing. It is also true of hiccough, but much less so than for sneezing or coughing. Pressing very hard on the top of the mouth inside is also a means of stopping coughing; and I may say that the will has immense power there. There was a French surgeon who used to say, whenever he entered the wards of his hospital, "The first patient who coughs here will be deprived of food to-day." It was exceedingly rare that a patient coughed then.

There are many other affections associated with breathing which can be stopped by the same mechanism that stops the heart's action. In spasms of the glottis, which is a terrible thing in children, as you well know, as it sometimes causes death, and also in whooping-cough, it is possible to afford relief by throwing cold water on the face, or by tickling the soles of the feet, which produces laughter, and at the same time goes to the gray matter that is producing the spasms and arrests it almost at once. I would not say that these means are always successful. I would not say that we can always prevent coughs by our will; but in many instances these things are possible, and if you remember that in bronchitis and pneumonia, or any other acute affection of the lungs, hacking or coughing greatly increases the trouble at times, you can easily see how important it is for the patient to try to avoid coughing as best he can.

—A Kentucky paper apologizes for having spoken of "the red-headed, malignant mule who dispenses the county money," by saying that it wrote: "Big-hearted, valiant soul," etc. The fault of the types again.

—An Episcopal clergyman, who objected to the singing of the John Brown song on board a Cunard steamer because there were southerners on board, was politely reminded of his own indiscretion in urging the claims of the Saviour upon the congregated passengers, a large number of whom were Jews.

Dr. Lothrop and Dancing.

A better story than the many told of West Springfield's eccentric parson, Rev. Dr. Lothrop, at the centennial gathering, last week, is told by Rev. Mr. Nightingale of Groton, Mass. If it is not true it is good enough to be, not only in itself but in the telling: A young lady who was a member of Dr. Lothrop's church went on a visit to a neighboring town and while there attended a party and danced. Tidings of her sin reached home before her. On her return she was visited and called to most severe account for the disgrace she had thus brought upon herself and upon the church, and which had been found out, notwithstanding it had been done among strangers. One staid maiden was specially earnest in her rebukes and made the poor girl feel very bad. "What shall I do?" she asked. "You had better go and see Dr. Lothrop." She did go, and told him all about it. "And so, my dear, you went to the party and danced, did you?" he said. "Yes sir." "And did you have a good time?" "Yes sir." "Well, I am glad of it, and I hope you will go again and enjoy yourself. And now I want you to tell me the name of the woman who has been making you all this trouble." She told. "Go to that woman and tell her from me, that if she wants to get to heaven she had better make mere use of her feet and less of her tongue."

Punch in His Garden.

There was a great stir, says Punch, in our garden t'other day. The Potatoes were ready to jump out of their skins. The Beet turned red to its very roots. The Celery lost their heads, and the Cabbages their hearts. The Peas split their pods with excitement. The Asparagus could with difficulty be kept in its bed. The Parsley curled itself in a corner. The Cucumber alone maintained its habitual coolness. The cause of all this commotion was the presence of a noted vegetarian. The Potatoes never took their eyes off him.

DR. FLINT'S

QUAKER BITTERS.

These celebrated Bitters are composed of choice Roots, Herbs and Barks, among which are Gentian, Sarsaparilla, Wild Cherry, Dandelion, Juniper and other Berries, and are so prepared as to retain all their medicinal qualities. They invariably cure or greatly relieve the following complaints: Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Complaint, Loss of Appetite, Headache, Bilious Attacks, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Ague, Cold Chills, Rheumatism, Summer Complaints, Piles, Kidney Diseases, Female Difficulties, Lassitude, Low Spirits, General Debility, and, in fact, everything caused by an impure state of the Blood or deranged condition of Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys. The aged find in the Quaker Bitters a gentle, soothing stimulant, so desirable in their declining years. No one can remain long unwell (unless afflicted with an incurable disease) after taking a few bottles of the Quaker Bitters.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,

For all the Purposes of a Family Physic

CURING

are the most concentrated purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefit they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY DROPSY AND RUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

Butler on Wilson.

The following letter, written by General Butler to Senator Wilson after his defeat in 1871, and now published in the New York Evening Post, has lost no interest on account of its delay in reaching the public:

LOWELL, MASS., Oct. 23, 1871.

To Mr. Senator Wilson, Natick:

Dear Sir—A press of engagements which leaves me but little pleasure to attend to the epistolary courtesies of friends has delayed my acknowledgement of your letter of the 7th of October, in which you say, "Now, General, I propose to write a few plain words to you." I like plain directness of speech. It is a virtue, and one which I practice to some extent, and in which I am glad to be preceded by you on this occasion. I accept the apology in your note for your action toward me, and find in it a satisfactory explanation of your course, which was before inexplicable. I have learned, and have the evidence, that in Paris you said, in substance, that you deemed that in my candidature for Governor I was doing a very wise thing, because I should bring back the labor and temperance men to the republican party. Your note shows why you then reported me—that when you left for home you thought I should be nominated. "Russell had so said to me in London, and I so said to others." Success has ever advocates and supporters, and you thought I was to succeed. But, as you say, "when I found there was a contest coming, I first intended to go to California, and did not intend to mingle in the coming contest, but was kept at home and crowded into affairs."

There never was a statement more exactly and unwittingly explanatory of the facts than this. Mr. Senator, you were literally "crowded" into your opposition to me. My enemies knowing your weakness to do what the last man asks you to do (with which your friends are also well acquainted), by the imperious dictation of the senior Senator (to which you have always finally yielded), drove you to saying and doing on Tuesday exactly different from what you had declared in Paris and what you had said on the previous Friday. I am informed, from such sources that I believe the testimony, that on Friday, as in Paris, you said substantially that I was doing a very wise thing in the manner in which I was carrying on my canvass; yet to the exact contrary of that declaration, on Tuesday you were "crowded" by Senator Sumner and others into concurring in the written statement of Senator Sumner, which neither of you dared to publish over either of your names—"that you deeply regretted the extraordinary canvass which Gen. Butler has precipitated upon the Commonwealth." So I could not reply to you.

I did not quite understand the next sentence of your note: "Your speeches were such as to force a rupture upon republicans." Pardon me Mr. Senator, what can you mean by a "rupture upon republicans?" is it of any kind of disease to which you refer? I am still more mystified when you further say: "And to make your nomination self-degradation." How that can be I don't understand. Indeed, you seem to think you will puzzle me; because you next say: "This may not seem so to you, but if you will think how it will look in another man you will realize it." Under favor, Mr. Senator, I cannot "realize" it. How my nomination was to be "self-degradation," either in you or myself (which ever "self" is meant) is entirely incomprehensible to me, after doing my best "to look at it in another man."

Again you say: "Believing that your success would be injurious to our cause, I said, what I thought, that it ought not to be made." What ought not to be made, Mr. Senator? My success? Again you say: "I had a right to say it, and I did say it as a sense of my duty." I agree to this: but please, Mr. Senator, why should not you have written it in a little more intelligible form? Dativs sum, non Œdipus. That is Latin; and you may not understand it. Let me translate it freely. It was the old Roman method of saying: "I am Butler and not Wilson," and therefore I cannot understand "plain words," explanations put in the form of muddled conundrums. I am still more puzzled when I come to the next sentence: "I said to all that I should vote for you if nominated, and do all I could for your election." How would it have been possible for you to do that when my nomination would "force a rupture on republicans," and would be "self-degradation," and (as Mr. Sumner "crowded" you into concurring) to "a nomination which would be hostile to the best interests to the Commonwealth and the republican party? I never would vote for such a nominee for anybody, or anything, Mr. Sumner. I could not even have voted for you, much as I deem it necessary for you to live by political office. I never would have voted for you, with such awful consequences, although regularly nominated. If you are sincere in what you say in your note (or understand what Mr. Sumner made you say), it would seem that you mistake a regular nomination for a conscience.

Again you say: "I have ha'l no sympathy with those who have indulged in personal assaults on you or your friends." But any worse personal assault made upon me, than that which Senator Sumner "crowded" Senator Wilson into concurring in—that my nomination would be "hostile to the Commonwealth and the republican party"—I have failed to discover. However, for all that, let me repeat, I heartily accept your apology, and excuse you. You were "crowded" into it, and I fully believe you had no idea of the force of the language which Senator Sumner made you use, and therefore I entirely credit you when you say you have never sympathized with any personal assault upon me. How could you? Didn't you say, on the Friday previous, in substance, in the presence of more than one person, that I was doing a wise thing in making my canvass for Governor, and that I should unite the party by bringing back those who had gone out?

I am sorry to learn, as you tell me, that your friends at Natick not only failed to support you, but failed to do as you desired. You say, "I was not a candidate for the convention, was asked to be one but positively declined, and refused before leaving home and wrote from Washington that I must not be voted for." Still it appears, in spite of your so cogently-expressed wish, all who agreed with you in Natick in regard to the merits and demerits of your present correspondent did vote for you as a delegate to the convention on an anti-Butler ticket. True, there were not many of them; but the fewer the more precious. It is wonderful that your friends should have done that against your express desire, and thus brought upon you the annoyance of a personal defeat of nearly two to one in your own home. I would have my friends in better training, if I might venture to suggest so much to your greater experience. Lord, Lord, how this world is given to lying. Now, men in Natick have told me that you went around and buttonholed your neighbors to get them to vote against me; and there are some people there who tell me they will swear to that; and, if it were worth while, I might get the evidence and show it to you. But it would be useless. You are elected a Christian and a Senator, and so I am never to credit anything these world's people say. Besides, in confirmation of your statements, you tell me that you "have attended but one State convention in fifteen years," hereby implying, as I understand it, that you have taken no part in attempting to control the action of State conventions as to the State officers for fifteen years. Now, I have no more doubt of the truth of that than I have of the other. Therefore it seems all the more singular that you should have been weak enough to be "crowded" into a State canvass this year.

You also tell me: "It is rumored that you propose to war on all who have been against your nomination." By no means, Mr. Senator. Everybody has a right to his preference, and my wonder has been that so many seemed to prefer my nomination. I certainly will not war upon any man who honestly believed that my nomination would be "hostile to the best interests of the Commonwealth and the republican party" for opposing it. On the contrary, I respect and honor all such men; for I am sure that if they had believed and said precisely the opposite many times they would have voted for me, and would not have been "crowded" out of it, or at least they would have remained neutral, especially if they had taken no part in State politics "for fifteen years."

Again you say: "It is for you and your friends to determine what my (your) relations shall be." I am obliged to you for the permission, and hope that my friends will be duly grateful. I shall determine what my relations shall be. They shall be plain, straightforward, frank, (and not double,) with all men and all parties. Your next sentence surprises me more than all which precedes. It begins in these words: "Now, General, I am going to say what I think." Is it possible that you have been saying what you did not think, in the first two pages of your note, especially when you began it by saying, "I propose to write a few plain words?" Don't you ever think plain words? The reason you next give for "going to say what you think" is still more curious. You write: "It is none of my business, but I say it because I think it." Do you mean you only say that you think about what is none of your business? Am I so to understand you?

Again, you write: "But I say it because I think it; but have no feeling but a wish for your silence. If you had made a few speeches, temperate and kindly, full of devotion to the republican cause, and to reform the abuses in the party, you would have been nominated." Now I guess I understand you. If I "had made a few temperate and kindly speeches." Kindly towards whom, my revilers and slanderers? Of whom else did I speak unkindly? But, passing that, then it depended upon kindly speeches, full of devotion to the republican party, whether my nomination was "self-degradation" and "tended to force a rupture upon republicans" (whatever horrible disease that may be,) and was "hostile to the best interests of the Commonwealth and the republican party" or not. It is evident from your letters that you think your strong point is to give advice. The remainder of your letter does not require so careful analysis to comment it, because it is filled with good advice to me, which I appreciate highly, but which may all be summed up in the words of the copy-book: "Be virtuous and you will be happy."

I hope I am duly grateful for your good advice as to the manner in which I ought to conduct my political future, because to a weak, young and rising man it would be quite invaluable, for no man has known how to make so little go so far in politics as yourself. No man who had so little to manage, I agree, could have done better than you, and your advice in a like case would be priceless. But one has to till a potato patch and a prairie on such different principles that the husbandry of one scarcely fits the other; and, therefore, I cannot, emulate your course, brilliant as it has been. I cannot join a church to get the votes of religious people. I cannot profess temperance to get the support of temperance men. I would not join a Know-Nothing lodge, and take an oath to persecute foreigners to be elected United States Senator, however desirable that might seem to me. I cannot be "all things to all men to gain some." I must remain a plain, blunt man, and must speak right out the things that I do know. You will see, therefore, my dear Mr. Senator, how very much I appreciate your advice and example and the motives which actuated you; and the impossibility of my emulating them even at a humble distance. I really cannot do it. I ought so to do, I suppose, in order to succeed; that is, if my nature had been so made up as to be able to do it. But you really must excuse me. I cannot. There never can be but one Henry Wilson. I am, my dear Senator, with the greatest respect for your attainments, and your position, Yours truly,

BENJAMIN F. BUTLER.

President Grant's Financial Views.

The hopes of the inflationists are liable to come to naught by the opposition of President Grant, who realizing that the absence of any well developed financial policy paralyzes industry, favors any movement tending toward specie payment, and of necessity finds his views unpopular with those who desire expansion of the currency. The result of the next Presidential campaign may hinge upon this matter of expansion or contraction, and it is fortunate for the business interests of this country, that however popular Senator Morton's views may be in certain portions of the South and West, the influence of the administration will not be exerted to place farther off the long-looked for return to specie payment. The President considers further inflation unwise, but thinks free banking might be properly guarded in the matter of redemption, securing its benefits and depriving it of unsoundness. This assurance of redemption is the only safety that the system might bring to the aid of prostrate business enterprises, and while free banking will doubtless be opposed by many bank capitalists, it is not so objectionable as the special legislation which gave the banking interest its present privileges. Several national banks have already withdrawn their circulation and redeemed their bonds, finding banking more profitable without circulation.

Horrible Tragedy.

A despatch from Austin, Nevada, gives the particulars of a tragedy in Smoky Valley, in that State, as follows: Christopher Reckstein has been for a long time jealous of his wife, in consequence of attentions paid her by a young man named Norton, and they had frequent quarrels. Thursday a man named Osterhaus went to Reckstein's house, and receiving no response to his demands for admission, broke open the door. On the floor lay naked the body of Mrs. Reckstein, cut into pieces and her head split open. At her feet were the bodies of their two little girls, their heads nearly severed from their bodies, and near by were the bodies of Reckstein and young Norton, grappled as in the death struggle. Reckstein grasped in his hand a large bowie knife, covered with blood, and in Norton's right hand was a dragoon pistol, two chambers of which were discharged. There is no living witness to this terrible affair.

The Detective Business in New York.

A letter to the Troy Times says: The secrets of this detective department, could they be told, would be of a startling character. Here all the mysterious bank robberies have been discussed, and also all the bloody tragedies which have of late years vexed this city. One of these is the murder of James Rogers, one of the proprietors of the Troy House, who was stabbed while sweeping his sidewalk. Another is the recent tenement-house murder, whose mystery now seems beyond all penetration. But above all there is the Nathan mystery, whose perplexity is all the more annoying because of the tantalizing reward, which amount ($45,000) has never been equaled on this continent.

One of the most important features in this department is the records of the "Shadows." This class is detailed to watch the movements of suspected persons, which is done either to convict them of desperate crime or to assist in ripening suspicion and procuring testimony for future use. If a man neglects his duties at some bank or warehouse in which he may have an important office, his case may be put in the hands of a shadower. This fellow will place himself on the track without exciting suspicion, and this track will be maintained for hours. A Wall street financier, for instance, takes a Broadway stage, and the shadower who has followed him from the bank immediately orders a cab and follows the stage, whose number is taken so as to avoid mistake. The financier halts at Delmonico's, where a few friends are awaiting him, and the shadower discharges the cab, out of which he comes muffled in a huge overcoat, and takes his station on the sidewalk, where he displays a basket of nice candies for sale, and now and then finds a customer. He will patiently maintain that candy trade till the financier appears, perhaps after a delay of three or four hours. The latter has had a capital dinner, and comes out in fine spirits with a group of friends. None of them want candy, but in offering it the shadower has caught a glimpse of their countenances, which he will not soon forget. One may be another Wall street man, while the others are well known gamblers. A short walk takes them to Morrissey's gambling hell, and as the shadower follows, he contrives to stop at a cigar store and leave his basket. In a few moments he strips off his old coat which he leaves at a corner grocery, a privilege which any one can obtain. He then appears in citizen's dress. He sees the party enter the saloon and in a few minutes rings at the door. The card which he displays insures his admittance, and he is soon engrossed on the newspaper. When play begins he is one of the lookers-on, but occasionally takes a chance on a card, and in fact seems like any new-comer who is not prepared to strike heavily. In the meantime nothing escapes his notice. The amount of chips bought by the Wall street men and the result of the play is fixed by pencil marks on a card, as though merely marking the game. The whole is subsequently written in a book kept for the purpose, and the espionage is repeated as long as may be desired.

Almost all that class of employees who handle large sums of money are at different times subjected to "shadowing," and as this fact is now well known they are obliged to be careful of their movements. Men are in the same manner tracked to the haunts of licentiousness with a precision of which they little dream, and detectives are thus employed to obtain testimony in divorce cases as well as for other purposes. The names of hundreds of our best business men are on these records, and they are occasionally overwhelmed with astonishment when informed of certain events in their past history. It pays well to shadow this class, because they are ready to quiet matters with a handsome douceur. Blackmail is the very life of the detective. He must get it from either the burglar, the adulterer, or the gambler, and between these classes he generally picks up a good living.

Some men employ shadowers to watch those whom they wish to expose to public shame, and at the same time they invent some scheme to entrap their victim. Men have been invited to come to a certain house on business, induced perhaps by a very pressing letter. Suppose for instance a man receives a note from an old acquaintance reading like this; "Dear Friend: Will you do me the favor to call on me this evening? I am under peculiar circumstances, and wish to see you alone, for I have some important statements to make. No time to explain now," etc., etc. The recipient of such a letter, which of course is forged, may find himself inveigled into some abode of infamy and danger, and may not get away in an easy manner. In the meantime the detective has marked his motions, and is ready to appear against him whenever this may be required. There is a class of so-called detectives who have no connection with the regular force, who make many hits at the blackmail line; they watch certain places of bad repute, and follow those who leave these places until they learn their names, which are used for subsequent extortion. A severe levy is thus made upon down-town clerks. This city is full of mystery. Everybody of any importance is watched, and it may be added that there are few who do not need it. The facilities of vicious indulgence afforded in a great city are such that there should be something to work in a counter direction.

Snake Story.

[Springfield Republican.]

Across the Westfield River, where it rolls down among the rocky hills of Berkshire, just before it sweeps out upon the plain to join the smooth Connecticut, there is a massive stone dam. The vexed waters beat against it; it never trembles. They seek to burrow beneath; its bed is upon the very bones of the everlasting hills. A few of the topmost waves look over the brink, and, pushed by those behind, fall white and shivering down the abyss below. But those that brawled the loudest as they rushed down the mountains, and rallied at the stony barrier with many a noisy echo, just bruise their sides against the steadfast wall, and glide, submissive, through a hidden culvert, glad to escape by toilsome service, working an underground passage for themselves through the iron of Jessop & Laffin's paper mill. Here is one of those rugged fastnesses that seem more and more out of place amid our all-conquering civilization, but which will remain wild and rugged till every valley shall be exalted, every mountain and hill laid low.

Among such solitudes rough, rocky and, unsubdued—slowly sinking crests of dead and dying mountain chains—are still found from time to time, dark witnesses of creation's fateful mystery, loathsome reptiles, bearing death in their fangs, malice in their hearts, and rattles on their tails!

While the workmen were building this mill at Salmon Falls on the Westfield River, one of these crawling outcasts of creation, descendants no doubt of that "pesky sarpent" renowned in Springfield's ancient ballad, crept unawares within reach of his hereditary foe. As his great ancestor was merciless, so were his captors. He was beaten with clubs and mauled with stones, till he lay limp and lifeless, but horrid still. Brought thus near the building he was lain prone on a piece of timber, an object of curiosity and merited disgust. At length, moved by that caution which dreads a fallen foe, or by a strange though not uncommon spite, one of the men chopped off the head—the flat, evil skull, hard filmy eyes, the jaws closed grimly upon the cruel fangs within—chopped it off, and brushed it away. Later, the engineer coming out thought to save the taper chain of rattles, a ghastly memento. But these had just been severed from the lifeless trunk, which still lay bruised and bleeding where it had been thrown.

Among those looking on, a boy stood near in homespun dress, stout boots enveloping his pants. A gray-haired denizen of the region, drawing nigh, bade the youngster stamp on the serpent's tail. Nothing loath, the heavy boot came down where the rattles used to grow—came down and straitway, up it came, while a sickly pallor blanched beneath the tan and wholesome dirt. No wonder! The "spirited, sly snake" had been drinking sunshine, as he lay outstretched, and, mangled as he was, had gathered strength to resent the insult, as instinct prompted him. Quicker than a liberated spring his headless trunk struck the offending boot with the same malicious violence, as when the poison fangs were set erect to do its fatal bidding! Happily, the head was quite severed from the body, and lay in the dirt several feet away.

It's not pleasant to tread on a sprightly rattlesnake, even though one wear thick boots, and the reptile has neither head nor tail. So these unscientific investigators pursued their experiment with a piece of board, but 'twas quite conclusive. Every time the smaller end of the body was struck the other retaliated with a spiteful blow.

Surely a strange phenomenon, from which many interesting theories might be drawn aside from the obvious caution—don't handle rattlesnakes till their heads are taken off; but who shall say what occult law of life's deep mystery is shadowed in a fact like this? As often as that ghastly carcass coiled and struck the offending boot, so often, and the self-same instant, the grim, repulsive head, lying dissevered in the dust, opened its jaws, the deadly fangs protruding, and closed them with a snap! Again and again, this was done till the broken and divided—or was it the indefinitely extended?—ghost of the reptile, at last departed.

Whoever wishes to satisfy himself of the truth of this relation can easily do so. Always the belief or unbelief of those who do not care to investigate is a matter of no importance.

The Pull Down Practice.

Death laughs when he sees the weak and feeble bled, blistered, salivated, opiumized, or gulped with violent purgatives. He knows that under such treatment they cannot long survive. In direct conflict with this pull down practice is the principal upon which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters operate. The effect of this incomparable vegetable restorative is to build up the system and invigorate the constitution. It imparts appetite and assists digestion, enriches and cleanses the blood, regulates and tones the liver and the bowels, and establishes and perpetuates a healthy habit of body. By a happy combination of vegetable extracts—tonic, aperient and anti-bilious—with a mere stimulant, these effects are simultaneously produced. There is no prescription of the pharmacopœia that has the same scope. You may find among its formulas scourges for the bowels, stimulants for the stomach, sedatives for the nerves, but no grand combination medicine that, like Hostetter's Bitters, is at once a tonic, an aperient, a corrective and an alterative.

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

The New Catholic Church

Which is to be dedicated next Thursday (Fast Day) shows what persistent effort will accomplish, and illustrates the devotion and self-sacrifice of the adherents to the Catholic faith. Canon Walsh, the pastor, looks not only after the spiritual wants of his flock, but has an eye single to their temporal needs. To this end he has, by dint of hard labor under circumstances of an adverse nature, succeeded in erecting and furnishing a church that reflects credit upon the city as well as upon the Catholics themselves. It is a brick edifice of Gothic style, with a massive tower and steeple, the latter being surmounted by a gilded cross of magnificent proportions. The windows are all of stained glass, of rare beauty and skill of workmanship, and very costly. Two of these are the gifts of Hon. Frank Jones, and Mr. E. E. Rider of this city. The exterior of the building is yet to be greatly improved, which will be done as the whole work has thus far been accomplished—by degrees.

The interior will surprise the visitor who has any knowledge of the limited amount of means upon which the church was commenced. There are one hundred and fifty pews, or slips, made of chestnut with black walnut mouldings and finish. These pews are capable of seating six persons each, we believe, which gives a seating capacity of nine hundred in the auditorium alone. In addition to this amount of room there is a large gallery that will easily accommodate two hundred people, thus enabling an audience of eleven hundred to obtain eligible seats within the body of the church.

The most attractive feature of the house, however, and that which deserves particular mention, is the "grand high altar," situated in the western portion of the building and containing the holy symbols used at Mass. This altar is twenty-eight feet in width, of gothic structure, finished in blue, magenta and gold, and is the largest in New England. In the centre, and forming a part of it, is what is termed the "tabernacle," on each side of which are three colossal candlesticks, with imitation wax candles, at least four feet in height, inserted in them. These candles are ingeniously arranged for the burning of gas, and a clear and steady light is thereby furnished, giving a beautiful effect when lighted, and illuminating the splendid towers, naves and arches, among which the gas candles are situated.

On the left hand of the altar, (which is ecclesiastically known as the "epistle side,") is a beautiful bronze statue of St. Bridget, the patron saint and abbess of Ireland. This image, which is so life-like and natural that one would almost expect it to speak, holds in the left hand the book of constitutions, while the right contains a pen and appears as if in the act of being raised; representing the nun in her round of duty through Ireland, establishing convents and making rules for their government. The aureola encircles her head, and her vestments are those of the devoted nun.

On the right hand of the great altar (called the "gospel side,") is a life-size bronze image of St. Patrick, the celebrated bishop, whose memory all good Catholics revere. This statue is also of rare workmanship, holding in the left hand the crozier of authority while the right is uplifted in the act of imparting his blessing upon the people. The right foot rests upon a serpent, and upon the head appears the tiara and triple crown.

On the front of the altar is a carved image of a lamb upon the cross, and also representations of the lily, very finely executed. Two beautiful statuettes of angels in a kneeling posture occupy positions at the base of the tabernacle. The floor of the sanctuary (which is that portion of the church inside the altar railing) is covered with a rich tapestry carpet.

There are also two side altars which are set in niches on each side of the chancel, one containing the statue of St. Joseph and the other of St. Mary, the latter wearing a beautifully gilded crown set with gems. A door at the rear of the altar leads into a large vestry-room which contains the sacerdotal vestments of the priest and the sacred utensils of the church, and is also used as a dressing-room for the officiating priest. Fourteen elegant oil paintings of scenes at the crucifixion adorn the walls of the auditorium and being set in heavy frames of black walnut give the church a finish which is in striking and most agreeable contrast with bare walls. These pictures, as well as the bronze statues described above, were brought by Father Walsh from Munich, Bavaria.

In the above hasty description of the exterior and interior of a church that will compare favorably with any one of the kind in this State, we have for want of space omitted many objects of interest; and we will only add that what has been accomplished has been done in a short time, and thoroughly done.

The Sovereigns of Industry.

A Council (No. 3, in this State,) of Sovereigns of Industry was instituted in this city on Thursday, April 2, by S. S. Davis, Esq., of Nashua, Vice President of the National Council. Twenty-five charter members were present, and the following officers were installed: Pres., Joseph H. Gardiner; Vice Pres., Willard Sears; Secy., John E. Colcord; Treas., Edward J. Moulton; Steward, Charles N. Osgood; Asst. Steward, James A. Waterhouse; Lecturer, John H. Locke; Inner Guard, Job Woodsum; Outer Guard, Elbridge Pryor. This organization starts with good prospects of success, and it is expected that a large number will be admitted at the next meeting, on Thursday evening, April 9, at Rechabite Hall. The objects sought to be attained are somewhat similar to those of the Grangers; but all persons, of whatever trade, occupation, sex or sect, are admitted to full membership provided they are of reputable character and in sympathy with the purposes of the organization.

City Affairs.

In the Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, the committee appointed to examine the accounts of the P. & D. R. R. made the following statements:

Estimated cost of the Piscataqua Bridge, $110,000; expended to date, $109,915.69; less than estimate $84.31.

Estimated cost of land damages, $70,000; expended to date $87,954.71; excess of estimate, $17,954.71.

Estimated cost of fencing, $11,375; expended to date, $10,245.42; less than estimate, $1,129.58.

Estimated cost of water stations, $1000; expended to date, $483.72; less than estimate, $516.28.

Estimated cost of depot buildings, $10,000; expended to date, $583.67; less than estimate, $9,416.63.

Estimated cost of superstructure, $131,463.83; expended to date, $124,118.78; less than estimate, $7,345.05.

Balance of estimated cost, $265,854.49. Balance of money expended to date, $435,999.62.

Total amount expended to date, $769,301.61; total amount of estimates, $599,674.32. Excess of expenditures, $169,677.29.

The number of shares issued by the road is 6440 at $100 per share—$644,000—and there were three shares sold for which only $110 has been received, making the stock of the road amount to $644,110. The city of Portsmouth purchased 3000 for $300,000. City of Dover 2250 shares for $225,000. Other stock sold, 1193 shares for $119,110.

The corporation also issued 750 extra shares to the Eastern railroad as collateral.

Laconics.

Mr. Blumauer's advertisement speaks for itself. He offers great bargains in silks, shawls, linen and fancy goods.

At the Unitarian Church, a Service for Children, with a sermon and distribution of flowers, will be held Sunday afternoon, to which young and old are welcome. In the evening there will be a historical sketch, "The Ministry of Rogers, and gathering of a new Parish." Religious services will be held in this church on the evening of Fast Day at 7 1-2 o'clock.

Prof. E. Whipple, of Cambridge, Mass., will lecture to-morrow (Sunday) at No. 10 1-2 Daniel street, on "The ideas of the spiritual in history," and "The old and the new." See advertisement.

That sterling weekly, the Salem Gazette, has a new dress, and looks as neat as a pin.

Persons in want of a good cow will do well to attend the sale at the Hayes farm at noon to-day. See advertisement.

The Concord Monitor has given up personalities and taken up argument, in its controversies ("which can subserve no good purpose") with other papers. We give the following as a "very powerful" specimen: "The Portsmouth CHRONICLE rejoices in a very powerful paragraphist. But its rejoicing must soon be turned to mourning, for such tremendous ink-slingers invariably die young. He tells us that he 'forms his own opinions,' a fact of which we are glad to be assured. Another man with such opinions would be a calamity even in Portsmouth." If the "paragraphist" who has roused the Monitor's ire is to "die young," as that paper so feelingly predicts, it is about time he commenced the job; and we are pleased to inform our contemporary that there are many men in Portsmouth who hold just such opinions as we do,—that is, opinions of their own, and not adopted (as the Monitor's are) because they are the opinions of the "leading Boston papers."

Auctioneer Morse will sell a lot of nitrogenous phosphate on Market square at noon this day. See advertisement.

The Concord Monitor of April 2d says: "The absence of our usual quantity of news by telegraph in this issue is due to the fact that * * the Boston evening papers have suspended publication for the day." We knew the Monitor depended on the Boston papers for its independent "opinions," but didn't know until we read its admission as given above that its "news by telegraph" all came from the same source. We presume the bills of the Boston press against the Monitor must be very heavy, having to furnish it with both "news by telegraph" and "opinions,"—though the latter should come very cheap, unless the Monitor gets scandalously cheated in the trade.

The Eastern Railroad is reducing its expenses. The price of season and package tickets has been raised, also. A meeting of the stockholders will be held at Boston, Wednesday next, to ratify the contract with the Maine Central road, and to transact other business. Certificates are in demand.

The first lobsters that we have noticed this season are for sale at C. Sullivan & Co.'s fish market, corner Bow and Penhallow streets. Messrs. Sullivan & Co. have a nice, clean store, keep all kinds of fish, and will deliver the same at the doors of their patrons if desired.

Our old friend Sherburne Somerby was robbed of $7000 in money, papers and notes on Tuesday, the 31st ult. He left it in a wallet on a table in the office of the American House, at Exeter, and on missing it returned in hot haste, but 'twas gone.

We are pleased to learn that the statement in Friday's CHRONICLE, regarding the blindness of Mrs. John Norton, was incorrect. She lost the sight of one eye some ten years ago, but afterward recovered it.

ROBERTS & CO. are preparing to sell COAL as Low as the Lowest, of Equal Quality at PIATT'S WHARF, North End of Market Street, Portsmouth.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—Brotherly love is not the only kind they cultivate in Philadelphia; for 15,782 fond hearts were made to beat as 7,891 in that city last year.

—A Massachusetts farmer says, "My cattle will follow me until I leave the lot, and on the way up to the barnyard in the evening stop and call for a lock of hay." Smithson says there is nothing at all remarkable about that. He went into a barnyard in the country one day last week, where he had not the slightest acquaintance with the cattle; and an old bull not only followed him until he left the lot, but took the gate off the hinges and raced with him to the house in the most familiar way possible. Smithson says he has no doubt that the old fellow would have called for something if he had waited a little while, but he didn't want to keep the folks waiting dinner; so he hung one tail of his coat and a piece of his pants on the bull's horns and went into the house.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY. DROPSY AND RUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

Kyle Griffiths.

BY THEO. GIFT.

A sea like a duck-pond, calm as glass and red as fire; a long strip of snow-white sand, backed by precipitous rocks, gray by day, red now from the incarnadine arch of sunset sky above; to the westward a strip of land running out into the harbor, and showing black as ink against the lower line of living gold, where, far beyond, the sun has just dipped his flaming orb to rest behind the waves. Over the point the topsail rigging of a three-masted vessel. Nearer, in the foreground, a girl seated on a heap of dried sea-weed, her pretty brown dimpled arms clasped about her knees, her head uncovered save by a mass of black silky curls, thrown back and resting against an old boat, moss-grown and broken, and long disused, which had found its last haven in this quiet nook. It was all very quiet at first, but by and by a step came trampling over the hard, smooth sands. The young girl's cheek glowed with a deeper red, and her breast began to heave and her hands to tremble, as though she were a bird on the eve of flying to its mate. Not being a bird, but a woman, however, she coquetted—sat still staring at the sunset she did not see, and started and almost screamed when a big man, brown and bearded and muscular, came suddenly round the stern of the ruined boat, and with a short exclamation, half choked as in great gladness, took her straight into his arms, and hugged her till she screamed in right earnest,—

"Kyle, put me down! Put me down! How dare you be so rude, sir? Let me go, please do."

"Not till you've given me a kiss, Faithie," said the other, keeping his hold good-humoredly, yet with something of reproach in his grave blue eyes. "What! not one after three months' waiting? Why, lassie, I thought you cared for me a bit better nor that. An' I hungering for this minute every day and hour since I left you."

The tone of the reminder—perhaps even the slackening of his arms—touched her. Faith Morgan had a warm little heart, albeit five years younger and smaller than the one against which it was beating now. Inconsistent as a true woman, the moment he let go she began to cling, and put up her lips.

"I do care for you, Kyle," she said, "only—only you startled me so," and forthwith she began to sob like a baby. He made no answer at first, only kissing her with close, tender kisses on lips and eyes, till the tears were driven back, and the lips pouted.

"Now, Kyle, do let me go. You're so rough, and—and some one might be passing."

"And what if some one was?" asked the sailor, loosening his hold, however, and letting her resume her former seat, while he took up a position on the boat's keel beside her. "Who has a better right to kiss you than I? I can tell you, Sam Jones' lassie didn't wait for him to begin, for we walked up from the pier together, and she had the house door open, and her arms round his neck, while he was still peering in at the window on the chance of her looking out."

"Nancy Evans is a bold girl," quoth Faith tartly. "If those are the manners you like, Kyle, I wonder you didn't try to cut Jones out when you first came here."

"I come between another man and his lass!" cried the sailor, staring; "but there, you're joking, sweetheart; and besides, you know there's never a girl in Wales, or England either, that could meet my fancy save your little self alone."

"You don't mention America," said Faith, saucily.

"America!" repeated her lover; "why, in the name of all that's comely, you wouldn't have me compare you to a Yankee girl, would you?"

The honest indignation in his tone, however ludicrous in itself, had a softening effect on Faith. Her big brown eyes grew suddenly wet and her voice sank to a half-shame-faced whisper.

"Only I told you I wouldn't wonder if you took to a foreign girl. Some say they're prettier than we are."

"You would ha' wondered, though," retorted Kyle promptly. "Prettier than you! I'd like to see the woman. Faith, give me your hand, and turn your face this way. Do you think I'll be content with the back of your head to-night."

He took her hand as he spoke, and she let him keep it; but her face was still turned away, and there was a faint quiver about the ruddy lips. Perhaps her next words explained it.

"Father says you're going away again, almost at once, Kyle."

"Aye; when he came aboard to meet us he gave me the offer. It did seem hard, almost too hard, when I'd hoped to have a little rest aside of you afore I went away again. But after all, it will shorten the time o' waiting one way, lassie."

"How, Kyle?"

"Didn't your father say I was to wait for you till I was captain? I'm going as captain this time, and only for a six weeks' trip; leastways, that's what they calculate it at. Some business with the New York agents I think; but I suppose you've heard about it?"

"That the Olinda was to be fitted out for sale, and that you were to take her over, an' charter another vessel to bring you back? Yes; but won't it take you longer?"

"I doubt not. They're to have the boat and cargo ready. Mr. Denbigh's arranged all that. Did you know his son—the new junior partner—is to ship with us?"

"Yes," she said. Good Heaven! how rosy her face was now; and yet the crimson sky was fading into blues and violets. He was looking at her, and the brows suddenly darkened over his eyes, giving them an odd, fierce expression. His voice, however, was quieter than before.

"I can't say I care about sailing with the owner's son. I'd liefer take any other passenger. They're apt to fancy that because they're boss ashore they need be boss aboard an' I'm masterful man myself, don't hold with no Co.'s in salt water. Hows'ever, I shouldn't mind so much if I liked the man."

"And don't you?" asked Faith timidly, her color still high.

"Do you?" said he, stooping forward to her full in the face. "He's been a deal at Amlwch since I left, people tell me, an' you must ha' seen plenty of him. What do you think of him?"

"I, Kyle?"—her eyes drooping beneath the sharp scrutiny—"I—don't know. He's pleasant-spoken and civil. I think he's nice enough."

"And I think him a cross between fool and ape," quoth Kyle Griffiths shortly; "son of a sea-cook! Well, Faith, I wonder"—

Faith snatched her hand away angrily.

"He has more manners than you," cried she, panting and ruffling like an enraged sparrow, "he is a gentleman at any rate, an' would never dream of using such language of people he don't even know more than to speak to. Oh!"—and her feelings were too much for words, and an indignant little sigh and shiver filled the gap.

Even the violet was dying out of the sky now, and cool gray shadows crept up from the east, and threw a sombre tint over the man's face. A small cold wind rose out of the sea, ruffling its breast with long, fretful lines, like the puckered face of an ailing child. It chilled the dimples in Faith's cheeks, and blew the soft brown locks off Kyle's stern brow; and far overhead a gull flew by, with a long shrill scream, like the wail of a banshee. Before it ceased Kyle spoke:—

"He is a gentleman, is he? I thank God, then, I'm not. Had I been one I might have been betrothed to some fine lady, i'stead o' the daughter of an honest seafaring man like myself. Faith, twice these five minutes have you found fault with my manners. I don't say they're finer nor a rough sailor's have need to be, but you never laid blame on them before. Has this gentleman been teaching you to do so in my absence this time?"

Women are constitutionally cowards. Faith Morgan was a very woman. For all reply at first she, metaphorically, turned tail, and took refuge behind that ever-ready shield of femininity, a burst of tears. It was not until they had lasted long enough to make Kyle apostrophize himself as a brute that she sobbed out:—

"How c-c-cruel you are! You kn-n-now that I love you as you are better than—and yet—oh!" Another burst, and the pretty head was drooping very near Kyle's knee. Involuntarily he laid his hand caressingly upon it. Involuntarily his voice took a softened, soothing tone.

"Am I cruel, Faithie, and to you? Nay, then, don't cry. Mayhaps I was over-sharp, but I was met on landing by ill talk about young Denbigh an' you. They said he had been taking my place, an' though I would not believe it, nor even hearken to the foul-tongued gossips, it sort o' cut me when you spoke up for him. Faith, lassie, I love you more than many a husband. If you were to play me false with any one, I think I'd feel like killing him an' you too."

He looked like it at the moment, and she believed him, and trembled at the mingling of passionate tenderness and wrath in his tone. Instinctively she turned and clasped his strong hand in both hers, her face turned up coaxingly.

"Don't think o' such things, Kyle, love, you know I never could. What's Mr. Denbigh to me, but father's partner?"

He was holding the soft hands, and looking down into the sweet eyes. The moon just rising, glittered on something which, unnoticed by her, had escaped from the folds of her handkerchief—a golden circle, with the portrait of a man within.

"Faith," said Kyle Griffiths, in a tone which strove for steadiness, "you're wearin' a grand new trinket since I saw you last. Who gave you that?"

He spoke too suddenly. With a quick, frightened gesture she snatched away her hand, as if to hide the bauble. With a face deeply red of cowardly consciousness, she stammered out,—

"I—I—it's nothing—father's—I mean I bought it."

Without a word Kyle loosed her wrist and rose up. Without a word he turned from her; only when he had gone ten steps he came back, and said very hoarse and low,—

"Faith Morgan, you have told me a lie, an' you know it. I can't say if it was for the first time, but I can say it shall be the last. I wondered"—and his voice sank deeper still—"that you should shrink when I took you in my arms a while ago. I wonder now you dared let me do it, wi' that man's face lying between my heart an' yours. Go to him now, an' you will. I want no wife on whom I can't depend in word an' deed."

He was gone the next moment; and Faith sobbing bitterly with grief and anger, went home to find Philip Denbigh at the garden gate waiting for her.

He had been courting her for the last two months; and she—had coquetted with him. Flirting is not an amusement confined to the upper ten. I have heard of a young Patagonian squaw who was as finished an adept at it as any Belgravian beauty; and Faith, an only child and the prettiest girl in Amlwch, had been wonderfully fond of trying her fascinations on the "weaker" sex, till the arrival of a new first mate for her father's favorite vessel, the vessel he had commanded himself until he was admitted to a partnership in the firm of Denbigh & Co., his employers. Kyle Griffiths, big as a giant, true as the light of day, and masterful as he said himself, had "cut out" all the rest in no time, and won Faith for his own undivided property. She never even cared to look at any one else when he was by; and I believe, loved him as entirely as was in her nature, with most worshipful affection; but when Kyle was away at sea, and young Denbigh came to Amlwch—Mr. Denbigh, who was what she called a gentleman; some one who wore fine clothes, and had white hands and a curly moustache—and when this hero testified an immediate and violent admiration for herself, how could she help being pleased? How could she help going back to the old habits?

She did not help either. Mr. Denbigh made love; and she smiled and flirted, all unconscious in her flattered vanity, of what neighbors were saying, until, just three days before Kyle's return, the suitor brought matters to a crisis by a declaration. They had had a tiff about a photograph of Faith, which Denbigh had stolen and put in his locket; and he had brought her a fine gold locket with one of himself in it, and begged her to accept it, and take the donor into the bargain.

Followed an awakening for silly little Faith, and the confession, "But I am engaged!"

Followed anger (from the gentleman) and tears (from the lady).

Followed fresh solicitations, more ardent from the rebuff, and fresh "noes" more feeble from remorse and shame.

Followed tremendous scenes of masculine woe and anguish, and feminine contrition and soothing.

Finally Denbigh left the house, determined to try again on his return from America; and Faith remained with the locket, which she had at last consented to keep and wear, as some small salve to the giver's wounded affections. She loved Kyle far, far better than his rival; but Philip Denbigh was so handsome and sweet-spoken, it would be downright cruel to refuse him such a trifle as hanging the trinket round her neck for a day or two; and no one need ever know.

Nevertheless some one did know—now; and the sweet-spoken gentleman got a savage snubbing on this aforementioned evening.

"Kyle will hear I refused him, and come back. He'll never leave me so. He must ask my pardon first," thought the weeping beauty, that night.

He did not ask pardon, however, nor come back. The Olinda sailed three days later, and Faith's two lovers sailed in it. Kyle had a beautiful black retriever, which he had been used to leave behind to "take care of his lassie love while he was gone." He took it with him this time; and Faith nearly wept her lovely eyes out, that she had been too proud to own her folly and seek a reconciliation before he went. Patience! it would be only six weeks, or at the most eight, and then he would be back, and she would be good—so good and meek. He must forgive her then.

* * * * * * *

"A man down on all-fours!" cried one of the crew. "Look, he's moved a bit higher. Poor fellow! he must be a rare plucked un surely to ha' kep' life in him so long."

"Lower the boat," said the captain sharply. "Now, my lads, ready all. Jim" (to an old pilot,) "give us a coil o' that line. We mayn't be able to get over-near him; an' I say, one o' you lubbers, chuck a bottle o' rum inter the stern-sheets—quick!"

They are brave, kindly men, those Welsh pilots; I have owed my life to them, and know; but I am afraid they thought their courage and kindness wasted when they found the object of it was—only a dog! They hauled him into the boat none the less, almost too much spent, poor fellow, to second their efforts; and then, while he was trying very feebly to lick the hands that had saved him, his beautiful eyes full of all a dog's gratitude, they saw he had a tin flask tied to his collar.

The captain opened it. "To Miss Faith Morgan, Amlwch," he said, reading something within; and then, not being a person of refined delicacy, he took the paper out, and opened and read that. This was what it said:—

"Boat just left with the crew and Philip Denbigh. No room for me; but no wish for it. Remember that. I gave mine on board, with willing heart, to him you gave it to ashore. God bless you, sweetheart. Forgive my rude words as I forgive your falsehood. There's a Saviour more merciful than we are, an' to Him I pray to care for you, an' make you happy, as I would ha' tried to, had He been willed to let me."

They gave that paper, with the dog—a beautiful black retriever—to Faith Morgan. It was all that ever came to port of the ill-fated Pride of the West, the ramshackle old barque, which had been hastily patched up, and thought good enough to last one voyage more. Boat and crew were never heard of again. They must have perished with their fine young owner in the vain attempt to reach land, that stormy night; and there was no tongue to tell of those bitter eight weeks when the "sweet-spoken" gentleman strove, by every vulgar boast and inuendo, to torture the man whom he considered his successful rival—the man who was no gentleman, but who had the grand old knightly feelings that would rather have made him bear anything rather than by word or retort, drag the name of the woman he loved into an unseemly dispute—the man whose unswerving discipline and tireless energy had alone preserved them even so long—the man who, when the ship had struck, and the cowardly scoundrel who owned it was clinging in frantic, helpless terror, to his knee, when the men were shouting for the captain to join them and cast off, lifted in the miserable wretch first with his own strong arms; and then, seeing there was no room for more, cut the rope that held the boat to the sinking ship, and stayed alone—to die!

And Faith? Faith is living still. I met her yesterday coming up the high street at Amlwch, with her married daughter, each holding a hand of a wee, toddling, brown-eyed thing between them. A bright, bonny old woman she is too, with as comely a face as if the eyes had never been washed in salt tears, the brow never wrinkled under a cloud of care.

"I must be goin' home to my old man," she said, stopping at the corner. "Kiss grannie, sweetums," and then turned just at the church-yard wall where stands a rough stone cross, "To the memory of the captain and crew of the Pride of the West."

Kyle's prayer has been granted—perhaps better by his death than if he had lived to carry it out. As Faith says,—

"He was a rare good man, but hard, over-hard and stern for ordinary folk."

MONDAY, APRIL 6, 1874.

"The Inflation Iniquity."

The Concord People has a leader on what it terms (and rightly) "the inflation iniquity," in which it seeks to make democratic capital out of the recent action of Congress on the question of inflating the currency. It says "there can therefore be no help against the foul wrong of inflation but the progressive and effectual labor of putting corrupt and dishonest men out of office and power in the nation, and putting intelligent and honest men in their places. Connecticut will follow the pattern of New Hampshire next Monday in the triumphant accomplishment of this patriotic work." As fifty-three out of seventy-three democrats in the House voted fair and square for inflation, we think the People's democratic newfledged spread eagle will not be able to fly very far nor to carry off much game. If voting for inflation is evidence of lack of intelligence or of corruption and dishonesty, as the People intimates and as we are not disposed to deny, in what class does that paper put almost three-fourths of the democratic members of the House? And if three-fourths of the democratic representatives in Congress are blockheads or corrupt and dishonest, what kind of "patriotic work" is it to increase their numbers?

This is not the first instance in which the chosen representatives of the democratic party, in Congress, have by their action given the lie direct to the assertions or intimations of the democratic press that the party is opposed to some specially unpopular and dishonest or indiscreet measure,—not the first time that the democratic Congressmen have made the claims of the democratic editors, that their party is fairly overflowing with high-toned morality, appear in a most ridiculous light. The salary-grab occasioned the slopping over of a vast amount of virtuous indignation from the cauldrons of the democratic editors,—a holy reprobation that was directed almost wholly against the republican party, notwithstanding the fact that a majority of the republicans in both branches of Congress voted against the steal, and a majority of the democrats in both houses voted for it,—and then when Congress reassembled the first act of the democratic members was to nominate as their candidate for speaker of the House one of the chief of salary-grab sinners,—Fernando Wood!

The salary-grab was a Congressional—not a partizan—raid on the Treasury, and the loud-mouthed denunciation of it as being a republican steal, by the democratic press, was but a cheap attempt to secure a partizan advantage,—not an attempt to secure a reform. Similarly, no party lines can be drawn in the Congressional treatment of currency inflation; the question has been made a sectional rather than a partizan one, and some of the ablest opponents of inflation have been found among the republicans, and some of its most eager supporters (fifty-three to seventy-three) among the democrats. In view of these facts the People's appeal to the people to squelch inflation by filling Congress with democrats is unapproachable bosh.

Readables.

The Massachusetts legislators gave their votes for Senator, on Saturday, as follows: Dawes 88, Hoar 75, Curtis 64, Adams 13, Banks 5, Peirce 2, Whittier 1, Gaston 1, Phillips 1.

Connecticut holds its State election today. Parties are in a mixed condition there: and as Connecticut, like New Hampshire, is a close State, and the prohibitionists are running a separate ticket in the interest of the democratic party it is more than likely the democrats will carry the State.

The iron tank-brig Novelty, the only vessel ever built for carrying molasses in bulk, has foundered at sea. She has been a very successful experiment, and her owners intend to have another vessel built on the same principle, substituting wood for iron in the hull but retaining iron for the tanks.

The Advertiser's special from Washington says the transportation committee has held daily or nightly sessions for some time past and is nearly ready to report. There will probably be four recommendations; one for extensive improvement of the Mississippi River, including a canal at Fort St. Philip, the improvement of the Ohio, the enlarging of the water weys connecting the upper lakes with the ocean, and a canal, either by way of James and Kanawha rivers, or through Georgia from the Tennessee. It is between these canal lines that the committee is not yet decided. There is also a proposition under consideration to recommend, instead of either, a double-track railroad from the Ohio to the seaboard. It is not the intention to ask for present appropriations, on account of the financial condition of the country. The committee's estimates for the whole are in the neighborhood of $100,000,000.

The Common Council of Jeffersonville, Ind., has passed an ordinance requiring the liquor dealers to pay $500 for a license.

Senator Jones of Nevada is sound on the financial question, having floored Senator Morton, who by championing the inflation cause bids for Western support for the Presidency two years hence.

Charles W. Emmons of New York, aged 10 years, on Wednesday died from hydrophobia. He was bitten by a dog which showed no symptoms of madness, about a month ago, and felt no evil effects from the bite until recently, when the symptoms became so alarming that a physician was called in, who at once pronounced the disease hydrophobia. The lad lingered for six days, and died with all the torture incident to that disease.

The Russian barque Jupiter, on a voyage from New York to Gibraltar, experienced very boisterous weather. On February 7, when three days out, a squall struck the vessel, which at the same time was boarded by a heavy sea, which swept Captain Gvondgvist and six of the crew from the deck. A returning wave bore back to the barque two of the crew, but the others were never seen again.

Henry Rochefort has started from Australia in a steamer for San Francisco.

Another demand for taxes has been made upon Abby Smith and her sister at Glastonbury, Conn. Both ladies decline to pay until they are allowed to vote in town meeting. The collector has given them a few days grace in which to think over the matter, when, if they remain firm in their determination, the famous Alderney cows will be sold once more.

A very mysterious case of poisoning occurred on Thursday on board the steamship Roman, lying at Long wharf, Boston. It appears that the crew, numbering twenty men, had partaken of "plum duff" at dinner, and soon afterward several of them were seized with vomiting and spasms. Dr. A. B. Hall was summoned, and after examination pronounced the sickness of the men as resulting from some mineral poison. During the afternoon nearly every member of the crew who had eaten the "plum duff," was taken sick, and an analysis of the remainder of that article revealed the presence of a large quantity of arsenic. By what means the poison was placed in the food is at present shrouded in mystery, and no person on board is suspected of performing the outrageous act.

Two attempts have been made recently by burglars to rob the house of Joshua George, President of the Kearsarge National Bank in Warner, but their plans were frustrated. The Full Down Practice.

Death laughs when he sees the weak and feeble bled, blistered, salivated, opiumized, or griped with violent purgatives. He knows that under such treatment they cannot long survive. In direct conflict with this pull down practice is the principal upon which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters operate. The effect of this incomparable vegetable restorative is to build up the system and invigorate the constitution. It imparts appetite and assists digestion, enriches and cleanses the blood, regulates and tones the liver and the bowels, and establishes and perpetuates a healthy habit of body. By a happy combination of vegetable extract-tonic, aperient and anti-billious—with a pure stimulant, these effects are simultaneously produced. There is no prescription of the pharmacopœia that has the same scope. You may find among its formulas scourges for the bowels, stimulants for the stomach, sedatives for the nerves, but no grand combination medicine that, like Hostetter's Bitters, is at once a tonic, an aperient, a corrective and an alterative.

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT. OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

In Concord, on the evening of April 1st, a meeting of persons in favor of establishing a local society for the prevention of cruelty to animals was held. The Monitor says the gathering was not large, but the interest and determination evinced on the part of some of the best people in the city assured success to the movement. Speeches were made by Mayor Kimball, Col. Peter Sanborn and others; and Dr. Chas. A. Norton, secretary of the Portsmouth society, gave a statement of the general nature and designs of the movement and a history of the experience and work of the Portsmouth organization, several lady members of which were also present at the meeting. Committees were appointed to procure signatures to a call for a future meeting for the formation of a State society, and to draw up a constitution and by-laws to be then presented.

Information Wanted.

Messrs. Editors: The CHRONICLE of Saturday morning contains the report of the committee of the Board of Mayor and Aldermen on the accounts of the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad. Can you tell us what the "balance of money expended to date" was paid for? That "balance" is more than one-half of the whole amount expended! Did any part of it go to making up shrinkage on the city bonds issued to pay for its stock? At the time these bonds were issued it was announced with a flourish that the "Trust Co." had taken them all at par; since they sold at much less than that, in open market, that soft impeachment is denied. Will you—or some one who knows—also tell us why 750 shares were issued as collateral to the Eastern Railroad, and the authority for such issue? We need light.

If our incoming Mayor, whom your warm advocacy led many of us to vote for, is the man you stated and we think, he will so thoroughly ventilate this subject that the amount for which our property is mortgaged, and what represents it—exactly—will be known to every TAX PAYER.

Laconics.

Easter Monday.

The fourth annual Ball of the Wolfe Tone Club takes place this (Monday) evening at Congress Hall. Harlow's band will furnish the music.

A regular train over the Boston & Maine Railroad commenced running between Great Falls and Boston on Sunday last, and will be continued during the summer. It leaves Great Falls at 6 a'clock A. M., and Boston at 5 o'clock, P. M.

The Great Falls Journal says the last masquerade ball given at that place by Mr. W. I. Trafton of this city, "was a triumphant success. Forty-five couples were masked and the costumes were varied and many of them beautiful. A large number of spectators were present. Dover and other places in the vicinity were represented and the dancers seemed to enjoy themselves. These mask balls seem to be extremely popular in Great Falls. Mr. Trafton was urgently requested to come again, which he will probably do another season."

The Boston Globe is greatly improved under its new management.

Poland water we knew to be a healthful beverage of wonderful power, but the Journal has the following item which shows that birds are benefitted by its use. The medicinal qualities of the water were first brought to notice by a horse that was cured of some disease by drinking it. Says the Journal: We learned of the case of a favorite canary in this city which was for several weeks so seriously affected with asthma that the sweet singer lost his voice, seeming beyond recovery, when as almost a last resort a regular supply of Poland water was placed in the cage for drinking, which speedily effected surprising results, and now the little pet is as good as new.

A correspondent of a Concord paper gives an account of what he saw of the working of the Gardner & Ransom air brake, in use on the Concord & Portsmouth Railroad. This brake is fitted to the engine "Gov. Stearns," which is run by engineer Wm. Littlefield, who has long been employed by the road. The writer says: "No effort was made by the engineer, either at the depots or rounding curves on a down grade, to show the power of the brake as is done in experimenting; but it was used in the ordinary way of lessening speed and making absolute stops. In approaching any depot or station, the speed of the locomotive was apparently as great when within a few rods of the depot as at any point upon the road; by the turning of a valve, with the easiest and simplest motion, the train was brought to a standstill in going the length of four passenger cars." The correspondent speaks very highly of the brake.

Ship Orient, built in this city in 1852, by the late George Raynes, has been sold to English parties for £9500. Her tonnage was 1561, old measurement, and at the time of her sale she was partly owned by the Raynes estate.

—The ladies of Leavenworth have in circulation a pledge, of which the following is the gist: "In consideration of our said husbands signing the pledge to abstain from the use of intoxicating drinks, we do hereby pledge ourselves to henceforth and forever wear no more wool, jute, horse-hair, thread or anything else on our heads, except the hair that grows there, and use no more newspapers, except as men use the same."

—A theatrical paper recently contained the following advertisement: "Alice Gilmore and her mother, Fanny Gilmore, have consolidated, and will hereafter travel together, and be known as the Gilmore Sisters." This combination will be one of the events of the season. To see a mother and a daughter consolidated many people would pay more than they would to gaze upon the Siamese Twins when in the flesh; and while a knowledge of the fact that after consolidation they will travel together is an immense gain of power, the caution contained in the few last words of the advertisement is sufficient warning to any young man to beware of facial characteristics and to put no faith in general appearances.

How the South was Educated.

[Louisville Courier-Journal.]

The cant that we are unused to work and unfit for work, a mere huddle of ruined slave-owners, is contradicted by the facts which we are able to present. The man who served four years in confederate armies—who fought and footed it in seven States—who did not so much as look upon a linen shirt, and still less upon a paper collar, from Shiloh to Appomattox—who regaled himself during his hours of conviviality with the quintessence of aqua fortis distilled from corn-cobs and persimmons, and played poker at a hundred dollars ante in confederate currency, represented by nails, pebbles, and boot heels, a brass spur or a grain of coffee going for a thousand-dollar note—the gay soldier who, standing in need of sentiment, varied the entertainments of the field of battle by the gentle flirtations of the hero, engaging himself by turns to a maiden in Tennessee and a widow in Georgia—the veterans of Murfreesboro', Chicamauga and Atlanta, came out of the army demoralized perhaps, but educated. They had gone through a college, as it were. They had taken the grand tour.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, scorching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever acquired a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members, sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Secure you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

SCROFULA.
SCROFULOUS HUMORS.
IF VEGETINE will relieve pain, cleanse, purify and cure such diseases, restoring the patient to perfect health after trying different physicians, many remedies, suffering for years, is it not conclusive proof, if you are a sufferer, you can be cured? Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood, is the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the Great Blood-Purifier. The great source of disease originates in the blood; and no medicine that does not act directly upon the blood, can eradicate, has any just claim upon public attention. When the blood becomes lifeless and stagnant, either from change of weather or climate, want of exercise, irregular diet, or from any other cause, the VEGETINE will renew the blood, carry off the putrid humors, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, and impart a tone of vigor to the whole body. The conviction is, in the public mind as well as in the medical profession, that the remedies supplied by the Vegetable Kingdom are more safe, more successful, in the cure of disease, than mineral medicines. VEGETINE is composed of roots, barks, and herbs. It is pleasant to take, and perfectly safe, to give an infant. In Scrofula the VEGETINE has performed wonderful cures, where many other remedies have failed, as will be seen by the following unsolicited testimonial:

A Walking Miracle.
MR. H. R. STEVENS:
Dear Sir:—Though a stranger I want to inform you what VEGETINE has done for me.
Last Christmas scrofula made its appearance in my neck—three large running sores appearing on me as follows: One on each of my arms, one on my thigh, which extended to the seat, one on my head, which eat into the skull bone, one on my left leg, which became so bad that two physicians came to amputate the limb, though upon consultation concluded not to do so, as my whole body was so full of Scrofula, they deemed it advisable to cut the sore, which was painful beyond description, and there was a quart of matter run from this one sore. The physicians all gave me up to die, and said they could do no more for me. Both of my legs were drawn up to my seat, and it was thought if I did get up again I would be a cripple for life.
When in this condition I saw VEGETINE advertised, and, taking it in March, was able to be dressed on with it, until I had used 16 bottles, and this morning I am going to plough corn, a well man. All my townsmen say it is a miracle to see me round walking and working.
In conclusion I will add, when I was enduring such great suffering, from that dreadful disease, Scrofula, I prayed to the Lord above to take me out of this world, but as VEGETINE has restored to me the blessings of health, I desire more than ever to live, that I may be of some purpose to my fellow man, and I know of no better way to aid suffering humanity, than to enclose you this statement of my case, will an earnest hope that you will publish it, and it will afford me pleasure to reply to any communication which I may receive therefrom.
I am, Sir, very respectfully,

"Cut! John Wilson, Cut!"

[Bench and Bar.]

I had been employed to defend a seedy doctor, somewhat given to drink. His name happened to be John Wilson. He was charged with fraudulently disposing of his property with intent to defraud creditors, a misdemeanor punishable by fine and imprisonment. We had been through a thorough examination of all the facts before a committing magistrate, and Wilson was committed to the jail to await the action of the grand jury, then in session, with an ugly case against him on the testimony. Of course he was indicted. The judges had taken their places in solemn gravity for the dispatch of criminal business.

The district attorney, one of those brilliant geniuses who could play loo or poker all night with a reasonable modicum of "old rye" to assist, and come into court fresh the next morning, was at a side-table with his back to the court and bar, hurriedly making up his lost time in filling up subpœnas for witnesses. An informal list or docket of the criminal cases to be tried, made on a loose sheet, had been handed up to the court, which his Honor, with spectacles on nose, appeared to be intently studying. Suddenly I was appalled to hear from the venerable judge, "John Wilson, stand up." The doctor straightened up stiff as a post, and as suddenly as the scaramouch from the box in Sickle's show, while I sat wondering what was to come next, as the judge went on as follows:

"John Wilson, you have been indicted by a jury of your country for a high offense, but the court is gratified to learn of your repentance, and that you save the country expense by pleading guilty. Your case and that of your suffering family have been represented to the court, and we have, on conference, decided to deal leniently with you. But the court admonishes you hereafter better to regard the laws of meum and teum; if you ever come before this court again you will inevitably be used up! The court orders you to pay a fine of five dollars, and to stand committed until paid."

Before this eloquent speech was concluded I had taken in the situation. I considered the doctor's case desperate. I had all his money and enough to cover a moderate fee as things went in those days, for defending him. Quick as thought I slipped a five-dollar bill into his hand, with the words, "Pay your fine and cut." He waved his hand gracefully to the sheriff with the bill, bowed his thanks to the court, and was out the door in the twinkling of an eye. Silence reigned for ten minutes, when the judge called on the prosecutor to proceed. Tumbling a bundle of papers in haste, he said, "I move on the trial of John Wilson, first, your honor." "John Wilson!" exclaimed the judge, "we have sentenced him. Isn't that the ham case?" "No, your honor; that's John Watson, next on the docket." "But where is John Wilson?" looking hard at me. I replied, "I presume he has availed himself of the leniency of the court and is looking for parts unknown."

With this eclaircissement peals of laughter rang through the ancient temple of justice, and then came a rush of constables and audience down the stairs into the street, after the flown bird. The main street of the village was in full view for half a mile rising an eminence crowned with a dense wood. And at the farthest point could be seen my quondam client making the tallest sort of 2-40 tracks for the woods, his coat-tail streaming behind in the wind. That was the last seen in those parts of John Wilson, and that is the way my first client was cleared.

Caught and Killed.

[Fort Smith (Ark.) New Era.]

Morgan, the leader of the gang that robbed the safe of the Smelser drug store, some weeks ago, and subsequently escaped from the county jail at Greenwood, was killed the other day in Polk County, under the following circumstances:

It seems that Morgan, after his escape, made his way southward, having come from Texas to these parts not long since. The day after his escape he stopped at Booth's store, about thirty miles south from here, and while waiting for his supper, the family being eating, stole forty dollars out of the money-drawer of the store, and took a fine mare of Mr. Booth's, on which he made off. He rode eighty-five miles during that night, and next day, the animal having given out, he stopped and worked one day for a farmer in Polk County.

Learning that a neighboring farmer had just received $400 for some cotton sold, Morgan repaired at night to the house, a simple, one-room log cabin, climbs to the top of the chimney by means of a fence rail, then lets himself down into the room by the same means, having drawn the rail after him, succeeds in getting the money, and then makes his escape in the way he came. He of course proceeds at once on his journey southward. But retribution was about to overtake him.

Mr. Booth, whom he had robbed of his money and mare, after discovering his loss, immediately proceeded to Waldron, the county-seat of Scott County, some twelve miles distant, and got some friends to start in pursuit, under the lead of Colonel Hawthorne. The party soon tracked the fugitive, and when near the place of his last robbery, scattered, the better to find, and, if possible, to surround the desperado, he having left the road and taken to a densely-wooded swamp.

Colonel Hawthorne was the first to come upon him, and had a fight with him, but Morgan knocked him down, rendering him senseless. After his recovery, Col. Hawthorne rejoined his friends, and the party then engaged the services of an old bear-hunter, with his hounds, to track the fugitive. He was soon discovered and surrounded in an impenetrable thicket. Being asked to surrender, he replied by firing upon the party. The latter returned the fire, and a shot shattered his knee. Again he was asked to surrender, but fiercely refused, and swore he would die first. Another volley from the shotguns of the assailants broke his thigh. Again a surrender was demanded, but with no better success. Another volley stretched him dead. When the party went up to where Morgan had fallen, they found every chamber of Hawthorne's revolver was empty, except the two which had missed fire. On examining the body, the party found it covered with scars from shot and knife wounds, giving evidence that the deceased had been in many a close and deadly struggles before.

A coroner's inquest was held on the body, and a verdict rendered in accordance with the circumstances, after which the party returned to Waldron.

The Spaniards had 3000 men engaged, and are reported to have lost 40 officers in killed and wounded alone. Such a swarm of office-seekers as are demanding recognition of the democrats, now-a-days, at the hands of to-be-Governor Weston! The main point, though, is the succession to Senator Cragin in 1877. Bingham and Sinclair want the position, and each is wise in his own conceit, hoping his rival will be so confounded by events ere then, that the other may easily win the distinction. But suppose Hon. William E. Chandler should take a hand in New Hampshire politics, ere then!

All will be painted by skilful artists, and done soon.

Some honest and earnest but too-easily discouraged republicans have feared their party would not be able to recapture the State from the democrats next year; but we are happy to inform them that another democratic victory is impossible.—Joshua L. Foster, Esq., of the Dover Democrat, has gone back to the bosom of the democratic party. Certain papers have sneered at the influence of Mr. Foster's publication, but their sneers only show that they have not kept themselves posted in contemporaneous history. So long as he published a paper in this city, and advocated the democratic cause, the democrats were steadily defeated in every State-contest; he left the State (and went to Connecticut, where he started a democratic daily and thereby secured the defeat of Gov. English, the democrats having won the battle the year before,) and at the very next election the democracy triumphed; he returned, and started a democratic paper in Manchester,—result, a republican victory at the following State election; last January he got mad and bolted the democratic nominations, and as a natural consequence the democratic nominees were elected; and now he has again doomed the democratic party by returning to its support. Our only fear is that the democrats won't have him.

Did Mrs. Banks Dance?

[N. Y. World.]

In the present Senatorial canvass in Massachusetts the party-lines are beginning to be drawn very rigidly, and the antecedents of candidates for the chair of the the dead Statesman are examined with microscopical fidelity. Governor Banks has been one of the victims of this peculiar scrutiny. He has been placed under the microscope, and a very serious flaw has been discovered in his antecedents by the Dawes caucus, which unfits him to be a Senator from Massachusetts. Some one in the caucus ventured the rash remark that there was no aristocracy, or pretense of aristocracy, in Boston, whereupon another member got up and denied the soft impeachment. He reminded the gentleman who had made the rash assertion of an incident attending the Prince of Wales ball in Boston during the Governorship of Gen. Banks .The "lavender-water" element of the city had picked out a certain lady as representative of the creme de la creme, and typical of the gilt-edged, rose-tinted, double X, A No. 1 aristocracy which sprang from the original codfish suspended over the Speaker's chair in the House, to lead the dance with the Prince. Gov. Banks, however, reminded the lavender-water element of the requirements of official etiquette on such occasions. To this they demurred, as it was not every day a live Prince was caught swimming in lavender water; and, although very ugly stories were circulated about the young gentleman, they were determined that the feminine representative of the creme de la creme, and not some ordinary skim-milk woman, should have the honor of first inaugurating the terpsichorean honors to Master Albert Edward, who was then an unmarried, roystering youth, addicted to midnight flagons and a penchant for the Can-can. The Governor, however, held out for the requirements of etiquette. The lavender-water element stormed, and the more they stormed the more determined grew the Governor; and at last he put his foot down with a crash, and declared that he would not be present to receive the Prince unless the first place in the first set was given to the lady to whom, the speaker declared, by all precedent, it belonged,—the wife of the Chief Magistrate. Lavender, therefore, had to yield, and, although it was sorely shocked and grieved, and has not recovered from it to this day, Mrs. Gov. Banks led out the Prince of Wales in the first dance, and the gilt-edged young woman of the creme de la creme is now only known as the woman who didn't dance with the Prince of Wales, and long ago made up her mind that this is a hollow, deceitful world at best.

A Simple Remedy for Scarlet Fever.

[San Francisco Chronicle.]

Robert Christie, of the Petrero, suggests a remedy for the scarlet fever, which he avers has invariably proved successful. It is very simple, and lies within the reach of those whose limited means preclude them from employing the services of a physician. It is this: Take an onion and cut it in half; cut out a portion of the center, and into the cavity put a spoonful of saffron; put the pieces together, then wrap them up in a cloth and bake them in an oven until the onion is cooked so that the juice will run freely; squeeze out all the juice, and give the patient a teaspoonful, at the same time rubbing the chest and throat with goose-grease or rancid bacon, if there is any cough or soreness in the throat. In a short time the fever will break out in an eruption all over the body. All that is then necessary is to keep the patient warm and protected from draughts, and the recovery is certain. Mr. Christie says he has been employing this remedy for many years, and never knew it to fail when proper care was taken of the patient after its application. One family, in which there were five children down with the disease at one time, recently, used this simple remedy upon his telling them of it, and every one of the little ones recovered in a short time.

Brain Exhaustion.

Dr. Radcliffe, in a recent lecture, has given very sensible advice to those overworked people who are suffering from exhaustion of the brain, that fruitful source of disease at the present day. The leading symptoms of this distressing malady are loss of memory, depression of spirits, increased or lessened sleepiness, unusual irritability, epileptiform condition of the nerves, and sometimes transitory coma. The doctor advises all patients afflicted in the manner described to preserve a happy medium in the matter of diet and mental labor. He says the patient should not eat heartily, as excess of food tends to develop the disease. He opposes equally the train-diet system, as there is danger of starving the nerve tissues by excluding hydrocarbons from food. In the same manner with work. The patient should neither work more than is natural under the circumstances, nor should he rest entirely from brain-work, for in many cases cerebral exhaustion is intensified by the brain lying fallow. In case of undue sleeplessness, the head should lie low on the pillow; if there is undue sleepiness, it should be kept high. Thus, if the overtaxed brain-workers can only be induced to work moderately, avoid excitement, eat moderately of nourishing food, take plenty of exercise in the open air, and sleep soundly, they may hope to enjoy good health, good digestion, and the "length of days" that attend a normal physical condition.

Trained Fleas.

The latest excitement in Berlin is an exhibition of drilled fleas. The exhibition takes place on a large sheet of white paper fastened upon an ordinary table, to which all the spectators approach in turn, so as to be able to witness in all details the extraordinary manœuvres of these little but marvelously powerful and gifted rascals. Here you see one of the muscular fleas rolling a small barrel along with its feet, as the men do in the circus; there you see a slim, voluptuously built madam of the species walking along in crinoline and carrying her parasol with all the affectation of a city miss; at another place a well trained fellow performs on the flying trapeze—without any danger to his neck, however, since the biggest fall would not break that; while below the trapeze, on the paper, a host of little ones are turning somersaults at a fearful rate. The largest specimens of the collections have been trained to draw wagons, drays, carriages, etc. To fix the harness properly on them, the flea-tamer places his pupils on a piece of paper covered with mucilage, where they have to stick. He then, by the aid of a watchmaker's loop, arranges a strong gold thread around their bodies, and attaches it to the wagon or carriage. The ladies of Berlin attend the exhibition in large numbers, and seem to take an extraordinary delight in the performances of the little creatures, who are regularly fed every morning from the arm of the great flea-tamer, he being quite ready to shed his last drop of blood for his darling little pets.

A Paducah Mule-Driver Plays the "Pictur Game."

A Paducah mule-driver had an amusing adventure on the train on his way home from Baltimore a few days since. Perching himself upon the arm of a seat, he addpd to the mirth of the passengers by relating his adventures in Baltimore:

"Well, boys, I'm jest from town; sold my mules, am gwine back to Paduky. Santering 'round last night I got lost; hired a hack, and was tuk to the big tavern with marble-slab floor; went out agin and drapped in to see the snake show; showman tuk me to a glass-kivered case full of watches and jewelry, and 'snaked' me out of a smart pile trying to win a watch for Bet; drapped in another place; feller had three kyards, and bet me a V I couldn't pick up the one with a pictur on it; picked up the wrong one every time and lost my pile, but I'll git even when I git home. You see Bill Thomas is courting my sister; I'll play the pictur game on him, win his horse, bridle, and saddle, and make him walk home.

Paid four dollars at the tavern for lodgins; three dollars extra for light; tried to blow it out, and then burnt my fingers trying to snuff it.

I give that feller a dollar for the three cards, got 'em here. Come, now boys, who'll bet a V on the pictur?"

"I'll bet three dollars I can pick it up," said city youth.

"Oh you're toe smart; you'll want your money to buy your breakfast. I'll bet you fifty dollars again your watch."

"Done," said city youth, and "Paduky" had that watch in the twinkling of an eye. Just then the whistle blew, the cars stopped, and "Paduky" stepped from the train to the platform, and was lost in the darkness. It then occurred to the "city boy" that he had once heard of "three card monte," but did not think a Paducah mule-driver could play monte.

The Pull Down Practice.

Death laughs when he sees the weak and feeble bled, blistered, salivated, opiumized, or gulped with violent purgatives. He knows that under such treatment they cannot long survive. In direct conflict with this pull down practice is the principal upon which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters operate. The effect of this incomparable vegetable restorative is to build up the system and invigorate the constitution. It imparts appetite and assists digestion, enriches and cleanses the blood, regulates and tones the liver and the bowels, and establishes and perpetuates a healthy habit of body. By a happy combination of vegetable extracts—tonic, aperient and anti-bilious—with a pure stimulant, these effects are simultaneously produced. There is no prescription of the pharmacopœia that has the same scope. You may find among its formulas scourges for the bowels, stimulants for the stomach, sedatives for the nerves, but no grand combination medicine that, like Hostetter's Bitters, is at once a tonic, an aperient, a corrective and an alterative.

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT'T OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

Auction—Bank Stock.

A Waif.

A bottle, tightly corked, was found upon the beach at Gerrish's Island on Sunday last, by Mr. Hiram Tobey, a navy yard watchman.

It had evidently been in the water for many years, being completely overgrown with barnacles and sea-weed. When broken by Mr. Tobey, it was found to contain a slip of paper about four inches long and two inches wide, with marks upon it indicating that it had been part of a ship's logbook, and bearing the following inscription:

"December 14, 1851.

SHIP JANE, Arctic Ocean. I write this, knowing that I shall never see land again, hoping that some one will pick it up. Yesterday the Captain died, which * * I would write more if I could, but I am starving to death."

Several words, not legible, are expressed by the asterisks. The ink is very pale and the paper somewhat discolored. The writing, though indistinct with age, was easily read by the aid of a magnifying glass. The document is now in the possession of Com'dr McCook, U. S. N., at the Navy Yard, who is desirous that publicity may be given to the above facts.

Laconics.

The new city government will be inaugurated at the City Rooms to-day at ten o'clock A. M. The usual custom of using the court-house for this purpose is departed from on the ground that but few attend, and these can be accommodated in the Council room and hall. There is a general interest to know Mayor-elect Miller's views regarding retrenchment in the already overgrown annual disbursements, and the public, desiring rigid economy in the administration of city affairs will await with favorable anticipation the recommendations to be made and the action of the city councils.

Prof. Gunning's lecture at Mechanics' Hall, this evening, will be on "The World of Primeval Man,"—the problem of man's antiquity, migrations and early conditions will be examined by a new method.

Mr. Gardner J. Greenleaf announces that his hay-scales, which have been out of use the past winter, are now repaired and ready for service.

Mr. Samuel Lamprey's juvenile dancing school will commence on Wednesday afternoon of next week, (April 15th,) in Congress Hall, and continue on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons for twelve weeks—twenty-four lessons for $10. Mr. Lamprey is too well known as a teacher to need any commendation,—the announcement that he is to open a school guarantees the best possible opportunity for children to become proficient in the elegant accomplishment he has taught for so many years.

The fourth annual Ball of the Wolfe Tone Club, at Congress Hall on Monday evening, was largely attended, and the patrons of the Club seemed to enjoy themselves mightily after the mortifications of the lenten season.

The Blind Band of twenty performers give one of their grand concerts of vocal and instrumental music at the Temple to-morrow (Wednesday) evening, assisted by Miss Mary E. Costello, the favorite soprano. Reserved seats can now be secured at Preston's. See advertisement.

Saturday was an abominably contemptible day in this city, a cold, raw wind causing the sand and small rocks to fly about in an annoyingly uncomfortable manner. Sunday was a great improvement upon Saturday, as to weather, but moist snow commenced falling at dusk and kept at it about all night, except when it gave place to rain. Young sparks (and elderly ditto) who delayed starting for their homes until midnight or later, found the walking home the least pleasant part of their evening's amusement.

Messrs. Frank Jones, John Pender and Clarence B. Mason have been drawn as petit jurors for the S. J. Court at Exeter, which commences next Tuesday.

The new Catholic church is to be dedicated on Thursday, the 9th. Harlow's orchestra and several of the best vocalists in the city will assist the regular choir in rendering Mozart's Twelfth Mass, the solos in which will be sung by an eminent soprano from Boston; Mr. R. Edwin Rider will preside at the organ, and Mr. Pearson will conduct. Tickets, at $2 each, will be issued to persons desiring to witness the ceremonies.

William Hodgdon, a young man employed by Mr. Andrew Gardner, had his leg broken Sunday morning by a cow he was milking stepping upon it.

A man named Tetherly fell overboard at the Spring Market, Monday morning, and was not rescued until he was insensible.

There is a general desire for a repetition of the concert by Willie E. Nowell. His brother George is as promising a musician as was Willie at his age. An entertainment by the young brothers assisted by Miss Nickels would draw a large audience.

Call early at Preston's if you wish to secure reserved seats for the concert by the Blind Band.

Josiah Lawlor and Martin Purdin, both of Chelsea, Mass., were blown off shore, Saturday afternoon, in a small boat, while attending to a trawl off Cape Neddick. They tried to make a landing at Boon Island, but failed; lost one of their oars, and were fast freezing to death when they were picked up by schooner Addie Sawyer, Capt. Alfred Cook. Capt. Cook furnished the castaways with dry clothing, did everything in his power to make them comfortable, and landed them in Boston. Purdin had his hands frozen, but Lawlor got off with frost-bitten fingers. Their boat was half-full of water, which they were too far gone to bail out, before the Addie Sawyer reached them, and their escape from death was very narrow.

Four inches of snow fell on Sunday night, but Monday's sun liquefied it.

The Naval Band, the Jubilee Singers and a party of forty friends went to Dover in a special train, Sunday evening. The band and singers gave a good concert; several hundred persons would have attended from this city had the matter been generally advertised. The return train left Dover at ten P. M., and arrived here at 10.25.

The signing of the contract by the Boston & Maine and Eastern Railroads has delayed the proposed change of trains on the Eastern—perhaps until June.

Firemen's Election.

On Monday evening the fire companies organized for the year by the choice of officers as follows:

Dearborn S. F. E. Co., No. 1.—Foreman, J. Frank Shannon; 1st Asst., John S. Whidden; 2d Asst., William P. Stover; Pipeman, John S. Banks; Clerk, Wingate G. Rand.

Sagamore S. F. E. Co., No. 2.—Foreman, Willard Sears; 1st Asst., Charles E. Berry; Clerk, Richard T. Call; Steward, Thomas Faulkner.

Kearsarge S. F. E. Co., No. 3.—Foreman, Ira C. Seymour; 1st Asst., Willard J. Sampson; 2d Asst., William H. Seymour; Pipeman, Charles W. Coleman; Clerk, William S. Hazel; Steward, Charles N. Merrill; Chaplain, Benjamin Atwell.

Connecticut.

Returns from the election indicate no choice of Governor by the people. The legislature is close, with the prababilities favoring the republicans.

Scientific Fragments.

The solvent power of petroleum adapts it for use in the cleansing of steel articles. It does not become rancid or gummy, as is the case with other oils.

The so-called vegetable wax of Japan and China is, in reality, the secretion of an insect about the size of a grain of rice. It receives its name because it is found on trees. After it is gathered, it is melted and strained. Nearly 3,000,000 pounds were exported from China in 1870.

To avoid the errors which arise from weighing in the air, M. Deleuil, of Paris, has constructed a vacuum balance. It consists of a balance of the best description inclosed in an air-tight iron case, provided with glass windows, and suitable rods passing through the stuffing-boxes. The vacuum is produced by an ordinary air-pump, and the weighings are very accurate.

The following patent has been recently granted for hardening steel. The object is heated to red heat by any of the ordinary methods for uniform heating. It is then chilled by the action of a strong blast of air or gas. By suitable variations in the strength of the blast, and the temperature of the air, any required degree of hardness may be obtained. After this the substance is tempered as is desired.

Mr. Spencer placed a South African diamond, about the size of a pea, in the interior of a mass of refractory clay, which was mixed with soda and hydrate of lime. This was then kept at a cherry-red heat for three days and nights; at the close of this time the diamond had disappeared, whereupon he concludes that carbon in this form is combustible at much lower temperatures than is generally supposed.

A. Paladilhe relates that foxes are tormented by fleas, and when the infliction becomes unbearable, they gather a mouthful of moss, and slowly walk backwards into the nearest stream until only the mouth is left above the surface of the water. The fleas meanwhile take refuge on the little island of moss, and when the fox is satitfied that they have all embarked, he opens his mouth, and the moss drifting away with its freight, the wliy animal regains the bank, evidently satisfied at his freedom from his tormentors.

—It's a pity the celery season is so far gone, for a hygienic epicure has just found out that it is a specific for nervous diseases, palpitation of the heart, &c., and now we shall have to remember it till next winter. Onions, to be sure, are a substitute, and those we always have with us, but most of us would rather have nervousness than onions.

—Rather a keen piece of sarcasm is indulged in by the author of "Eldorado," a new burlesque at the Strand Theatre, London. He makes the son of one of the characters welcome his father to Paris, and ask him if he had a pleasant railway journey. "Oh, yes," says the parent, "capital; we had a railway accident." "Indeed? What was it?" says the son. "We arrived safely!"

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN

HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever.

It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for the intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

An Humble Follower of "G. W."
[Green Bay Advocate.]

A good little boy out West undertook to come the G. Washington on his mother—in this way: He cut off the cat's head with the traditional hatchet and then hid the defunct feline in the meal-barrel. When the old lady went for meal to make the "hoe-cake" for the frugal morning repast she discovered the cat, and interviewed her little son. He said: "I did it, mother, with my little hatchet, but I'll be swizzled if I can tell the whole truth about this little affair." Now, most mothers would have kissed their brave, truthful lad on his noble brow and kept right on using the meal out of that barrel just the same; but this one didn't. She said: "Come across my lap, my son; come across my lap." He came, and for awhile there rose a cloud from the seat of his trousers that effectually hid the son from view. And the old woman now sports goggles and is lavish in the use of Petit's eye-salve. The good little boy had peppered the seat of his pants.

—It is proposed to make the dissolution of Congress a national holiday. That is something to touch a sympathetic chord in every heart, and awaken universal joy.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,

For all the Purposes of a Family Physic

CURING

are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they exceed all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organs into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closets for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The president should not neglect it, and he wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

—There is a lady of Sagdahoc county, Me., who has a head of remarkably fine hair. The average length is seven feet five inches. When unbraided and falling loose, it trails for quite a distance on the floor. She has refused a large offer for the hair, on which she naturally prides herself next to her head.
—When a spasm of the soul twitches the thought, through the mind, that a man can leave New York in the morning and get to San Francisco at night, the mind boils with wonder and stews with amazement at the thought of it, until you are certain that you don't get there the same night, but some other night. The shortest route from Brooklyn to San Francisco is via Fulton ferry, up Fulton street to Broadway, up Broadway to Forty-second street, down Forty-second street to Fourth avenue, turn to the left, and keep going until you get there. To save expense, start between 5.30 and 7.30 A. M. or P. M., as the fare on the ferry is then fifty per cent. less than any other time.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 8, 1874.

My Ox—Your Bull.

The praise accorded to the democratic members of the Massachusetts legislature for "sticking" by their candidate for Senator, and for which they were tendered a banquet, reminds us that certain so called republicans delight to make themselves appear "independent" by voting regular nominations. As a rule, democrats have more common sense and are too shrewd to abandon their associates in politics. But nothing pleases them more than to cry "party! party," and to denounce the caucus system when their opponents occasionally "stick,"—that which is noble and manly "devotion to principle," when performed by democrats, becoming "bitter partizanship" and "slavish obedience to the behests of party" when performed by republicans. It makes a vast difference in the views of our democratic brethren, whether they look through the little or the big end of the spy-glass at any subject.

This profound consciousness of the moral difference between the goring of another man's ox by our bull and the goring of our ox by another man's bull, is also shown in the fact that the papers which have in the past wailed loudest over "partizan proscription," when any democrat lost his official head, are now loudest in their demands for a "clean sweep" and a "new deal" in this State. Decapitating democratic office-holders after a republican victory is evidence of the lowest political depravity, the utter abandonment of honor and the total extinguishment of patriotism; the decapitation of republican office-holders after a democratic victory is "a cleansing of the Augean stables," the evidence of a decent "regard for the expressed wishes of the people," the "putting of honest men in office," etc., and-so-forth, and so on. But notwithstanding the eagerness with which the democratic papers of the State now demand a general turnout of republican officials, and the evident propriety of it in their eyes, should a future victory for the republicans result in a democratic sacrifice we should hear the old familiar groanings over "partizan proscription" that we have heard so many times already.

We have always thought it absurd to expect the dominant party to keep its opponents in office, and that it would be ridiculously silly in the victors to do so; we have repeatedly said so, and make no distinction on account of which party happens to be ahead. So we do not propose to make any appeal to the enemies of "partizan proscription" for mercy on the republicans; but we should like to see the democrats bestow a reward on William H. Gove, for we think he deserves it,—not a man, even in the democratic party, has chased office more faithfully than he. He stuck by the republican party until he could get nothing more there; then he stuck by the labor reformers until he got a chance to sell them out, for office; then he "liberally" represented New Hampshire in the Greeley convention and promised the State to the fusionists, and doubtless would have got another office there. We hope he will get it, for he is worthy of it, indeed; besides, if he don't get it, we fear he will be coming back into the republican party again.

Readables.

The Massachusetts legislature ballotted twice, with no choice for U. S. Senator, Tuesday, as follows:

Dawes	97	96
Hoar	78	81
Curtis	72	71
Adams	16	16

Phillips	1	1
Whittier	1	1

The U. S. Senate passed the bill adding $46,000,000 to the currency, Monday, by a vote of 29 to 23. An amendment providing that nothing in the act should be construed to authorize any increase of the principal of the public debt was defeated, 24 to 27. It is thought the bill will pass the House without amendment, and that the President may veto it.

Notwithstanding the fact that the democracy have re-elected Governor Ingersoll of Connecticut, their majority of last year is reduced about 1000. Perhaps some of our republican would-be mentors will explain whether this republican gain is due to the Simmons affair, as they blame everything in politics now-a-days to "Butlerism."

Small-pox is still raging at Fall River.

A vinegar spring has lately been discovered at Acworth.

The funds of the National Bank of Brighton have been misappropriated to the extent of nearly $10,000, but the amount has been made good.

During a row growing out of a bar-room fight at Taunton on Saturday night, a carpenter named Charles A. Gifford was set upon by a crowd and pounded or kicked to death.

If oranges are not golden apples, and the groves of Florida a new Hesperides, the fruit yields golden returns to the owners of plantations there. A grove which costs only $1000 per year, last season produced $11,000 worth of oranges, and might be made to yield $50,000 worth; and the papers tell of other groves which are equally prolific.

The democratic candidate for Governor of Connecticut has 2800 majority. Seventeen democrats and four republicans are elected to the Senate, and the democrats have about fifty majority in the House.

Mr. John D. Sanborn testified on Monday before the committee on ways and means that he had received about $210,000 under the contract with the Treasury department. Of this sum he had paid about $160,000 to other persons for their revelations and labors and still owed others for unsettled bills. The contract was made with Mr. Boutwell. The examination failed to involve Gen. Butler in receiving any share of the proceeds.

Another editor is coming into prominence, E. B. Haskell, Esq., of Boston. Send him to Congress, boys. He's of the right metal.

A new democratic weekly, to take the place of the bolting Foster's Democrat, will be started at Dover, May 1. Henry H. Metcalf of Littleton is to be the editor, and the paper will be called the Democratic Press.

Lassoing a Porker.

[New York Commercial Advertiser.]

I remember him as a very thin boy, with light hair. His principal fault was that he was too easily influenced. He gained certain hazy and indistinct ideas in regard to lassoing wild horses by reading one of Mayne Reid's books. His name was "Ned" Strong. His proposed method of lassoing a wild horse was as follows: First, he would mount a noble, well-trained steed, with a rope twelve feet long in his hand. This rope would have a noose in one end of it, and after a long chase upon the foaming charger he would at last throw that noose over the head of a wild horse, and so have him fast—lassoed. So he bought twelve feet of clothes-line and began to practice at lassoing by throwing the noose over a horse-post ten feet off. In a week he could lasso a horse-post every time. Having heard that the pen was mightier than the sword, he went out into the pig-pen and practiced lassoing the pigs. By the end of another week he could catch a pig on the run every time.

At this time Ned was only fourteen years old. He weighed eighty-seven pounds. One day he saw an enormous porker rooting on he village "green." Ned tied the lasso tightly to his wrist, and then he determined to lasso that porker or perish in the attempt. As the reader will soon see, he came near perishing, for no sooner did the creature feel the noose drop over its neck than it started for the open country with a speed which was entirely beyond Ned's control. Ned pulled back as hard as he could, but he might as well have tried to stop the momentum of an ox. The rope was so securely tied to his wrist that he could not release himself; and it was entirely impossible for him to cut the rope, as he was prancing along at a high rate of speed. He was taking long, involuntary steps—very long, indeed. It was a forced run.

The porker dragged Ned through a mud-puddle, and then made for a swamp, evidently terror-stricken, and laboring under the delusion that Ned was a tin can. However, the rope finally slipped from his wrist and he landed wrong side up in a slough of soft mud. The porker kept on with a terror-stricken eye, and is probably going yet.

An eighty-seven pound man cannot lasso a four hundred pound hog without coming to the conclusion that he has mistaken his calling.

New Publications.

THE PROGRESSIVE SHIP BUILDER, No. 2, treats of buoyancy and its laws as applied to the best interests of navigation and ship-building. Mr. Griffiths does not mince matters; he boldly attacks the "improvements" in ship-building of the last twenty years, asserting that the said "improvements" have mainly been but blunders and that our advances have been decidedly in the wrong direction; worse than this, he backs up his assertions by practical proofs and mathematical demonstration which cannot be refuted. While every ship-builder should have this work and carefully study the principles it elucidates and the suggestions it gives, it is valuable and interesting to the general reader as well, though of course not in equal degree. This number contains illustrations of the effect of water pressure at various depths and on different shaped bodies, the body plan of the U. S. S. "Pawnee," etc. Issued from the Nautical Gazette office, 40 Burling slip, New York—to be furnished in 16 numbers, at $5 for the set.

Messrs. Lee and Shepard are issuing a new edition of May Mannering's HELPING HAND SERIES, the first volume of which was published seven or eight years ago. These books have become standard favorites with the boys and girls, and Mrs. Nowell's name is always welcome among the contributors to their periodicals.

SCROFULA.

SCROFULOUS HUMORS.

IF VEGETINE will relieve pain, cleanse, purify and cure such diseases, restoring the patient to perfect health after trying different physicians, many remedies, suffering for years, is it not conclusive proof, if you are a sufferer, you can be cured? Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood, in the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the Great Blood-Purifier. The great source of disease originates in the blood; and no medicine that does not act directly upon it, to purify and renovate, has any just claim upon public attention. When the blood becomes fireless and stagnant, either from change of weather or climate, want of exercise, irregular diet, or from any other cause, the Vegetine will renew the blood, carry off the putrid humors, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, and impart a tone of vigor to the whole body. The conviction is, in the public mind as well as in the medical profession, that the remedies supplied by the Vegetable Kingdom are more safe, more successful, in the cure of disease, than mineral medicines. VEGETINE is composed of roots, barks, and herbs. It is pleasant to take, and perfectly safe to give an infant. In Scrofula the VEGETINE has performed wonderful cures, where many other remedies have failed, as will be seen by the following unsolicited testimonial:

A Walking Miracle.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir:—Though a stranger I want to inform you what VEGETINE has done for me.

Last Christmas Scrofula made its appearance in my system—large running ulcers appearing on me as follows: One on each of my arms, one on my thigh, which extended to the seat, one on my head, which eat into the skull bone, one on my left leg, which became so bad that two physicians came to amputate the limb, though upon consultation concluded not to do so, as my whole body was so full of Scrofula they deemed it advisable to cut the sore, which was painful beyond description, and there was a quart of matter run from this one sore. The physicians all gave me up to die, and said they could do no more for me. Both of my legs were drawn up to my seat, and it was thought if I did get up again I would be a cripple for life.

When in this condition I saw VEGETINE advertised, and commenced taking it in March, and followed on with it, until I had used 16 bottles, and this morning I am going to plough corn, a well man. All my townsmen say it's a miracle to see me round walking and working.

In conclusion I will add, when I was enduring such great suffering, from that dreadful disease, Scrofula, I prayed to the Lord above to take me out of this world, but as VEGETINE has restored to me the blessings of health, I desire more than ever to live, that I may be of some purpose to my fellow man, and I know of no better way to aid suffering humanity, than to enclose you this statement of my case, will an earnest hope that you will publish it, and it will afford me pleasure to reply to any communication which I may receive therefrom.

I am, Sir, very respectfully,
WILLIAM PAYN

Poverty o the Blood.

If the blood be thin and watery the whole system is impoverished. The flesh is flabby, the muscles lack hardness, the nerves are relaxed, the internal organs but imperfectly perform their functions, the brain is inert, and, in short, the entire body is only half alive. The stomach is mainly responsible for this wretched condition of the human machine. Stimulate and tone that organ with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and a marked change for the better will soon be apparent. The result of improving the digestion with this potent and genial tonic will be the conversion of the food into rich, pure blood, and as the blood is the raw material from which flesh, muscle, brain, bone, and every membrane, tissue and ligament of the body are manufactured, all those components of the material frame will be gradually regenerated and invigorated. This is sound doctrine, and it is sustained by the logic of facts.

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones of your body or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

Local Matters.

Organization of the City Government.

The members of the city government for the ensuing year met at the City Rooms at ten o'clock, Tuesday, to assume the duties of the positions to which they were chosen at the recent election. Among the distinguished persons present we noticed Mayor Horton and City Clerk Stevens of Dover, and Senator-elect Hall of this district. The Council Room was filled to overflowing.

The Common Council organized temporarily by the choice of Chas. E. Simpson, Esq., as chairman. On motion of Mr. Lovell of Ward One, the Mayor and Aldermen were notified that the Councilmen were ready to be qualified.

In Convention of both Boards, Mayor Marvin read a valedictory, reviewing the record of his six years' experience as a member of the Common Council, Alderman and Mayor. He recommended that one of the hand engines of the fire department be stationed at the city farm to be used in case of fire. He referred at length to the scarcity of the water supply and the great danger from fire, and made a post mortem recommendation that the supply in the river and millponds be utilized for the city's protection, one plan being to run drains from the South pond to points where the engines can go. He stated that $32,200 of the funded debt had been paid in 1873, and that $30,000 of the $52,000 payable this year were paid on the 1st of February.

The City Clerk read the resolution declaring Hon. Frank W. Miller elected Mayor. Mr. Miller was sworn by the City Clerk, and the Aldermen and Councilmen were sworn by Mayor Miller. All but one member were present. The convention then rose, the Mayor and Aldermen retiring.

The Common Council balloted for a President, and Mr. Chas. C. Akerman was unanimously chosen, receiving nine votes. In taking the chair, Mr. Akerman made a neat speech of acceptance. A ballot for Clerk of the Council resulted in the unanimous choice of Mr. Henry A. Yeaton. The Council having notified the Board of Mayor and Aldermen of its organization, both Boards met in convention to choose a City Clerk, and Hon. Marcellus Bufford was reelected, receiving all the 18 votes. The Mayor then administered the oath of office. Rev. James DeNormandie invoked the Divine blessing, after which Mayor Miller delivered the following ADDRESS.

Gentlemen of the City Councils: In assuming the various trusts confided to us for the ensuing year by our fellow citizens, it may be well for me to follow the established usage, for which there is no other law than custom, and offer a few suggestions on public matters for your consideration. But as the change in our municipal year has afforded the opportunity for all citizens to learn the present condition of the several departments of the City Government, and their conduct during the past year, through the reports recently printed in the city book,—few details will here be necessary. Various recommendations from the heads of the departments, will be found in those reports.

CITY DEBT AND TAXES.

The public debt, expenses and taxes are subjects in which all naturally feel a vital interest; and while nearly all the appropriations of money that we shall be called upon to make, are by law fixed and inevitable, beyond our control—being necessary for carrying on the public routine business, in the various departments of schools, State and County levies, municipal debt, or for the maintenance of safe highways, fire department, etc.; yet in the ratio that our management of the portion of the finances within our control, may be discreet, intelligent and economical, or otherwise, shall we affect the public welfare. And while the problem how to make many and great improvements, which the public is ever demanding, without at the same time increasing the taxes, which the same public is ever deprecating, is as yet unsolved; it is our duty, and will doubtless be our pleasure, to use our best endeavors in the public service.

The city indebtedness at the commencement of the year 1874, was stated to be $175,500, in bonds, all coming due on or before January, 1885; and bearing interest part at 5 and the rest at 6 per cent.; besides the $300,000 of special twenty-year 6 per cent bonds issued for the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad, and due in 1893. The city debt was increased last year $1076, chiefly on account of the expensive Fourth of July celebration, the heavy overdraft of the Overseers of the Poor in their department, and the large amount of land damages awarded for the Fleet street widening, for which last there was no appropriation.

The amount of $68,983 in New Hampshire State bonds, assigned in 1872 to this city for war bounties, has all been used during the past two years for payment of the funded city debt becoming due. The advantages of this arrangement, whereby the State assumes in part the war-debts of towns, being altogether in favor of those towns that mismanaged their affairs in the poorest and most disloyal manner — the reasons for well managed and responsible towns giving it their support in the legislature, are not apparent. The towns are the basis of the State, and must ultimately pay the whole debt, unless it may be assumed by the general Government; and it is estimated by the best judges, that the loss to Portsmouth by this assumption of a portion of the towns' war bounties by the State, will be at least forty thousand dollars. And as changing the debt in this manner is only shifting the responsibility for a time, the real debt of the city cannot be said to have been reduced at all during these two years, but on the contrary, has increased.

No sound economy can regard a public debt as a public blessing, except to those who hold it; and pay as you go is as surely the philosopher's stone for a community, as for individuals. A great part of our debt was created for a patriotic purpose—though had there been more patriotism, there would have been less debt; but the comparatively modern passion for increasing corporation indebtedness of all sorts in time of peace, is becoming so common, so universal, that it would seem the burden thereby added to labor, must in time become unendurable and result in general disaster. Let us beware how we listen to any proposition for increase of our city debt, on any plea whatever; and seek rather to reduce it.

Fifty thousand dollars of new city bonds running fifteen years at 6 per cent. have recently been issued, to take up $30,000 due Feb. 1st, and others coming due. A mere exchange of old for new bonds might be no increase of debt, but as under the circumstances of the case, the new bonds could be negotiated for only from 91 1-8 to 95 per cent., there is no escape from the fact of addition to the debt equal to the deficiency below par, or increase in the interest rate.

The State tax for 1874 is laid at $19,804, a considerable reduction from last year. The County tax will be $21,879, which is a slight increase—but as the County debt is reported to have been reduced about forty thousand dollars during the past two years, a speedy and permanent reduction of this large tax may be hoped for.

THE NEW RAILROAD.

You are aware that city aid, so called, to a very large amount, has been granted to the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad, during the past two years, by the issue of bonds. By vote of the City Councils, July 18, 1872, under suspension of the rules, the Mayor was authorized to subscribe for three thousand shares of the stock of this road, in payment for which $300,000 of 6 per cent. twenty year bonds were issued. This whole amount of bonds was paid over to the Directors of the road, at par, for a certificate of stock in the same; but for some reason unknown to me, the shares have not yet been delivered to the city. The public interests would seem to demand that this should now be done. The bonds are said to have been disposed of by the road at a discount or commission of $27,000, which will doubtless be covered by the issue of sufficient stock in the road to represent the same.

Special legislation, assistance or exemption, is always a dangerous procedure; but whether there was in the instance of this road, sufficient reason for the departure of our staunch old city from her traditional policy of sure investments and legitimate expenditures of the public funds, is not now ours to inquire. It is our duty, however, to be sure that the city, in the heavy responsibility incurred in this matter, be made as secure from loss as possible; and to this end, the continuance of the committee of the late Board of Aldermen would seem advisable, to examine and report in relation to the details of construction, and all other matters in connection with the road. Seeing also, that the cities of Portsmouth and Dover have so great a pecuniary interest in the road, it would seem but reasonable that they should through their city officers be proportionately represented in the directorship of the road. Of course all earnestly desire the success of the road, and hope the best results from it; and you will doubtless aid and countenance the managers in any project for its prosperity and advancement, consistent with the public interest.

By the law allowing cities to aid railroads, this city will be required next year, in 1875, and annually thereafter, to raise by taxation, ("in addition to the interest," if that should not be paid otherwise,) a sum equal to three per cent. of the amount of the loan, or $9000. The interest on these bonds is said to be guaranteed by the Eastern Railroad, in consideration of the lease of the new road to them; but I find no copy of any such lease or guaranty on file or record at the city clerk's office. The first six months' interest coupons on all these bonds have been cancelled and delivered to the city clerk; and the treasurer of the Portsmouth & Dover road states that the second coupons, due Jan. 1st 1874, are also nearly all in his possession, and will all be returned very shortly.

With the great increase of railroad business in the city, the subject of further provision for the safe accommodation of the public, is commended to your attention. A railroad crossing highways at grade, especially in a city, is always a dangerous nuisance, and should be abated as much as possible by gates and watchmen.

STREETS AND AVENUES.

The making and preservation of good streets is expensive business, and has long taxed the best engineering talent. Our streets and especially our sidewalks, are better than those of most cities of our size, and are constantly improving. But it is vain to ask or expect this to be done, without considerable outlay of money. The stone-crusher is doing a good and permanent work, but cannot be run without heavy cost. In estimating the expenses for good streets, the saving of time and the wear and tear of teams thereby for the public, is an important item which should ever be, but rarely is taken into consideration.

A large and increasing number of summer visitors annually congregate in this vicinity, and their accommodation is becoming worthy of consideration. Our chief thoroughfare for such, as well as for our own citizens, for walking or riding.—Richards Avenue, is in a wretched condition, for lack of drainage and grading, and the fences are disgracefully dilapidated and unsightly. The executors of the will of the late Mrs. Cutts, state that arrangements are nearly complete for the commencement of the improvements upon this Avenue, for which she made a liberal bequest, and in accomplishing which our co-operation is desired, and doubtless will readily be granted.

Hon. John Elwyn a few years ago conveyed to trustees for public use forever, a beautiful tract of land lying between the South Mill pond and South street, of which a fine mall or common could be made or begun, with a bridge leading across the pond or marginal road around it. I am informed that the trustees are ready to cooperate with the city in furtherance of this object. Many citizens, and former residents, have expressed their desire to contribute for such an object; and it might be well to consider the advisability of making a small appropriation for it, conditional on such private subscriptions.

In this connection also, the gradual filling in of both the North and South Mill ponds, is to be regretted and deprecated. Besides the beauty and attractiveness of these two little natural bays of free flowing tide and salt water, direct from the ocean, as they could easily be kept wellby management of gates; their influence on the health and comfort of the city, if clean and pure, is not to be lightly esteemed; neither is their value as reservoirs for the supply of the Fire Department in certain contingencies.

The law allows appropriations to be made for the planting of shade and ornamental trees at the roadside; and perhaps the public utility as well as beauty might be promoted by the city paying a portion of such expenses, as in the case of sidewalks, gas lights, &c.

It is the duty of every patriotic citizen, as well as officials, to see that the public suffers no detriment in matters of neatness or safety; and as no citizen can offend in this regard without mutual injury to himself and the community, so none can improve his own premises without also benefitting the public—and to this latter public-spirited class, all due encouragement should be extended, as to any business enterprise beneficial to the community.

PAUPERISM.

The care of the poor,—whom we have had with us during the past winter in larger numbers than usual—is always a subject for the tenderest consideration, but requiring sense as well as sentiment in the treatment. The cost of supporting our city paupers at the Almshouse last year, is stated in round numbers at $10,500, including all the income of the Farm; with outside aid to paupers in the city off the farm, to the amount of $3200 more, besides nearly $2000 paid in the city to County paupers. This is a very large aggregate, and it would seem that the out-door expenses at least could be materially reduced without hardship to any.

With the excellent accommodations provided both for the City and County poor, at the respective Farms, the best as well as most economical place for their support, with very few exceptions, is at these institutions; and all thoughtful men who have had experience in the care of the poor, agree that out-door aid should as a rule be granted only temporarily in case of sickness or accident, etc.; for the knowledge that such aid can be had for the asking, tends directly to improvidence and beggary. All who are accustomed to visit either the City or County Almshouses, know that both are well conducted, with liberality and humanity, and that the unfortunate inmates, with few exceptions, find in either a far better and happier home than they ever enjoyed before.—The care of tramps is becoming an expensive and important matter, nearly nine hundred having been accommodated with lodgings and meals in this city last year. And the evil seems to grow all over the land.

CITY FARM.

The opinion has for years been entertained by those best qualified to judge, that the public interest would be promoted by selling a portion of the land of the City Farm—that on the west side of the Creek road,—and the cost of supporting the poor be thereby lowered, without in the least curtailing the accommodations. The land would thus assist in paying taxes, instead of helping to increase them; as since the building of the County House, and the removal of the County paupers, is probably the case.

SCHOOLS, FIRE DEPARTMENT, POLICE.

Of the management of the Schools,—which except in the matter of furnishing funds and providing suitable buildings, etc., is by law placed practically beyond our control—many of you are more cognizant than myself. Judicious liberality is the truest economy in this as all other public affairs. The best schools, and the most healthful, convenient and attractive schoolhouses, are cheapest in the end, yielding the happiest results.

Our Fire Department is among the best of its size; and the public will sustain us in aiding and encouraging it in all endeavors to improve itself and protect the city. The salt water reservoirs have worked well, and probably might be increased to advantage.

Our Police Department also have always seemed desirous and capable of performing the arduous and disagreeable duties devolving upon them; and they should have the countenance and encouragement of all good citizens, as against evil doers. For while it is true that the laws of a free people will usually be better than the average citizens, it is vain to expect the execution of any law not sustained by the community.

OUR WATER SUPPLY

is perhaps generally deemed insufficient for our present and prospective needs, especially for use at fires. The old Portsmouth Aqueduct Company has long done excellent service in furnishing a supply of the purest water,—amply sufficient up to a comparatively recent date,—at a very low price to citizens, compared with any other city with which I am acquainted, and voluntarily granted without charge to the city for fires and other public uses. It is to be hoped that satisfactory arrangements can be made for its continuance and abundant increase, from the same source, of which those competent to judge entertain no doubt. The subject demands your early and earnest attention.

HISTORICAL.

Thus briefly, gentlemen, in suggestions as to the living present. But the dead past with its practical lessons and historical connections, is not without value to all, and should not be devoid of interest to any. A law of the State permits towns to print their histories; and several, including Dover, have done or are doing this. No town in the State, and but few in the county, have a record more honorable and interesting than old Portsmouth; and your consideration of such a publication here, is recommended.

CONCLUSION.

In concluding, let me express the hope that we shall all, in whatever capacity, harmoniously co-operate for the public welfare, and that only, to the best of our ability. So shall we prove ourselves fit for the trust reposed in us, and worthy to take place with the long line of our honorable predecessors. Most of you are already well acquainted with your duties, having served in these or similar positions before; and with the single hint that, since honor is the only recompense for the performance of most of the public duties devolving upon us here, therefore every honorable man should be all the more prompt in attendance and faithful in serving.—I await your pleasure.

Mayor Miller's Inaugural

Is a plain, practical, common-sense document suited to the occasion, and was listened to with attention and very generally commended by the citizens of both parties present at its delivery, many affirming that it had no superior among its predecessors. On perusing it many citizens will learn for the first time that such an important matter as the surrender of $300,000 to the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad has been so loosely conducted that the city is not yet in possession of one of the 3000 shares of stock to which it subscribed and paid for more than a year ago. Those having the matter in hand seem to have failed to provide the surest safeguard against loss, trusting more to the honor of the recipients of the money than they would to their most intimate friends, in business matters. Were such a course to be adopted in the simplest business transactions, the individuals responsible for such action would be deemed fit subjects for guardianship.

Following this revelation comes another, in the statement that although this city is supposed to own 3000 of the 6440 shares of stock in the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad, the sum of $300,000 having been appropriated on the condition that the bonds for that amount should be guaranteed by the Eastern Railroad, no copy of any such guarantee has been placed on file at the city clerk's office. The transaction which has resulted from negligence of the trust to which sworn officials should have been true, is seen to be one-sided. A certificate of stock may or may not be as valuable as the shares, but neglect to put the city in possession of every facility for governing its own property is inexcusable. To be sure, the coupons of the bonds have been paid as they have fallen due; but how is this to continue should the treasury of the P. & D. R. R. find it inconvenient to honor their presentation?

Our citizens will be pleased to learn that the executors of the will of the late Mrs. Cutts have nearly completed arrangements for carrying out her wishes in improving Richards Avenue. This oft-mooted subject has become so stale as to cause an effort of the mind to convince one's self that such action as is predicted is really intended. We hope that under Mayor Miller's administration, Richards Avenue may be improved without waiting for outside help, and that Hon. John Elwyn's generosity in conveying the tract of land between the pond and South street for public use, may be appreciated by the commencement of a mall, as the Mayor recommends.

One thing we look forward to with strong hope, viz., the reduction of the pauper expenses. Mayor Miller's two years' service as County Commissioner is valuable experience, and his position as chairman of that Board the ensuing year will enable him still farther to care for the city's interests. The gratifying fact that the county debt has been reduced $40,000 during the past two years leads us to hope that a corresponding economy in city matters will not only reduce the debt but the expenses as well. It is an undisputed fact that the expenses for the support of the poor are far too large, and there should be no excuse for these expenses exceeding pro rata those of the county farm. A portion of the City Farm should have been sold years ago, as recommended by Hon. Frank Jones. Had this been done the land, as Mayor Miller says, would have been assisting to pay taxes instead of helping to increase them.

The suggestion of a historical publication will meet the views of all who believe in preserving the knowledge of the events which have acquired for Portsmouth distinction. The question of securing an abundant water supply is the most important of many needed improvements, and we hope the Mayor and his associates of the City Council will not delay the solution of the difficulties which have thus far baffled their predecessors.

Portsmouth Vessel Ashore.

Schooner Fannie A. Bailey, Coombs, from Sagua for Portland with sugar, went ashore in Simonton's cove, near Fort Preble, Portland harbor, during the snow-storm of Monday morning. Steam-tug Tiger went to her assistance but failed to get her off, and during the day lighters went alongside to take out the cargo, most of which will be saved in good condition, as the vessel is not making much water; the lower tier only will be lost, it is thought. The schooner lies head on shore, with the stern afloat, and the fore shoe is knocked off; but no further damage is anticipated, nor any great trouble in floating her. She is owned by C. H. Mendum and others of this city, registers about 300 tons, and is valued at $15,000; the cargo is valued at $24,000.

Firemen's Election.

The Hook & Ladder and Extinguisher companies have chosen the following officers:

Garibaldi Hook & Ladder Co., No. 1,—Foreman, Samuel H. Kingsbury; 2d Foreman, John S. Rand; Clerk, Edward J. Moulton; Steward, Daniel S. Wendell. Samuel S. Fletcher was chosen to represent the company in the Firemen's Relief Association.

Extinguisher No. 5,—Foreman, Charles Abbott; 1st Asst., Edwin H. Leslie; Clerk, John W. Grey; Steward, Elbridge Prior; Pipeman, Warren Webster.

Extinguisher No. 6,—Foreman, Henry C. Walker; 1st Asst., John Moore; Clerk, Richard Waldron; Pipeman, George Stringer.

Laconics.

At the dedication services of the new Catholic church to-morrow morning at half-past ten the following musical home talent has been secured. Miss Franklin and Miss Hatch, sopranos, Miss Walsh and Mrs. Bennett, altos, Messrs Newell and Butler tenor, and W. N. Ilsley bass. Besides these, Miss Ellen Pharisee, an eminent soprano soloist of Boston, has been engaged for the occasion, and Harlow's orchestra will also contribute to the entertainment. Bishop Bacon of Portland, of this diocese, will preach the dedicatory sermon, and a large number of priests from different portions of New England will be present to assist in the ceremonies. Tickets will be for sale at two dollars each at the doors of the church.

A fine head of a child, painted by Miss Mary E. B. Miller of this city, is now on exhibition at Foster's book store.

Don't forget the concert by the Blind Band, at the Temple on the evening of Fast Day,—and don't put off securing your tickets till to-morrow, if you want good seats—go to Preston's to-day.

DIED.

HANSCOM. In Newcastle, April 1, Mrs. Fannie E. Hanscom, wife of Mr. Albert W. Hanscom, aged 28 years and 10 months. She lingered with throat and lung disease through many months, then saw April come and as that beautiful first day gathered evening's twilight as a mantel, she looked around and remarked: "Mother, is this death?" It was. With a smile on her countenance, life left her.

Dear as thou wast, and justly dear,
We will not weep for thee.
One thought shall check the starting tear:
It is, that thou art free. COM.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY. DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, in so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—A colored Mississippi legislator lately proposed a bill to make each member of the legislature, present and future, a bona fide attorney and counsellor at law. His reasoning was direct: "For," said he, "if we know enough to make de laws, why don't we know enough to practice um?" Sure enough, why not?

—The editor of an Indiana paper got married and his bride was so lovely that the minister handed her the five dollars he had received for tying the knot, expressing a desire that she purchase a Bible with the money. As a result they had a livelier time than they expected, for they went to work with the five dollars and a two dollar fiddler, and dressed down the floor in fine style. As a consequence they got lively and the groom got seven dollars for the minister, which he made him take, and the fiddler two dollars more in advance, to say nothing of extra corn-juice.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY DROPSY AND RUMORS.
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes The Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

Wearing Pantalettes Again.

The St. Louis Republican has a lady correspondent in New York who talks like one who "knows the ropes." Here is a specimen of her style: Hamlet never dreamed of a surcoat so crusted with jet as we shall sport this spring. Jet fringes, laces loaded with tiny jet beads, silk breaking down with their glittering masses of embroidery. Next to spangles, jet is the showiest ornamentation, and spangles will come with the fall, I fully believe. Then we have low-cut shoes, with fancy stockings, and oh! another sweet thing, pantalettes. You can show 'em in the spring; there's so many muddy places. They must be wide, elaborately trimmed with lace frills and embroidery, and reach the ankle. They are touching, and when worn with thin and queer foot handles, very becoming. To be sure the irreverent youth who enjoyed the privilege of taking me to the Charity ball beheld these pantalettes for the first time beneath the raised train of a belle. I was too late to interfere. He rushed forward, and in the most mysterious manner whispered her she was "losing 'em off." No words can describe the look she rewarded him with. Poor dear, he fell back discomfitted, and let two or three couples pass him, when he exclaimed, "Why, they are all losing 'em off," and that's the effect of the new pantalettes.

How One Woman Kept Her Husband.

There is a profound philosophy in Saxe Holm's little story of "How One Woman Kept Her Husband" worthy of consideration by every woman who hopes (and what good woman does not?) to reform or influence any man.

The tale runs thus: Mrs. John Gray was a faithful, affectionate, but rather undemonstrative wife. John Gray was an easy, good-natured man, a kind husband, a fond father of five children. Into the contented, perhaps prosaic, atmosphere of this family-circle came one of Mrs. Gray's early friends, Emma Long, now a beautiful widow, a brilliant, ardent, impulsive woman, the direct opposite of the quiet, self-contained mother of the household. The contact of her magnetic presence awoke in John Gray feelings of which he had not hitherto dreamed. A new existence opened before him,—a communion of heart in Poetry, Music, Art, which, by its very novelty, entranced and intoxicated him. In short, he became infatuated with Emma Long, and she with him. Not clandestinely, because there was no need of secrecy, since Mrs. Gray shared, to all appearance, her husband's admiration for their common friend, but undisguisedly and confessedly. Mrs. Gray not only put no barriers to their intimacy, but even afforded facilities for it under her own roof, repeatedly inviting Mrs. Long to the house, and, as if by accident, leaving her and Mr. Gray to enjoy each other's society undisturbed. In fact, she behaved, in every respect, as if this mutual interest were perfectly natural and proper, in no way compromising their reputation or affecting her position as a wife.

People durst not hint to her a suspicion of danger, so unconscious did she seem. Not even her own sister ventured to broach the subject; and all agreed that Mrs. Gray was stolid, if not heartless. But Mrs. Gray suddenly fell ill, and, in a crisis of affairs, confided to her old family-physician and to her sister the truth that she was wasting away with hidden anxiety and distress. She had known everything, but she had resolved to betray to her husband by no sign that she suspected him of a wrong to her. Once to discover her jealousy would be, she felt sure, to transform the frank, outspoken admiration into a consuming clandestine passion. To attack him with reproaches and tears would be to irritate, to exasperate, perhaps to alienate him forever; to ruin him, her friend, and her family; to make them all a scandal and a by-word. Moreover, she believed in her husband's love for herself. She knew she was a better wife to him than the brilliant Emma Long would have been; and she felt that he knew it, if he could but be made to realize it. She believed in his love for his children, also; and she was confident her husband could stand the test of the fiery ordeal if only she could keep up a brave heart, and suffer, and pray, and smile on, in silence. But nature was giving way. She could not trust herself much longer. She must go away, lest she should be too sorely tempted, and must leave her husband for a time, although to do it cost her agony. She persuaded her physician—who could conscientiously enough say it—to advise Mr. Gray that his wife's health required change of climate. Taking her young children, she left Alice, the eldest, to be her father's companion "in mamma's place," her aunt to keep the house, and the sister in whom she had confided to play her own former part in society, by [illegible] countenance to Mr. Gray's intimacy [illegible] Mrs. Long, and redeeming it [illegible] charge of secrecy, or any [illegible] danger of illicit companionship [illegible]

But, though absent in body [illegible] the breadth of the ocean [illegible] close to her husband in [illegible] ever come before. [illegible] breathed a tender [illegible] never before found voice; [illegible] in notes left behind [illegible] Alice "to [illegible] various [illegible] now beside [illegible] breakfast [illegible] in New [illegible] in these [illegible] extraordinary [illegible] years [illegible] central park [illegible] in some places are [illegible] stretch away for [illegible] from which the rays of [illegible] almost unendurable [illegible] there to [illegible] the rain [illegible] and [illegible] the whole [illegible] years [illegible] About [illegible] his dressing-table at night; unexpected surprises, mementoes, journals, diaries, without number,—all assuring him of the constant affection of his wife, and his children's loving remembrances of their father,—surrounded and enveloped him in an atmosphere of love. Then, too, he found out and took pride in his wife's wonderful talent for letter-writing,—so graceful, so piquant, yet, withal, so tender and true. He learned to look forward with eager longing for those precious letters, and trembled with a sudden shudder when the doctor, with wise craft, hinted at the possibility of a sad separation whose solitude no mutual missives could cheer,—not thinking it necessary to spare the man any present pang which might bring future joy.

So, in the dawning realization of the treasure which was his, and in dread of losing it, John Gray ceased to compare his wife unfavorably with Mrs. Long; indeed, he began to reverse the order of his mental operations, and to contrast the bewildering, dazzling intoxication of the beautiful widow with the calm, heaven-breathing spirit of his wife's serenity. In some mysterious way, he hardly knew how, he awoke to a consciousness of what had been his danger, and the brink on which he and Emma Long had been standing. He was saved,—lured from the dizzy depths into which he might have dragged down an innocent if indiscreet woman, back to the safe, and sure, and satisfying paths of steady, true, pure, home love and trust. The strong, uncomplaining affection of John Gray's wife had "kept her husband."

Full returns from Connecticut give Ingersoll, democrat, 46,784 votes for Governor, Harrison, republican, 40,042, Smith prohibitionist, 4826, scattering 19. Ingersoll's majority 1897. His majority last year was 3347. The House will consist of 140 democrats, 93 republicans and 3 independents, insuring the election of a democratic U. S. Senator.

News is received of the sinking of the French Transatlantic company's steamer Europe while on her last voyage from Havre to New York. The passengers and crew were rescued by the National Line steamer Greece, the first officer of which remained on board the unfortunate vessel in the hopes of saving her, but was obliged to abandon her, and with the crew was rescued by the steamer Egypt and brought to New York.

In the United States senate, Tuesday, an unfavorable report was received from the finance committee on the bill for the resumption of specie payment and for free banking.

Mrs. Mary C. Leach of Needham met a sudden death at the house of Frank L. Clapp, Margin street, Salem, Mass., about eight o'clock Tuesday evening. She was in the kitchen when a kerosene lamp exploded, setting fire to her clothes. An alarm of fire was raised, and on arrival of the firemen the door was burst open, and Mrs. Leach found dead on the floor, the clothes and flesh burnt off.

At Cambridge, Mass., Tuesday morning, Margaret Merrick, a widow, 49 years old, and Isabella White, a girl of thirteen, were stifled by smoke. The elder woman had been confined to her bed for the past two weeks with rheumatic fever, and was scarcely able to move. When found by the firemen who first entered the room, she was upon the floor at the side of the bed, dead. The girl was found lying upon a trunk near the door. The bodies were not at all burned or even scorched, and both must have died almost immediately from asphyxia.

It is reported that all the property of the Narragansett Steamship Company has been made over to the Old Colony Railroad Company.

The board of engineers appointed by Congress to report on the practicability of uniting the waters of the James and Ohio Rivers have reported favorably on the project, and estimate the cost as within $55,000,000.

Some of the papers which denounced President Grant for appointing Simmons to the Boston Collectorship, and threatened to have no more confidence in him thereafter, are now imploring him to veto the inflation bill should it pass the House. We hope the President will veto the bill very speedily—but what a pitiful plight the anti-administrationists are in! Gen. Butler told them there were financial schemes worthy the attention of the merchants of Boston; but at that time they thought the blue-blood ...n of more importance.

Flock-Marker.

[Manchester Mirror.]

None of the many slates which have been made up by the democratic managers for use in June contain the name of any one as flock marker, and lest this matter be forgotten, we feel constrained to suggest to the democratic council, which has been called to meet soon and "fix things," that such an officer will be necessary, and should be chosen at once. In 1871 the democratic representatives were numbered, booked, and marked, very much after the fashion in which prominent breeders mark their sheep, and the same thing should be done this season lest some of them get mixed with the republicans or dart out of the flock and have to be run down by dogs.

Bingham did the marking in '71, and did it very well, though, as we recollect it, the marks he put on at least one Senator did not prove "fast colors." But he is probably not a candidate for re-election, and a new man will have to be selected.

While we are about it, we may as well suggest that the methods of marking flocks have been greatly improved of late, and while L. O. (Local Option) or P. (Prohibition) painted in bright colors upon the forehead of every democratic representative will perhaps serve every purpose, still a better way would be to punch their ears and insert a tin tag with the number to which each one is to answer stamped upon it.

With a good punch and plenty of tin we should think an expert marker might tag the whole democratic delegation in three days, and if the tags be of proper size, say about 7x9, they will be ornamental as well as useful.

The "Plymouth Rock's" Programme.

The Nautical Gazette says it is the purpose of the Narragansett S. S. Co. to run the matchless saloon steamer "Plymouth Rock," the coming season, as a special excursion boat to various ports and places on the coast, for under existing arrangements she will not go on the Long Branch route. She will commence at Washington and run to Acquia Creek for one week; thence to Baltimore, and for ten days will make excursions to Annapolis and to Havre de Grace; then she will go to Philadelphia, where she will consume about two weeks in excursions down the Delaware, stopping at Chester, Wilmington and Salem en route to Cape May. Next she will visit New York, where she will remain three weeks, being employed in excursions on the Bay, up the Hudson, and out upon the Atlantic Ocean. After this she goes to New Haven, where she will make two excursions; thence to New London, making two more; thence to Providence, Newport and Fall River; then to Boston and vicinity, where she will remain two or three weeks; she will then visit Portsmouth, and on leaving here will go to Portland, Me., and probably as far east as Bangor, and even may extend her visits to St. John, N. B. Gilmore's 22d regiment band, with Gilmore as leader, will accompany her, and what between the boat herself, and her famous restaurant, a la carte, she will doubtless reap a rich harvest, and delight the tens of thousands who will avail themselves of the attractions thus offered. She will be officered and manned by a superior class of men, and nothing will be spared to gain for her abroad the popularity she has earned at home.

The news spread over the city, and was received everywhere with surprise, because nobody had thought that the women would have moral courage to make a raid on this high-toned resort.

—At a Dubuque wedding, among the presents ostentatiously displayed was a one-hundred dollar bill, a present from the doating father to his darling daughter. After the guests had departed the old man coolly rolled up the bill and put it in his vest pocket, and that was the end of it.

—History has once more repeated itself. John Smith's life was again saved by poker-hunters in Nevada the other day, for when a big bear jumped upon him his two companions ran for a couple of those necessary adjuncts of the kitchen grate, and so belabored the brute that he beat a hasty retreat.

On the lover's birthday Kate bought a nice gilt-edged box of perfumery for a gift, and put into it "The contents are as delicate and innocent as your love!" Poverty o the Blood.

If the blood be thin and watery the whole system is impoverished. The flesh is flabby, the muscles lack hardness, the nerves are relaxed, the internal organs but imperfectly perform their functions, the brain is inert, and, in short, the entire body is only half alive. The stomach is mainly responsible for this wretched condition of the human machine. Stimulate and tone that organ with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and a marked change for the better will soon be apparent. The result of improving the digestion with this potent and genial tonic will be the conversion of the food into rich, pure blood, and as the blood is the raw material from which flesh, muscle, brain, bone, and every membrane, tissue and ligament of the body are manufactured, all those components of the material frame will be gradually regenerated and invigorated. This is sound doctrine, and it is sustained by the logic of facts.

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life tormented out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S CORP. EXT OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

The Road to Health.

Cleanse the stomach, bowels and blood from all the acrid, corrupt and offensive accumulations which produce functional derangement, and you remove the cause of most disease which afflict the human family, and thus save large doctors' bills. No cheap wood or paper boxes, but kept fresh and reliable in vials. 25 cents, by Druggists. 7i8

Heimbold's Buchu. The only reliable medicine for diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs. A perfect diuretic, the long-continued use of which by the people of this country for the last twelve years has fully established its reputation as the best remedy for these diseases known.

It is one of the few medicines that have stood the test of time. It has true and genuine merit. Beware of counterfeits. The genuine has Heimbold's private proprietary stamp. For sale by all druggists.

Sufferers with PILES should erect a monument to Dr. Silsbee for his beneficent discovery of ANAKESIS, an infallible cure for the worst cases of piles—a failure in 20,000 cases has not been recorded. Lotions, ointments and internal remedies may fail, but ANAKESIS is infallible.—Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. Principal Depot, 46 Walker St., New York.

VALUABLE INFORMATION.

BOSTON, Dec. 12, 1869.

Gentlemen—My only object in giving you this testimonial is to spread valuable information. Having been badly afflicted with Salt Rheum, and the whole surface of my skin being covered with pimples and eruptions, many of which caused me great pain and annoyance, and knowing it to be a blood disease, I took many of the advertised blood preparations, among which was any quantity of Sarsaparilla, without obtaining any benefit, until I commenced taking the VEGETINE; and before I had completed the first bottle, I saw that I had got the right medicine. Consequently I followed on with it until I had taken seven bottles, when I was pronounced a well man, and my skin is smooth and entirely free from pimples and eruptions. I have never recovered my health before, and I attribute it all to the use of VEGETINE. To benefit those afflicted with Rheumatism, I will make mention also of the VEGETINE'S wonderful power of curing me of this acute complaint, of which I have suffered so intensely.

HAS ENTIRELY CURED ME.

BOSTON, October, 1870.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—My Daughter after having a severe attack of Whooping Cough, was left in a feeble state of health; being advised by a friend, she tried the VEGETINE, and after using a few bottles was fully restored to health.

I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism. I have taken several bottles of the VEGETINE for this complaint, and am happy to say it has entirely cured me. I have recommended the VEGETINE to others, with the same good results. It is a great cleanser and purifier of the blood; it is pleasant to take; and I can cheerfully recommend it.

CHARLESTOWN, October, 1870.

This certifies that my daughter has always been troubled with a humor, which has caused frequent swelling on her face and about her eyes. Physicians called it the Erysipelas; but after having taken two bottles of the VEGETINE, has not been troubled with it since. SIMON ALDRICH,

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore, Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Art Works.

At the annual Fair of the New Hampshire Agricultural Society, at Manchester in October last, the society—under the auspices of the Manchester Art Association—had an Art Exhibition in Music Hall, at which many beautiful and artistic pieces of work were displayed, and visited by thousands. Among the finest oil paintings exhibited were several by the celebrated artist, Mr. Ulysses D. Tenney, who on Monday received as a premium for the excellence of his work, a magnificent and elaborate silver medal from the Society, designed by Mr. H. W. Herrick, President of the Manchester Art Association. Mr. Tenney painted the portraits of Gov. John Langdon, Gen. Stark, Gen. Cilley, Gen Whipple, Gen. Scammel and Councillor Bacon, which are now in the State House at Concord; and he is now engaged on a full-length portrait of the late Hon. John P. Hale, (at the residence of Mr. J. Horace Kent, who is secretary of the Hale Memorial Fund,) also for the State House gallery. The latter picture will cost $500 when completed.

At Foster's book store is to seen a portrait of a child, painted by Miss Mary E. B. Miller, who has been profiting by the able instruction of Mr. Tenney. The likeness is excellent, and the picture a fine one.

Laconics.

Our citizens will be surprised to learn that at the republican caucus, Tuesday evening, Mr. Haven L. Scott, the efficient superintendent of the city farm, was not renominated. No reason is given for the change proposed. Mr. Philbrick, the nominee, filled the position acceptably several years ago, but resigned to accept the superintendency of the county farm. It seems to us that if any change is to be made, Mr. Benjamin Norton is entitled to the place.

The question of ratifying the contract between the Maine Central and Eastern railroads excited great interest in the stockholders of the latter road, judging from the crowd which went to Boston from this city—of course to vote on the question—on Wednesday. Conductor Dan Philbrick took out ten crowded cars, and two extra cars were put on the next train, which was also liberally patronized. The number of young lady stockholders in the Eastern is remarkable; they apparently largely outnumbering the male investors.

Religious services will be held at the Unitarian Church this (Fast Day) evening at half-past seven o'clock. The pastor will preach a sermon upon the subject, "whether honesty, knowledge, and religion are of any help in a government."

The Sportsmen's convention met at Manchester on the 7th, and organized by the choice of Col. John B. Clarke for President. Hon. Fred Smyth is Treasurer, and Marcellus Eldredge, Esq., of this city, is the Vice President for Rockingham county. Capt. Eastman of Portsmouth is chairman of the committee on Bird Laws, and Mr. John S. Sides is chairman of the committee on Fur Bearing Animal Laws.

The Eastern Railroad meeting ratified the issue of $2,000,000 bonds, Wednesday.

Jurors are drawn as follows in Ward Two: David Dearborn, Grand; Capt. Chas. H. Rollins, Capt. E. G. Adams, William A. Vaughan, Sylvester, Petit.

The Narragansett Steam Ship Company's magnificent saloon steamer "Plymouth Rock" is to be used as an excursion boat from various seaports during the coming summer, and this city is down on the programme as one of her places of call. Gilmore's band, led by Gilmore himself, will accompany her, and she will no doubt secure more than one large list of pleasure seekers from this city and surrounding towns, for ocean excursions. She is claimed to be as fine a vessel of her class as floats, and is certainly a "big thing" and fitted up like a palace.

The U. S. S. Mayflower, formerly stationed here as a relief steamer and now at Key West, has been ordered to resume her former duties at this station. She was sent away to smash Cuba on account of the Virginius affair.

The debris of the building at the corner of Congress and Chestnut streets is being hauled away. After six o'clock P. M., a day or two ago, a teamster mounted a load to drive off, anticipating probably that his lively appetite would soon be satisfied. His team had two pairs of wheels, the burnt timbers being piled the entire length. In his haste, however, he had neglected to fasten the before part to the behind section. The horse started at the crack of the whip. So did the fore wheels. The driver imagined there was an earthquake as these wheels departed from under the heavy load. There was no gnashing of teeth, only a series of moans as the mud spluttered forth from the mouth of the driver.

The promenade concert and ball by Kearsarge S. F. E. Co., No. 3, comes off at Congress Hall this evening and will doubtless be largely attended. Harlow's full band will play a number of choice selections, among them "Mulligan's Guards," a new piece; and supper will be served at 9 o'clock, free. Dancing commences at 11 o'clock.

The NEW HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE for this week contains twelve columns of local matter.

Fast Day—no CHRONICLE to-morrow.

Prof. Gunning's Lecture,

Tuesday evening, (on prehistoric man,) was even more interesting than those which preceded it. It commenced with the statement that a few months ago Mr. Berthoud, of Philadelphia, found flint knives and arrow-heads in Colorado, associated with fossil sea-shells of the period called "later tentiary." This discovery puts the question of man's antiquity in a new light. This question, the speaker said, came into Geology through the door of history and language. Egypt, as Burnson and Humbolt have shown, was out in the full light of history 5700 years ago. China, as Ramusat has shown, was an Empire 4200 years ago.

Usher was a bishop, not a Bible, and his chronology was not inspired arithmetic. The Duke of Argyle had said that in the name of Christianity he would welcome every argument which science could bring for a great antiquity of the race. Beyond the horizon-line where history meets fable, the study of language will take us; beyond the horizon-line where fable melts away into night, symbolism will take us; beyond —into the night—geology will take us. The speaker would feel his way back through methods which are quasi-geologic into geology proper. Back of Egyptian civilization was a state of barbarism. Among the Chinese, marriage is interdicted between persons of the same sur-name. Remusat had shown that Chinese sur-names were once tribal names and the speaker showed how this interdiction of marriage rose from the primitive tribe-custom of wife capture.

What were our ancestors before the age of fable? By methods the same in kind as those employed in reconstructing the prehistoric Egyptian and Chinaman, the speaker sketched the Aryans, an Asiatic people who died before history was born. From that ancient people our own blood is derived. He showed that their ancestors must have been savages. By delineations on the black-board the lecturer presented the systems of kinship of the leading branches of the race. These systems pointed to the conclusion that waves of migration carries man as a homeless, tribeless, incestuous savage from the Indian archipelago eastward to Africa, and far westward to Hawaii; that in later times other waves of migration carried man, organized into tribes and forbidding incest, from India to America; that in times still later, waves of migration carried man, organized into confederacies, incipient nations, into Europe.

These methods had taken us far back into a night of barbarism. Can we look beyond? We must appeal to geology proper. Our space will not allow us to follow this part of the lecture which was illustrated by the chalk. The conclusions reached were that man was in Europe at the close of the last glacial epoch, that he was in Brazil 21,000 years ago and that he was on the Pacific coast of North America before the glacial epoch.

This Glacial Epoch will form the subject of the next lecture, on Tuesday evening of next week.

The primary and intermediate schools opened April 7, Miss Ida Locke in the primary, and Miss Lizzie White in the intermediate. The grammar department desired to keep Mr. Wade during the coming year, but increase of salary could not overcome a certain "proviso" that was placed over him. He therefore leaves us April 20, to become the pastor of the First Christian society at Trumbull Corners, N. Y.

Mr. Santhoff is again here, looking up fortification matters.

Mrs. Ann Bickford, aged 73, and Mrs. Fannie Hanscom, aged 28 years and 10 months, were buried April 4. This is the third time we have had death with us this year. The first was John B. Yeaton, truly one of the martyred dead for the Union. He served in the regular and volunteer army through a score and a half of engagements, then gave up his life from disease (consumption) contracted there.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

A Hard Hearted Villain.

An incident occurred at the State Fair grounds, between Troy and Albany, last fall, which the Troy Times is the first to publish.

A police force was placed about the grounds to prevent people from scaling the fences, thereby depriving the Agricultural Society of the price of admission. The second day of the fair a policeman arrested a man in the act of clandestinely obtaining admittance to the fair grounds. The prisoner was brought before Justice Grattan, who, by the by, is one of the most whole-souled Irishmen in West Troy.

The Justice was sitting in his office, when the policeman entered with the prisoner in charge.

"Your Honor," said the officer, "I have a man whom I arrested in trying to scale the fair-ground fence."

"Stand up, sir!" said His Honor to the prisoner, in the usual magisterial dignity. "What was you trying to stale in for, ye villain?"

Prisoner—Please your Honor—

"Hould your tongue," said His Honor, bringing his fist down upon the table with a heavy thud. "Mr. Officer, state to the Coort what a diabolical act the villainous rascal was engaged in when you nabbed him."

Officer—May it please the Court, I was on the north inside fence of the fair ground by a tree. I observed the prisoner skulking about outside, and I thought he meant mischief of some kind. I stood behind the tree when the villain, not seeing me, jumped the fence. I immediately collared him and brought him before you, your Honor. That's the man.

Justice—Ye hard-hearted monster, you. Ain't you ashamed to be robbing a poor Agricultural Society, ye villain! The Coort fines you $5 or five days, and may the Lord have mercy on your soul.

Prisoner—But, your Honor—

Justice—Not a word—yees pays the fines or yees goes to jail.

Prisoner—But, your Honor, I haven't only $50 which my poor mother gave me to pay a note with to-day. You wouldn't take that from me when, if the note is not paid, my old mother will be sued to-day?

Justice—You're heard the sentence of the Coort. Unless you pay you goes to jail for five days.

Prisoner—Listen, your Honor—

Justice—Mr. Officer, this Coort is adjourned; take charge of the prisoner, and unless he pays in five minutes "jug" him.

The prisoner, seeing that the Court was inexorable, pulled up his right trowsers-leg and drew out a piece of paper from his boot, which, after unrolling, was found to contain a $50 greenback. He passed it to the Justice, who returned him $45 in change. The Justice placed the greenback in his wallet, and the officer and prisoner withdrew.

The next day the Squire went to the bank to deposit, when the cashier politely informed him that the $50 greenback was a counterfeit.

It immediately occurred to his Honor that the bogus officer and prisoner were "dirty swindlers."

Since that time the bare mention of "$5 or five days" in Justice Grattan's hearing subjects the audacious man who dares utter it to a fine for contempt of court.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes The Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

Daily Chronicle.

Jay Gould Captures the Union Pacific.

[New York Cor. Chicago Journal.]

The talk on 'Change now is that Jay Gould for months past has been planning to get possession of a through line of railroads to the Pacific Coast; that having acquired vast wealth he now aims to consummate some really commendable scheme which shall improve his reputation; to link his name with some national undertaking which shall give his children at least a better social position than he enjoys. Accordingly he has virtually secured the control of the Union Pacific stock; undertaken a colossal scheme for depressing the price of Erie, with a view to buying it in at lower figures, and will soon have possession of the remaining links in the chain, thus securing what Vanderbilt failed, after vigorous efforts to acquire—a through route from ocean to ocean. Whether or not this is Gould's design appearances certainly point to it, and the secresy with which he has worked would also argue that he had extensive plans on foot.

For example, it only came out a few days before the annual election that he was aiming at the possession of the Union Pacific Road. Thousands and thousands of shares had been changing hands day after day, but it did not seem to occur to any one that Jay Gould was the moving spirit in the pool, so successfully did he cover his tracks. Just here I may state a fact not known to the public, and of considerable interest to your Western readers. When the Union Pacific stockholders assembled in Boston for the annual election a few days ago, the Morton-Rollins Boston party found that Jay Gould was on hand in force prepared to take possession of all the offices from President down. He had his men all selected. Thereupon the Morton party held a caucus and decided, in the event of Gould's sweeping the election, to sell their stock at once. They proceeded to tell him that if he carried out his programme they should immediately throw 121,000 shares of the stock upon the market. This, of course, was more than he could stand, inasmuch as it would break the market and largely depreciate the value of his own stock. He accordingly consented that the Morton party should re-elect Rollins, the Treasurer, and have a majority of one in the Board of Directors for the ensuing year, which programme was carried out.

With all his vices, Gould has one virtue which is worthy of mention. He stands by those who stand by him. When the present Erie managers were endeavoring to serve an injunction upon him two years ago at the Opera House, and he glided from room to room, first locking one door and then another, the officers by a ruse headed him off, and were just about reaching him. Suddenly, however, a telegraph operator rushed in and thwarted them. For this act of "loyalty" when everybody was turning against him in the Erie office, Gould made the boy superintendent of his private lines, and also gave his younger brother a handsome position. I say his private lines. The basement of his house is a sort of telegraph office, from whence wires extend to various parts of the city.

The men whom he has put in the Union Pacific directory are all proteges of his, persons poor once, but made rich by him, like Osborn and Chapin, for instance. To be sure they have had to be his object tools, but in return for their loyalty the great rail robber has secured them princely fortunes. Gould to-day has more ready cash than any other manipulator on the street. He is more feared, and has more influence in determining the course of the market than any other magnate. For a year past everything of more than an ordinary character on 'Change has been attributed to his machinations, just as it used to be attributed to Vanderbilt. There was an attempt made at first to prove that he and his satellites had brought on the September panic. Upon the discovery, however, that he was among the losers, the idea that Gould had "put up the job" was abandoned.

The Drawback of Flintlocks.

[John in N. Y. Sun.]

We carried flint-lock muskets, and the manual contained such orders as "open pan, prime, shut pan," etc. Tell a seventh regiment fellow to-day to shut pan, he'd take it to mean stop conversing, and knock you down. It was obnoxious to go a gunning for game in those days. I used to start with powder enough to fill a coal scuttle and send an ox team on ahead with the wads, and when I sighted a bird, size thirteen to the ounce, I'd ground one end of my gun and pour a dipper full of powder in each barrel, then ram a whole Journal of Commerce into one hole, and two or three Heralds into the other; then pour in a couple of quarts of shot, spank the barrels to spank 'em down; then put in a ream or two of paper to keep the shot from jumping out; then prime, and by the time I got ready to put the butt of the gun against a post and fire, I generally found the bird had succumbed to old age and died. When my gun went off the man at the helm always knew it, from an inclination almost irresistible to sit down and attend a nose-bleed picnic. I have fired a whole bushel of shot at a bird, and the bird would dodge'em, or if hit it would only raise its northeast leg and wink. I once shot at a blue jay. As I fired a boy stepped from behind the tree. I thought I'd killed him, but he walked up to me, his face looked as if he was coming down with the measles. He scratched his face and remarked "that gnats were plenty," and I said "yes" and went home. Times are changed since, and so are guns.

SATURDAY, APRIL 11, 1874.

The Massachusetts Senatorship.

On Thursday but one ballot took place in convention, resulting as follows: Dawes 91, Hoar 72, Curtis 74, Adams 15, Banks 7, Sanford 9, Washburn 4, Whittier 1. Telegrams from Washington occasioned much surprise and no little speculation, nobody seeming to know whether they were genuine or not, or, if genuine, what had led to them. One of them (to a Dawes man) read, "Dawes will withdraw. Concentrate on Hoar." It was reported that Dawes had been put at the head of the treasury department, but he telegraphed to an enquiring supporter that he knew nothing about the matter.

On Friday two ballots were taken, (no explanation of the mysterious telegrams of the day before having been made public,) resulting as follows:

Dawes	87	83
Hoar	69	66
Curtis	72	72
Adams	13	13
Banks	8	8
Bullock	7	12
Sanford	7	7

Frightened to Death

The temperance question is receiving a great deal of attention in East Douglas, Mass., at present. On Fast Day a union mass meeting was held, and a committee of ladies and gentlemen appointed to wait on the liquor dealers. On Saturday the ladies called at one of the principal saloons the proprietor, Mr. L Simpson, having refused to see the gentlemen, and were received very politely. He was asked if he thought it right to sell liquors, and responded, "Yes, as right as for grocers to sell groceries." One of the ladies then read several passages from the Bible, remarking, "Let us see what the Lord says." On hearing the Scriptures relating to the anger of the Lord with drunkards and those who sell liquor the proprietor turned pale, trembled violently and clutched the counter convulsively for support. The many loungers in the saloon were stupefied, and only offered assistance when urged by the ladies. On being led into another room he cried, several times, "O God! have mercy on my soul!" Immediately his tongue began swelling, filling his mouth to such an extent as to render it impossible to articulate. The ladies did all in their power to render him comfortable, and a physician was sent for, who, on arriving, pronounced it a case of apoplexy, and in a short time the man died. The community was of course startled with the news, and the feeling for Mr. Simpson is intense. The ladies all agreed that it was the direct work of the Lord, and even some of the frequenters of the saloon acquiesced in this decision.

Readables.

There was a stormy time in the House of Representatives, Friday, over the inflation question, the Speaker having to call the noisy fellows to order. A vote was reached, and stood 126 to 126, Mr. Blaine defeating the pending measure by his casting vote. This is better than we dared expect, though the inflationists are only checked, not totally defeated.

Two fishing-boats, containing four men each, were capsized in Lake Michigan on the 8th, and seven of the men were drowned.

William Clough, a New York "sporting man," fatally shot Doony Harris, a pugilist, in a bar-room fight on the 8th. The only sad feature of the affair is that Doony did not also shoot William.

A steam boiler exploded, in Glasglow, Scotland, on the 8th, and a portion fell through the roof of a schoolhouse, killing three children and wounding thirty.

The school committee fight at Portland, Me., has ended in the choice of a new board.

An organization to be known as "The National Union of Andersonville Survivors" was formed in Worcester, Mass., on the 8th.

The President has nominated Benjamin P. Avery of California as minister to China, in place of F. F. Low, resigned.

The Welland canal is open.

A despatch to the London Times from Calcutta reports that 500 natives have died from disease and starvation in Hatcoul. The mortality from the famine is sensibly abated by relief measures of the government.

Lowenstein was hanged at Albany, Friday afternoon.

Sealing steamer Tigress, famous from her connection with the Polaris affair, burst her boiler while seal fishing recently, killing twenty-two of her crew.

A Big Loss.

The value of the steamship Europe and her cargo was about $2,250,000; the vessel was insured for $600,000, and the cargo was probably nearly covered. It is announced that "the ship was lengthened (to 426 feet long) last year;" and that "the origin of the disaster is unknown." As she was ten times as long as she was broad,—in fact, a regular iron water-snake, like most of the ocean steamers of the present day,—we find no difficulty in accounting for her loss. A weak ship—too long to be strong,—and a heavy sea have sent many vessels and men to the bottom of the ocean, and will send many more there before marine architecture gets back to the point it had reached before iron coffins were invented.

State News.

Judge Upton has sued Manchester to recover $3500, which he claims is due him for fees.

There are over 600 cases on the docket of the supreme judicial court at its present session in Concord.

A military company to be called the City Guards has been organized at Concord.

The stockholders of the Great Falls Riding Park Association at their annual meeting chose the following board of directors: Thomas G. Jameson, S. S. Chick, E. Moulton, C. M. Jones and C. K. Drew. The treasurer's report shows the association in a flourishing condition. It was voted to join the national association.

In Great Falls a youth named David Burnham, alias Deacon, was found hid among some barrels, in a store on Market street, having entered the place with burglarious intentions. He was arrested and taken before the police court Tuesday afternoon, and remanded for a week, his bail being fixed at $800. He is believed to have been connected with some of the numerous burglaries that have taken place in Great Falls during the last six months, and it is believed that his arrest will break up a gang of thieves with which the place is infested.

From six inches to a foot of snow fell in the northern part of the State, Friday forenoon. Not bad for the 10th of April.

Weather Enough.

[Providence Journal.]

Without doubt the editor of the Pawtucket Gazette and Chronicle has got hold of the weather. It snows, and blows, and rains, and hails; there is rheumatism in every wind, and catarrh in the drizzly, soppy, chilly sky. The sun comes out occasionally, but viewing Pawtucket, and the cantankerous Chronicle, straightway hides himself in snow-flakes, or a black bank of wind-clouds in the northwest. We had snatched one small bouquet of the trailing arbutus; one solitary blue-bird had sung at our chamber window; the white birch wood for next winter's fire had been cut and left in the open air to dry, and now we are in the midst of a "spell" of weather which nothing short of the interference of the Chronicle could have rendered so utterly uncomfortable. We knew how it would be when, two weeks since, the Chronicle predicted that winter weather was over. We immediately ordered more coal. Why can't the Chronicle let the weather alone, as we do? It can't make it better anywhere, and in Pawtucket it can't make it any worse. There is slosh under foot; there is fog, there is sleet, and more snow coming, and the Chronicle thinks that there never was anything half so fine. And you just annexed, at that! If you don't improve, you shan't come into the city, and you shall have a Mayor. When we appoint him you will have a breeze to some purpose. Let go the weather!

—The Cascade Engine Company of Fall River, Mass., after a service of twenty-five years has been disbanded, the introduction of the water works having done away with the necessity for their organization.

—About twenty years ago a young Holyoke, Mass., man of twenty-two promised a dying friend, anxious for the welfare of his two-year-old daughter, who by his death was to be left an orphan, that he would watch over her until she became a woman, when he would make her his wife. The wedding occurs on Sunday.

—Colonel Judson (Ned Buntline) was sued in the superior court at Portland by one Speck, for defamation of character. When the "Scouts of the Prairie" was performed in that city, Judson had Speck arrested for larceny, but he was acquitted of the charge, hence the suit. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for $518.18.

—A young lady in San Francisco had been dancing with a partner who evidently pleased her, and, wishing generously to share the pleasure, she introduced him to another lady, thus: "Miss Jones, allow me to introduce you to Mr. Waltzer, a bully dancer, you bet! Why, he whizzed me round the room so that my feet never touched the ground, except when he quit his hold to take a new grab!"

—A cross-eyed man cast a gloom over a Detroit street-car by addressing one of the seven men and strangers on the opposite seat, if he "had any good tobacco handy." Then seven hands went pocketward, and upon observing this motion, each of the seven supposed his neighbor the one spoken to and the seven hands returned empty. The cross-eyed man cast a ricochet glance of indignation along the line, and then—, with the remark, "a sweet-scented lot of generous roosters," took a chew of his own tobacco.

"LINCOLN AND SEWARD;" by Gideon Welles, is the title of a neat volume published by Sheldon & Co. It gives a history of the acts and views of Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Seward, at the time when the country was in peril. Mr. Welles believes that Mr. Lincoln was himself the great central figure and controlling mind in his own administration, and that neither Mr. Seward, Mr. Chase, or any other of his able counselors was the "power behind the throne." He gives a minute account of what took place at the council board during some of the darkest hours of our country's history. The work is a valuable acquisition to the historical records of the country from 1861 to 1865. Mr. Welles writes feelingly and shows that Mr. Seward's capabilities for good were nearly counterbalanced by his intriguing and meddling capacities. Indeed, Montgomery Blair testifies in a letter which Mr. Welles publishes, that it was the scheming of Mr. Seward that caused the evacuation of Fort Sumter. Our flag there held Beauregard at Charleston. "When it fell he marched into Virginia and precipitated secession there. If we could have held Fort Sumter there never would have been a drop of blood shed. It was the coercion of Virginia into the confederacy by Beauregard's army that made the war." The work is one of great interest and should be in every library.

—The girls of Virginia City have taken to wearing single braids of hair dangling down their backs. The Chinese residents believe that the mode is intended as an imitation of pigtails, and are elated.

Poverty o the Blood.

If the blood be thin and watery the whole system is impoverished. The flesh is flabby, the muscles lack hardness, the nerves are relaxed, the internal organs but imperfectly perform their functions, the brain is inert, and, in short, the entire body is only half alive. The stomach is mainly responsible for this wretched condition of the human machine. Stimulate and tone that organ with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and a marked change for the better will soon be apparent. The result of improving the digestion with this potent and genial tonic will be the conversion of the food into rich, pure blood, and as the blood is the raw material from which flesh, muscle, brain, bone, and every membrane, tissue and ligament of the body are manufactured, all those components of the material frame will be gradually regenerated and invigorated. This is sound doctrine, and it is sustained by the logic of facts.

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

Helmbold's Buchu. The only reliable medicine for diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs. A perfect diuretic, the long-continued use of which by the people of this country for the last twelve years has fully established its reputation as the best remedy for these diseases known.

It is one of the few medicines that have stood the test of time. It has true and genuine merit. Beware of counterfeits. The genuine has Helmbold's private proprietary stamp. For sale by all druggists.

The "Housekeeper" of our Health.

The liver is the great depurating or blood cleansing organ of the system. Set the great housekeeper of our health at work, and the foul eruptions which gender in the blood and rot out, as it were, the machinery of life, are gradually expelled from the system. For this purpose Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is pre-eminently needed. It cures every kind of humor from the worst scrofula to the common pimple, blotch or eruption. Great eating ulcers kindly heal under its mighty curative influence. Virulent blood poisons that lurk in the system are by it robbed of their terrors, and by persevering and somewhat protracted use of it, the most tainted system may be completely renovated and built up anew. Enlarged glands, tumors and swellings dwindle away and disappear under the influence of this great resolvent. It is sold by all Druggists. 717

Sufferers with PILES should erect a monument to Dr. Silsbee for his beneficent discovery of ANAKESIS, an infallible cure for the worst cases of piles—a failure in 20,000 cases has not been recorded. It is a simple suppository, painless and easy of application, gives instant relief, acts as an instrument, soothing poultice and medicine, and can not fail to cure. Lotions, ointments and internal remedies may fail, but ANAKESIS is infallible.—Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. Principal Depot, 46 Walker St., New York.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1620 to '30; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's Island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the unbaimed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

An April Shower.

Since Expressman Burley has had charge of the weather, snow has fallen as he predicted, "thirty-four times or thereabouts." He is no winter-green—for didn't he predict forty-four snows large enough "to track a cat in" for the winter and spring of 1872-3, and didn't his prediction prove true by the fall of snow on the 12th of April, 1873? Now, just as the birds chirped and mankind felt spring-like, along came a furious northeaster on the 10th of April, 1874, and with it tons of snow. And hadn't snow shovels gone into winter quarters long since? Wherefore? Why wouldn't thirty-three snow storms have answered the purpose, William? And those cat-tracks were all over town, Thursday night, for every mother's daughter was out serenading 'neath the dim cloud-light when that cataract of fleece descended upon their arched backs. Forbear future predictions. Correctness twice is marvellous. The third time may floor ye.

Fast Day

Was not much to boast of, as to weather, the forenoon being cheerless and uncomfortable, though the afternoon and evening were more pleasant. There was divine service at the Methodist church in the forenoon, which was attended by a small congregation; and in the evening Rev. Mr. DeNormandie lectured in the Unitarian church, his remarks having especial reference to national affairs and not being particularly complimentary to the way in which some of those affairs have been conducted. The dedication of St. Mary's church (in the forenoon) is fully described in another place.

The day was generally quiet, as became the occasion, nearly all business being suspended, one line of trade only being brisk; we refer to the liquor trade, and base our opinion on the number of young men and boys to be seen on the streets under the influence of intoxicating drink. There were no serious disturbances, however, one or two trifling affairs in back streets being the sum total, so far as we have heard; and probably the young fellows were merely anticipating the good time coming, when free rum will be secured through the labors of the prohibition men.

In the evening, Kearsarge S. F. E. Co., No. 3, closed their course of assemblies with a "tea-party, promenade concert and ball" at Congress and Mechanics' halls, and had a crowd of patrons, as was anticipated. Harlow's full band played marches for an hour or so, in Congress Hall; then the people promenaded to Mechanics' Hall, where a bountiful supply of excellent viands was served; then there was more marching in Congress Hall, to music by the band, until 11 o'clock, when dancing commenced and was kept up until 3 o'clock Friday morning.

The Blind Band from the Perkins Institute gave their evening concert at the Temple, as advertised, and drew a larger audience than we had feared they would, considering the counter attractions, though not nearly so large as we had hoped to see and as the merit of their performances deserved. Notwithstanding their total deprivation of sight the bandsmen kept time wonderfully—much better than we have known done by bands of which every member could see a leader's baton; and a cornet solo, the "Anna polka," and solos for the piano, piccolo and flute, were skillfully rendered and deservedly applauded. Several comic and sentimental songs were finely sung; and as a whole the entertainment was excellent and gave great satisfaction to the audience, —the only drawback to their pleasure being the ever-present realization of the sad affliction of the performers.

Dedication of St. Mary's Church.

Fast Day was the occasion of the dedication of the new Catholic church of this city, an event of no small importance if we judge it by the overwhelming attendance of Protestants as well as Catholics. An hour before the time announced for the commencement of the services, the streets were alive with the tread of faithful worshippers wending their way to witness the consecration of their Mecca. The church was well warmed and ventilated, and the altar, (a full description of which has already been given) was profusely covered with flowers, which gave a most pleasing effect to this magnificent specimen of architecture.

The ceremonies were commenced by the procession of the clergy from the sacristy, Rev. Father Richer, of Suncook, being the cross-bearer on the occasion, on either side of whom were acolyths bearing lighted tapers. During this portion of the services, the walls were freely sprinkled with water, (the Bishop blessing them in the meantime) and incense was burned in a swinging censor. Throughout the tour of the procession down the left aisle, into the vestibule, and up the right aisle, the Psalm of David, known as the "Miserere," was sung; and when nearing the altar the chanting of the litany of the saints was performed,—the whole service being read by Father Dedibent, whose sonorous voice exceeded anything we ever heard in power and quality.

The officiating clergymen were as follows: Right Rev. D. W. Bacon, D. D., of the Diocese of Portland; Very Rev. Dr. Wallace, pastor of St. Michael's Church and Chancellor of the Diocese of Providence, R. I., Celebrant; Rev. Father Barry, of Concord, Deacon; Rev. Father Chevalier, pastor of the French church, Manchester, Subdeacon; Rev. Father Vitromilea, pastor of the church at Eastport, Maine, and Patriarch of the Indian Missions of New England, Master of Ceremonies; Very Rev. John O'Donnell, pastor of the church at Nashua, and Vicar General of the Diocese of Portland, officiated as Archdeacon, and Revs. Edward J. Cooney, pastor of the Immaculate Conception Church of Providence, R. I., and Father Pousardin, pastor of the French church at Biddeford, Me., were Deacons of Honor, assisting at the Bishop's throne. Rev. Father Brady, of St. Mary's Church, Biddeford, Rev. Father McGrath, O. M. I., pastor of St. John's Church, Lowell, Mass., Rev. Father Goodwin, of Laconia, Rev. Father Dedibent, O. M. I., of Lowell, Mass., Rev. Father Richer, pastor of the Suncook church, Very Rev. Canon Walsh, of the church in this city, and others whose names have fled from our memory, took part in the ceremony of consecration.

The choir, which was composed of the best home talent, supported by Harlow's orchestra and assisted by Mrs. Ellen Farracy, the soprano soloist of St. Augustine's Church in South Boston, rendered Mozart's Twelfth Mass in fine style, under the leadership of Amos Pearson, Esq. Mrs. Farracy sang all the solos, especially the "O Salutaris," in a superb manner. Her voice is of sufficient power to fill the spacious church and yet sweet and entirely free from fault. Her rare singing occasioned much comment, although all deserved praise for having rendered their parts well. The choir succeeded in their responses (which were new to many of them) so well as to give to the ceremonies of consecration that degree of solemnity and impressiveness that is essential to a good effect; in fact, without which accompaniment the whole thing sinks to the level of the machine-grinding prayers of the Chinaman.

After the singing of the Gospel the dedicatory sermon was delivered by D. W. Bacon, D. D., from the 17th verse of the 28th chapter of Genesis: "How terrible is this place; it is none other than the house of God and the gate of Heaven." The Bishop's remarks were made without notes and uttered in a clear and distinct voice, so that even those in the vestibule of the church were able to hear them. The tenor of his discourse was a definition of the offices of the Catholic Church, closing with an earnest plea in her behalf. During his sermon, he took occasion to highly compliment the beautiful church they had dedicated, and commended in earnest terms the zeal of the pastor, Rev. Father Walsh, who had labored arduously and borne the burden of the work. After the sermon and the completion of the Grand High Mass, Bishop Bacon gave the solemn Pontifical blessing and benediction, which closed the dedicatory exercises.

A large number of Protestants were present, among whom we noticed Ex-Gov. Goodwin and family, Ex-Gov. Smyth of Manchester, Hon. Frank Jones, Mayor Miller, Revs. James DeNormandie and J. Albee, Albert R. Hatch, Esq., George W. Haven, John J. Pickering and wife, Aaron H. Hill and family and many others. The services were very lengthy but of a novel and interesting character to nearly every one present; and we will remark here that Father Walsh may justly feel proud of his achievement in collecting sufficient funds to enable him to build and dedicate so fine a church in so short a time. We learn that it is his intention to have the ceiling and walls of the sanctuary frescoed in a superb manner as soon as the money can be gathered, a work that will contribute largely to the beauty of the church. A new and costly organ will be purchased at an early day, besides some other minor additions, which, taken together, will cause the interior of the edifice to excel anything of the kind in the State.

Shortly after the conclusion of the ceremonies at the church, an elegant private dinner at the Rockingham House was given by Rev. Father Walsh to about twenty-five of his friends, among whom were Bishop Bacon, the Reverend Fathers who assisted in the ceremonies of dedication, and some of our prominent citizens. The repast was served up in a style not often excelled even at the Revere banquets, and therefore good enough for a king. Among the laity we observed Ex-Gov. Goodwin and Hon. Frank Jones, who were seated on the right and left of the Bishop. Near by sat Albert R. Hatch, Esq., and Aaron H. Hill, Esq., President of the Ten Cents Savings Bank. At the other end of the table sat Rev. Canon Walsh, and at his right was Ex-Gov. Smyth and on the left His Honor Mayor F. W. Miller. Among the guests at this recherche entertainment was Mr. R. Edwin Rider, organist of St. Mary's Church—who, by the way, discharged the varied and difficult duties at the church with admirable tact and ability.

Father Walsh presided at the dinner, and contributed greatly to the enjoyment of the affair by his ready Irish wit in proposing the health of his honored guests. He is a rare punster, even exceeding that peer among pun-makers, Guild of the Commercial Bulletin. His rich brogue in the utterance of his witticisms gives a flavor to his speeches and causes him to keep his audience convulsed with laughter. Brief remarks were also made by Bishop Bacon, Ex-Gov. Goodwin, Hon. Frank Jones, Ex-Gov. Smyth, Mayor Miller, and A. R. Hatch, Esq. The whole affair was happily conceived and well conducted.

Laconics.

Snow storms are getting to be as monotonous as Massachusetts Senatorial elections.

The Portsmouth Dramatic Club, assisted by the eminent tragedian and elocutionist, Wyzeman Marshall, and the popular actress, Miss Lucette Webster, will present the five-act drama, "Damon and Pythias," at the Temple on Monday evening next. Admission—gallery 35 cents, parquette 50 cents; reserved seats 75 cents. The Club presented the same play some time ago in a very acceptable manner, without any "star" assistance; and with the eminent talent they have secured will on this occasion do even better. See advertisement.

Among the Portsmouth boys abroad who are making their way rapidly upward is Mr. Chas. W. Adams, son of Ex-Mayor Adams, who from an inferior position first tendered him on the C. B. & Q. R. R. in Illinois has risen by successive promotions until he has charge of the most lucrative ticket agencies in Chicago, in which position he is noted for his executive ability. Affable in manner, he has become popular with the travelling public to a high degree. Mr. Adams is now on a brief visit to this city.

Mr. James Anderson, watchman in charge of the U. S. Quarantine station at Wood Island, fell on the rocks, Tuesday, breaking several of his ribs and receiving other serious injuries.

Mr. N. Dana Whipple has formed a partnership with one of the largest firms in the iron business in the country, the Peeksville Bronze Iron Works; under the firm name of Finch & Whipple. Mr. Whipple is one of the foremost young men of Portsmouth, and not being content to abide forever in this quiet "city by the sea," has been prospecting for a business involving more activity and enterprise than Portsmouth affords. He is to take charge of the business in New York city, Mr. Finch assuming control at the Iron Works. The best of wishes follow our young townsmen in his new field of enterprise.

The Concord People's Political Handbook, just published, contains the returns of the last election, the vote for Councilors, Senators and County officers, and a list of the members of the legislature. It can be had at any bookstore for ten cents.

Dr. Fitzgerald, the well-known clairvoyant physician, has been made the recipient of an elegant gold watch, of English make, (valued at $1350,) and chain worth $300. It is stem winding, has a stop and sounds the hour and minute when a spring is touched. The Doctor has numerous personal friends who admire his excellent qualities of heart and wondrous powers of cure.

Quochecho Encampment, I. O. O. F., of Dover, are making extensive arrangements for a grand parade on Monday, April 27, the 55th anniversary of Odd Fellowship in this country. Mount Sinai and Strawberry Bank Encampments of Portsmouth have accepted invitations to join.

You might as well try to shampoo an elephant with a thimbleful of soapsuds as to attempt to do business and ignore advertising.

A number of well-dressed young men from this city were arrested in Dover on Thursday for fast driving. They were taken to the station house and allowed time to repent about eight dollars' worth, each.

Journalistic.

"The Independent" is the title of a bright, chatty little weekly, edited by Mr. W. L. Terhune, the first number bearing date April 10th. It is a five-column paper, is independent in politics and is sold at 75 cents per year, commencing we understand with several hundred subscribers. The "patent outsides" are used, and the insides are printed at the Dover Star office. The following extract shows that the appearance of the Independent was dreaded in certain quarters:

Dodge of the Journal says, "We learn a new local paper is talked of; should think there was a plenty now;" so there is —like the Journal.

A very fair hit—but we think our young friend Dodge didn't indite the paragraph referred to, which has a tinge of jealousy about it that does not seem to be one of his traits. As for ourselves, we welcome our new contemporary to the field of journalism right heartily. To achieve success it must deserve it, and without merit no enterprise can succeed. We congratulate Mr. Terhune upon the appearance of the initial number.

East India Crows.

Crows are not the most beautiful of the feathered race, but they are amusing and interesting creatures, and are by no means destitute of attractions. An officer in the British army in India relates in Chambers' Journal some of his experiences with these sable gentry.

It was my lot once upon a time to be down with fever in India. The room in which I lay was the upper flat of an antiquated building in a rather lonely part of a town. It had three windows, close to which grew a large banyan tree, beneath the shade of whose branches the crew of a line-of-battle ship might have hung their hammocks with comfort.

The tree was inhabited by a colony of crows; we stood,—the crows and I,—in the relation of over-the-way to each other. Now, of all birds that fly, the Indian crow must bear the palm for audacity.

Living by his wits, he is ever on the best terms with himself, and his impudence leads him to dare anything. Whenever, by any chance Pandoo, my attendant, left the room, these black gentry paid me a visit. Hopping in by the score, and regarding me no more than the bed-post, they commenced a minute inspection of everything there was in the room, trying to destroy everything that could not be eaten and carried away.

They rent the towels, drilled holes in my uniform, stole buttons from my coat and smashed my bottles. One used to sit on a screen close by my bed every day, and scan my face with an evil eye, saying as plain could be:

"You're getting thinner and beautifully less; in a day or two you won't be able to lift a hand; then I'll have the pleasure of picking out your two eyes."

When at length happy days of convalescence came round, and I was able to get up and even eat my meals at table, I found my friends, the crows, a little more civil and respectful. The thought occurred to me to make friends with them; I consequently began a regular system of feeding them after every meal-time.

One old crow I caught and chained to a chair with a fiddle-string. He was a funny old fellow, with one club-foot. He never refused his food from the very day of his captivity, and I soon taught him a few tricks. One was to lie on his back, when so placed for any length of time, till set on his legs again. This was called turning the turtle.

But one day this bird of freedom hopped away, fiddle-string and all, and a whole fortnight elapsed before I saw him again. I was just beginning to put faith in a belief common in India, namely, that a crow or any other bird that has been for any time living with human beings is put to instant death the moment he returns to the bosom of his family; when one day, while engaged in breakfasting some forty crows, my club-footed pet re-appeared and actually picked the bit from my hand, and ever after, until I left, he came thrice a day to be fed.

The other crows came with surprising exactness at meal-times; first one would alight on the shutter outside the window, and peep in, as if to ascertain how nearly done I happened to be, then fly away for five or ten minutes, when he would return and have another peek.

As soon, however, as I approached the window and raised my arm, I was saluted with a chorus of cawing from the Banyan tree; then down they swooped in dozens, and it was not a very easy task to fill so many mouths, although the losses were government ones.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

VALUABLE INFORMATION.
BOSTON, Dec. 12, 1870.
Gentlemen—My only object in giving you this testimonial is to spread valuable information. Having been badly afflicted with salt rheum, and the whole surface of my skin being covered with pimples and eruptions, some of which caused me great pain and annoyance, and knowing it to be a blood disease, I took many of the advertised blood preparations, among which was any quantity of Sarsaparilla, without obtaining any benefit, until I commenced taking the VEGETINE; after I had completed the first bottle, I saw that I had got the right medicine. Consequently I followed on with it until I had taken seven bottles, when I was pronounced a well man, and my skin is smooth and entirely free from pimples and eruptions. I have never enjoyed so good health before, and I attribute it all to the use of VEGETINE. To benefit those afflicted with Rheumatism, I will make mention also of the VEGETINE's wonderful power of curing me of this acute complaint, of which I have suffered so intensely.
C. H. TUCKER, Pos. Agt. Mich. C. R. R., 29 Tyler Street, Boston.
HAS ENTIRELY CURED ME.
BOSTON, October, 1870.
MR. H. R. STEVENS:
Dear Sir—My Daughter after having a severe attack of Whooping Cough, was left in a feeble state of health; being advised by a friend, she tried the VEGETINE, and after using a few bottles was fully restored to health.
I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism. I have taken several bottles of the VEGETINE for this complaint, and am happy to say it has entirely cured me. I have recommended the VEGETINE to others, with the same good results. It is a great cleanser and purifier of the blood; it's pleasant to take; and I can cheerfully recommend it.
JAMES MOORE, 364 Athens Street.
NO TROUBLE SINCE USING
VEGETINE.
CHARLESTOWN, October, 1870.
This certifies that my daughter has always been troubled with a humor, which has caused frequent swelling on her face and about her eyes. Physicians called it the Erysipelas. Since having taken two bottles of the VEGETINE, has not been troubled with it since. SIMON ALDRICH, Charlestown, Mass.
DR. TUTTLE says: "It is unnecessary for me to enumerate the diseases for which the VEGETINE should be used. I know of no disease which will not admit of its use with good results. Almost innumerable complaints are caused by poisonous secretions in the blood, which can be entirely expelled from the system by the use of the VEGETINE. When the blood is perfectly cleansed, the disease rapidly yields; all pains cease, healthy action is promptly restored, and the patient is cured.
The remarkable cures effected by VEGETINE have induced many physicians and apothecaries whom we know, to prescribe and use it in their own families.
In fact VEGETINE is the best remedy yet discovered, and is the only reliable BLOOD-PURIFIER yet placed before the public. Sold by all Druggists and dealers everywhere. eod&p m c 4w

The Soft Tongue.

There was to be a grand affair at Aberyffly, in Wales—a musical contest; the singers of Machyllyn were to compete with its singers, and very great was the' excitement that prevailed. On the morn of the great day there was an influx of strangers; a special train had brought many an old townsman, and many who were jealous for the honor of Machyllyn, to the quaint and romantic Aberyffly, which was built on the seashore in the centre of a beautiful bay.

Knots of visitors sprinkled the market-place and the rocks and the ruins of the castle and the shingly beach, on which the tide was making its own music, so dear to the true lover of the sea. The gay dresses and ribbons of the company shone in the sun like a broken-up rainbow; and the old high-crowned Welsh hats, of which there were many, heightened the interest of the scene.

Crossing the market-place, near the great clock in the center, was a broad-faced, merry-faced, strong-faced old Welshman, Owen Griffiths by name. He was everybody's friend, and more truly "the representative" of the people of Aberyffly than was the gentleman whom they sent to Parliament; for he was the champion of their rights in total, and the sympathizer in their sorrows and their joys individually.

Nobody liked to think what Aberyffly would be without Owen Griffiths; nobody knew his age; everybody had always remembered him; he was as much an institution of the place as the sea, the rocks, or the old ruins. Such a smile was on his broad face that morning, as he nodded to one, gave a word to another, praised Winny Watts' fowls, and told Mary Jones her fruit made his mouth water. As to the children, they sprang up wherever he was to be found as naturally as weeds grow by running water; and whether they got a shower of nuts, or a flourish of his stick and a threat, made with a contradicting laugh, that he would throw them all in the sea, it mattered not; they were round his legs, while he allowed it, thick and three-fold.

"Who's yonder? Isn't it Richard Hughes, surely?" he said to Winnie Watts, as he beheld a man bustling through the crowd of women and their large baskets with an anxious face.

"Indeed it is," said Winnie.

"What will he being doing here? Sure it is getting most time for the last practice," said Owen.

"Good day, Mr. Griffiths. Excuse me staying to talk, I'm in a wonderful hurry," said Richard, who was the leader of the coming contest on the Aberyffly side.

"But, man, what brings you this way at this time?" cried Owen.

"Oh, I'm going to see if Robert Burns will come and try the first tenor," hurriedly said Richard.

"Robert Jones? What ails you to want a first tenor, when you have already got John Phillips?"

Richard shook his head. "Bad job, Mr. Griffiths—bad job. John has gone off in a heat, just because I told him he sung flat; and I doubt if Robert will come now, because he wasn't given the first place at the outset. It's wonderfully provoking and I'm just bewildered about it."

"Stop?" cried Owen, as Richard was hustling on his doubtful mission after Robert Jones, "do not go. He's a sulky man, and bringing him out of sulks is a long job, when you are in a hurry; and he is no tenor worth looking for. I'd as soon bite a crab-apple as listen to him any time. It's John you must have. Wait awhile, and I'll get him for you. He's a peppery fellow, but he will come out right with good words."

"But, Mr. Griffiths, the practice is in less than an hour," Richard replied.

Owen waved his hand. "I think he will be at the hall together all in good time," he replied. "He did not say he wouldn't join you again?"

"Not to me, but he did to others; and he has not been near me since we had the last practice."

"Very good. Keep his place for him, and make no wonder of his coming back. It will be all right," said Owen, going off on his expedition.

Sooner than a man of his size could be expected to travel, he was at the door of John Phillips, a shoemaker by trade, and noted for possessing the richest tenor voice in the whole district.

"What, John!" he cried, "you at home, when all the band is going up yonder to the hall? I never thought, when my pony strap broke this morning, and I put it ready for your man to fetch and mend, that I should see you in the shop."

John looked rather forlornly about on the piles of sand-boots he had just been bringing toward the work-stand by the door, and said nothing.

"John, man! surely you do not know the time!" exclaimed Mr. Griffiths, pulling out his watch. It's a little more than three-quarters till you meet, and you not dressed up. Make haste, and give over the shop to Morgan, and come with me. I expect to hear you sing until you make my old heart dance again."

"No, indeed, Mr. Griffiths—no, indeed, sir. I'll not sing to-day, nor to-night," said John quickly, and a little thickly.

"Why, what has got into your pipes, John,?" asked the old man kindly.

"Pipes? Oh, anything but good tunes is in my pipes, Mr. Griffiths. Will you please try a pair of sand-shoes? You spoke about a pair last week."

"No, John, no, I'm not the man for such light wares, when I think about it. But the singing, John—you don't mean to say you are not going to join to-night? Why, I should miss you out of 'The March of the Men of Harlech,' as good as a hundred of the best men if I did not hear your strong and beautiful voice."

"Indeed, Mr. Griffiths, and you are very good, and kind, and civil always, and I wish everybody was the like of you," replied Phillips, in a comforted tone.

"Is it a cold, John?" asked Owen.

"No, indeed, sir; it was more of a heat that I took," answered John, sufficiently mollified to smile a little at his own joke.

"Took a heat? oh—what, a little miff, I doubt—a little affront somewhere?"

"Not a little affront, Mr. Owen. Haven't I been laboring my best to do credit to the singing, and never kept from a practice, and I was to be told before everybody that I sung flat and put them all out?" cried John, red in the face and greatly incensed.

"Who put that on you, John?" demanded Owen, calmly.

"No other than him who knowed best it was nothing but spite, and envy, and jealousy; Richard Hughes it was, the leader of us, who thinks his own cousin, Rice Hughes is a better tenor. Let them put him first, I hope they'll be sorry for it."

"So he said you sung flat, did he?" asked Owen.

"Yes, indeed, Mr. Griffiths," said John, rather staggered by Owen's hearing of the affront so quietly.

"Well, well; I should not have thought he'd have the courage to do it, seeing the value your voice is to them. I shall always respect Richard for it, John. He has shown himself a true friend. You have only one fault, and he has told you of it—you do sing flat."

John looked down demurringly at the sand-boots, and said nothing.

"Come, come, put it by; get cool of this heat; go to the practice, and keep up your voice, so as to show them—"

"No, indeed, sir! no!" interrupted John, very decidedly; for he had been sent into a flame by Mr. Griffith's unexpected approval of the affront.

"Well, man, well, take your own way," said Owen; "we will make no more to do about it; but the loss of your tenor will make 'The Men of Harlech' halt in their march. Well, which way do I go to see Morgan? Is he in the wareroom? I'll speak to him about the strap, for he'll do it, and it'll be better if I give him my directions."

"Morgan's no man of mine, Mr. Griffiths," said the shoemaker, who looked evidently more vexed.

"How long has that been?" asked Owen, who knew the circumstance and all concerning it very well.

"Since Tuesday, sir; he got notice from me then; yes, indeed."

"Eh! But he was such a workman," said Owen.

"Indeed he was; but he had an ugly temper, and he got hot when I found fault; and you know, Mr. Griffiths, I was the master, and knew my own business best."

"Surely, surely; so he went, did he?"

"Yes, indeed, and in a most terrible passion, too."

"Very foolish of him—regular work, good pay, large family."

"Yes, indeed, very foolish," said John Phillips.

"I dare say you are sorry?"

"Yes, indeed; and I've no man yet, and if I would go to the singing I couldn't leave the shop, said John,

"You'll have him back?"

"I wouldn't humble to him for it, indeed, Mr. Griffiths; if he won't hear a word from me, how can I work with him?"

"Very true; people shouldn't be so touchy when they are wrong; they ought to confess it, and not quarrel with those who tell them of it."

"Yes, indeed, said Phillips, looking a little foolish, as he commenced turning over the boots and shoes.

"I am sorry for his family. I'll go and speak to him, if you like; maybe he'll promise to be well tempered in time to come; I dare say he would be glad to come back. Shall I say you'll overlook it if he does?"

"Yes, indeed," if you please, Mr. Griffiths, sir, and I will be greatly obliged to you, for he knows the business, and he's honest as the day—and, indeed, I have a wonderful miss of him; but you won't make too much of that, will you, sir?"

"Leave me alone, John; I am a prudent man, and you may trust me," said Owen, as he started off toward Morgan in his shed-like house in Vulcan street.

He was not long away; he returned puffing up the street, for he had warm work for a warm day and a stout man like him.

"All right, John Morgan; owns he was too quick; it is the fault with us all—a Welshman is half pepper; he says he will come back and stay if you don't lay hard on him, and he hopes to be civil and well-behaved toward you in the future."

"You are a true friend, Mr. Griffiths, and I'm forever obliged to you;" said John, with a tear very his near eyes.

"Oh, don't mention it, John, don't mention it; I see him coming up the street—I told him to make haste." Good-by; I'm hurrying now to the practice. I hope the best for the tenor, but I never liked Robert Jones that way."

"Mr. Griffiths! Mr. Griffiths! is it Robert Jones they've got?" cried the shoemaker after him, as he turned up the street.

"Ay, I believe they will try for him; but as you got put before him, I fancy he will be silky and refuse."

"Will you be speaking to Richard Hughes, now?"

"Oh, yes, in a little while."

"Then you might say (with a little hesitation) I'll be there to-night."

"What hinders you, then from coming up to the practice, when there is Morgan, right close by?"

"Yes, indeed; I'll come," said John, untying his apron.

"I'll wait while you put on your coat," said Owen, calmly, leaning against the door; and they soon started together.

"And you think I sing flat, Mr. Griffiths—do you, indeed?" asked John, as they walked along.

"Yes, John, very flat,"

"I never could find it," said John, in some discontent.

"Maybe you have never tried," said Owen Griffiths.

"No, indeed," said John.

Very shyly did the deserting tenor look around when he entered the hall, but no one noticed him; his seat was vacant and he went up to it as if his coming was a matter of course, and all the singers, knowing his value, were careful not to show surprise, or in any way to give offense.

The practice passed, and the contest passed, and the Aberyffly singers took the prize.

"It was 'The March of the Men of Harlech' that did it," said Owen; "I never heard the like of it before."

"Indeed, Mr. Griffiths," said the leader of the band, "it was yourself that did it, for you brought us our tenor, and he never sang as he did, both morning and evening, before."

"Well, Richard," said the kindly old man, "I maybe did; and keep in mind what a strong thing a soft tongue is. There are no bones so hard as the bones of contention, and I have broken more than one to-day—only with a soft tongue."

The Massachusetts Senatorship.

The mysterious telegraphic dispatches are explained. Three "leading men," imagining themselves of more importance than they proved to be, concluded to put Hoar in for the short term and let Dawes have the long one,—hence the dispatches. The action of this self-constituted committee is the subject of a great deal of comment. It is fair game to the democrats, and Mr. Noble and his confreres indulge in unlimited raillery. Some of the republicans consider it as an unintended joke, some as a fair sample of stupidity, and others as a very pretty piece of assurance and impertinence. Everybody, it is safe to say, is more or less disappointed. The legislative convention ballotted for Senator again on Saturday, with the following result:

Dawes 68, Hoar 54, Curtis 63, Adams 14, Bullock 15, Banks 6, Sanford 7, Washburn 4, Learned 3, Whittier 1, Pitman 1.

Readables.

How earnest the democrats are in their buncombe about "hard money" is shown in the fact that the vote on the specie resumption clause of Maynard's bill, Friday, in the House, brought out almost all the leading democrats against it. Among the number were Beck, Randall, Marshall, Niblack, Holman, Taylor of Ohio, Harrison, Wells, Standeford and Comings. A precious "hard money" party, sure enough!

A student in the Wesleyan Academy at Wilbraham, Mass., on Thursday amused himself by snapping, an unloaded revolver at several of his young friends. Of course the pistol went off, as unloaded pistols invariably do when fooled with, and another student was mortally wounded.

The case of Jean Luie and Captain Brown, tried for perjury as witnesses in the Tichborne trial, resulted in their conviction, and they were sentenced to five and seven years' penal servitude respectively.

A well dressed, matronly lady walked into a saloon in Oswego the other day, laid her muff on the counter, and took out a pair of spectacles, when the bar-tender promptly informed her that no bible-reading would be in order there. Reaching down into her dress pocket, the woman produced a flat bottle and coolly called for a pint of whisky. She doesn't know yet what the bar-tender was alarmed about.

The shipping in Halifax harbor was badly knocked to pieces by the wind on Friday.

Miss Heenan, sister of the pugilist, died recently in Berlin. She enjoyed the distinction of being the most corpulent woman in the world.

The police authorities at Chicago, who couldn't protect the petitioning women on their recent visit to the Common Council, detailed a squad of police to keep order at a cock-fight.

A curious accident happened at Hyde Park, near Boston. A fire extinguisher strapped to a man's back exploded, and throwing the man down, landed itself two hundred feet away. Though not extinguished the man was decidedly put out.

State News.

Miss Lizzie White, an aged and respected maiden lady of Suncook, was outraged and nearly murdered by a Frenchman named George Ela, 18 years old, on the night of the 8th. She was terribly beaten and will probably die; her age is about seventy. Ela has confessed his guilt, and been lodged in Concord jail for fear of lynching.

Mrs. Howe, wife of Mr. Frank Howe, of Howe's circus, now in St. Louis, jumped into Black river at Dover, near the residence of Mr. Cushing, on Saturday, and was drowned. She has been subject to fits of insanity.

Fun on the Railroad.

[St. Louis Globe.]

And now comes the railroad man and shows how the "boys" kill time in our railroad offices, after all the "over and shorts" are checked and the special rate duly entered.

The following documents show the course taken by the application of a modest Michigander for a "soft place" on the K. P. R. R. Here is the initial letter, which, as well as all the rest, is "warranted genuine:"

L. S. & M. S. R. R.

To the Superintendent K. P. R. R.:

DEAR SIR—The Michigan malaria creates peculiar sensations and a demand for the use of quinine. I don't like either. Can you offer me any inducements to come West? Thermometer twenty-one degrees below zero yesterday morning. I am a married man, twenty-eight years of age. Have spent about four years and a half in the capacity of book-keeper, and have first-rate testimonials as to my capacity for business, etc., etc.

I am now, and have been since the 18th of September, 1872, employed as clerk under an agent in charge of the freight department at this station, a junction of two branches of the L. S. & M. S. Railroad, and the terminus of the Flint and Pere Marquette Railroad.

I desire to become a station agent, or get into a general office as an abstract clerk, or some other agreeable position. Will you please give my petition a hearing, and this letter an early response, and thereby merit the heart-felt thanks of

Yours truly, W. W. SWITZER.

Now comes the various notations:

1. The General Superintendent refers the matter to S. S. Smith, Auditor.

2. We don't got any use for him no how.
S. S. SMITH.

Respectfully referred to J. E. Gregg, of the Arkansas Valley Railroad. How would this young man suit you?
S. S. S.

3. Gregg's clerk makes the following indorsement:

Wants a job. Graduate of a commercial college, and don't like the chills.

4. Gregg replies:

If this rooster would like a conductor's situation on this road, he may come along and take the next vacancy. We have lost four conductors in the past six weeks, three of them shot and the other had his throat cut for insisting that passengers should pay their fare. Would like to have him take a train. Will promise that the chills won't trouble him long here. J. G. GREGG.

N. B.—Employes are required to deposit $3 with the superintendent for contingent expenses, such as burial fees, etc. This rule will not be deviated from.

Respectfully referred to T. F. Oakes, Kansas City.
G. F. A., Kansas Pacific Railroad.

5. Oakes replies:

He is too smart for my humble office, and forwards to D. C. Dodge, G. F. A., Denver and Rio Grande, as follows;

This touching appeal, with its apparently slim prospect of success in this vicinity, is respectfully referred. It may be chills that the young man is trying to avoid, but that is not the name we used to give it "When You and I Were Young (with) Maggie."
T. F. OAKES.

6. Dodge replies:

We feel utterly cast down and dejected in view of our inability to offer to this worthy married man of twenty-eight with the chills and a thorough knowledge of book-keeping a position that he could with dignity accept. Have nothing positive except a presidency to give. If he could so far overcome his squeamishness in this particular as to stoop for awhile to duties so much beneath him, we would gladly welcome him; in all probability, could manage to have his wife and children boarded out. D. C. DODGE.

Accompanying this epistle is an elaborate cartoon representing the anxious clerk sick in bed with the chills, and his wife kneeling at the bedside overcome with grief. Articles of underclothing hang on the wall and on the floor a dilapidated youngster is ferociously tugging at the kitten's tail. Below is the inscription:

"Alas! for the rarity
Of Christian charity."

7. Respectfully referred to C. H. Prescott.
D. C. DODGE.

Prescott replies:

I am at present only engaging young ladies as clerks, but would like his photograph. C. H. PRESCOTT.

8. The mass of papers then comes to St. Louis. The Cairo Narrow-Gauge writes thusly:

ST. LOUIS, August 9, 73.

Why don't he take some pills
That are made to cure the chills,
And all other ills
That Michigan is heir to.

Respectfully referred to the superintendent of the O. and M. Railroad.

Who says;

9. I am afraid that this old antiquated institution can hardly offer any suggestion to this young man of twenty-eight, with his jew-whalloper twenty-one degrees below zero, that would be of any use, after the attention and advice extended by so many of the fraternity west of the Father of Waters. We would suggest that, as he has the distinguished degree of S. B. conferred upon him, he might be better adapted to fill some responsible position in Church or State rather than in the railroad business. We have no S. B's on our line. Our boys killed the last we had.

10. And now comes the St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern Railroad, by its general freight agent, and, deposing, says:

W. W. Switzer, S. B., is our meat. We are in need of a sober, intelligent young man. As he is married, however, it will be necessary for him to produce a policy in the St. Louis Mutual Life Insurance Company for $10,000, or a ticket in the Omaha or Louisville Lottery. Since the last unpleasantness, caused by our engineers' strike, the managers refuse to employ any married men without ample evidence that their families will be provided for. So many employes have met with death in mysterious ways, and the widows and orphans have made claims on the company for support, that the above rule has been deemed a necessity. This ought not to be much of an obstacle, however, as the salaries paid by this company are sufficiently large to warrant the outlay. We will take him on trial at 15c a day. If he prefers a job on the road, will engage him to ride on the pilot and keep the grasshoppers off the headlight during the night. Will pay $2 a day, but he must board himself and pay fare both ways. Train baggage-men are furnished with a wooden overcoat, that buttons up with a spade. For full particulars, inquire at Bellefontaine Cemetery, where we have a private sexton, who will be pleased to answer all questions.
ABRAHAM.

And here the trace is lost sight of. Doubtless ere this it has reached the old original W. W. Switzer, if he has not already succumbed to the baneful influence of the Michigan malaria.

There is another trace out on the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Road, in which the "Heathen Chinee" plays a conspicuous part. Telegrams have been sent after it, but as yet no reply is received.

—Yosemite Valley has met its superior in the matter of trees in the region of the River Johnstone, in Australia. The English government botanist recently found there a huge fir tree which three feet from the ground measured 150 feet in circumference; at fifty-five feet, where it sent forth giant branches, the stem was nearly eighty feet in circumference.

Poverty o the Blood.

If the blood be thin and watery the whole system is impoverished. The flesh is flabby, the muscles lack hardness, the nerves are relaxed, the internal organs but imperfectly perform their functions, the brain is inert, and, in short, the entire body is only half alive. The stomach is mainly responsible for this wretched condition of the human machine. Stimulate and tone that organ with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and a marked change for the better will soon be apparent. The result of improving the digestion with this potent and genial tonic will be the conversion of the food into rich, pure blood, and as the blood is the raw material from which flesh, muscle, brain, bone, and every membrané, tissue and ligament of the body are manufactured, all those components of the material frame will be gradually regenerated and invigorated. This is sound doctrine, and it is sustained by the logic of facts.

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood, drag, and scatter its diatems. pers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

SIX BLACKBOARD LECTURES

ON GEOLOGY,

TUESDAY EVENINGS,

—IN—

MECHANICS HALL,

By Prof. W. D. Gunning.

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing wild his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Tenement Wanted.
Harry Bloodgood's Comique Alliance.
Hardware, Paints and Oils—Wilson & Magraw.
Spring Opening of Bonnets—C. N. Shaw & Co.

Laconics.

The Portsmouth Dramatic Club will present the standard and sterling play, "Damon and Pythias" to the amusement lovers of Portsmouth this evening at the Temple. Wyzeman Marshall, Esq., will appear as Damon, and Miss Lucette Webster, the popular and versatile actress, as Hermion. A crowded house may reasonably be anticipated, and as only a few reserved seat tickets will be sold, an early application to Dr. Preston is advisable for those who wish to secure such. See advertisement.

Harry Bloodgood's Comique Alliance of twenty-seven performers appears at the Temple on Wednesday evening, the 15th. Harry has a new "temperance lecture" which is praised by the press as benig highly provocative of mirth, and the whole performance is warmly commended. See the advertisement in another column.

The County Commissioners met in the town hall at Newcastle, Friday, to hear arguments on a petition for a bridge and highway from Newcastle to the Davis farm in Rye, but owing to certain interested parties not being present the hearing was adjourned for a week.

It is said that bank shares owned in Rye are annually taxed on only $60 per share, in spite of the law and the oaths of the town assessors to comply therewith. Is this true?

Col. William H. Hackett on Saturday sold at auction ten shares in the New Hampshire National Bank, for $116 per share.

"Kent" telegraphs the Boston Traveller that a heavy capitalist of this city "and one of the wealthiest men of this State, who has for several years had his life insured to the amount of $30,000, has recently had the insurance increased to $105,000, and proposes to further increase it $95,000, making the total amount $200,000. The gentleman referred to has been the architect of his own fortune, and regards life-insurance as one of the safest and best investments of capital."

Messrs. William H. Gray and John G. Tibbets were elected fence viewers by the City Councils, Friday evening, and not James D. Butler, Esq., and Col. Wm. H. Hackett, as we reported, though the two latter were the candidates nominated at the republican caucus. This shows how very strongly anti-Butler the Councils are.

Rat Stories.

[Philadelphia Ledger.]

A work recently published in England, on "Waste Products" and their utilization, contains some curious and amusing matters. The statements concerning rats, living and dead, are especially remarkable. The bones of defunct animals are largely in demand everywhere, for buttons, knife handles and various other purposes. But to make these bones marketable, they must be cleaned. To boil them or apply decomposing substances to take off the adhering flesh injures the bone. To clean them by hand would add too much to their cost. There is a "pound" in Paris, about ten acres in extent, surrounded by a stone wall. To this receptacle all the carcasses of dead animals from the city are brought; and here the problem of bone-cleaning is solved. The city authorities colonize the place with rats from the catacombs. They do the work of bone-cleaning artistically, polishing the bones gratuitously as no human cleaner could do, without great trouble and expense. With the rodents it is a work of love, imparted by voracity; and a carcass, dumped into the inclosure one day, is found on the morrow "a neat and polished skeleton." The bones are all ready to be sawed up into the frames of ladies' fans, and to touch beautiful noses, all unconscious of the odors which the elegantly carved toy exhaled but a few weeks or days before.

But the four-legged operators "grow by what they feed on," sleek individually but collectively "too numerous to mention." There is such an increase of laborers over the demand that the rats employed to keep down waste become "waste" themselves. They in turn are "utilized," and human ingenuity is too much for animal sagacity. All round the inside base of the wall of the inclosure are perforated cylindrical holes, in diameter the size of a rat's body, and in depth equal to his length. At break of day, once a month, a "calathumpian band," armed with drums, tin kettles and whatever else will make a horrid noise, rushes in among the rats. Thus "charivaried" into mortal terror, the poor rats poke their heads into the first holes they find. Ratcatchers, each equipped with a bag over the left shoulder, rush round and seize the rats by their protruding tails, and whip them into the bags with wonderful and dexterous celerity. The privilege of catching the rats is paid for, and the catchers make a good thing out of the sale of the fur, the skin and the flesh. The fur is used among other purposes for hats. The skins furnish thumbs for kid gloves. Fur and skin are sometimes used together. But—the flesh? After such a revelation the customers at a cheap Paris restaurant might say: In that savory dish what rats may come, "must give us pause!"

Rats, it will be seen, have thus reached the dignity of articles of commerce in Europe. In China, where rat soup is a delicacy, this small game has, perhaps for centuries, been quoted at two dollars a dozen. In the East Indian province of Scinde the commissioners, to abate the rat nuisance, issued a proclamation giving three pence a dozen for rat tails. The catchers were permitted to keep the carcass, no small addition to their profits. The emigration of rats and their multiplication are among the curiosities of natural history. In France they are computed to amount in number with other rodents to over two thousand millions, and their depredations, if estimated at only one-fifth of an American cent a year to each rat, would amount to nearly four millions of dollars annually. The proprietor of a slaughter house near Paris has trapped and killed over six thousand rats in one month. In one night he destroyed nearly three thousand. These rat figures are something appalling. They certainly far exceed any American experience, and it is to be earnestly hoped that they always may.

—"Sales ladies" now advertise in the newspapers. "Washer lady," "char lady," and "lady of all work" will follow in due course.

—There will be a gathering June 9, of the original abolitionists of America at Chicago, and St. Louis already tosses up her head, and curls her lip, and declares she will have on the same day a much larger gathering of the original inflationists of the country.

—He was a quaint old fisherman. One day, along toward dusk, he was fishing in a trout stream, and, as he swung his fly over the water, it was suddenly snapped by a large bat. The strange looking thing dangled and flapped its wings at the end of the line. The fisherman's companion called out: "Say, Sam, got anything?" "Ye-as," looking at the bat on his hook. "What is it?" "I dunno, unless it's a cherubim!"

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—Eighty-eight young ladies in Minnesota have agreed not to marry any man who uses tobacco. Eighty-eight young men in Minnesota have banded together and agreed not to marry any girl who uses false hair. Bets even, from last accounts.

—A visitor to the top of Bald Mountain, North Carolina, says: "The churches in those mountainous regions have been literally crammed day after day, for weeks, and religious revivals have been going on constantly. The volcano has apparently shaken more sin out of these people in a few weeks than the preachers have been able to do in as many years."

—The women of Kansas propose as a fair bargain that if their male relatives will join the teetotal society, they themselves will totally abstain from all artificial additions to their coiffure, whereto the male relatives aforesaid make rejoinder that rather than see the beauty of the period unadorned save by the little knot of natural hair which a night cap usually covers, they would willingly maintain a perpetual condition of inebriety.

—The steward of the Prairie Bird committed suicide on the voyage from Havre to New Orleans. The extract from the captain's log, which the newspapers publish, is a mixture of the nautical and the literal:—"The steward went into the cabin with the dish-basket. Heard report. The carpenter sung out, 'My God, he has shot himself!' Laid him on the main hatch, and found a bullet-hole in his right temple. Then laid him out on a plank in starboard gangway; hauled down fore and aft sails; laid yards aback, read funeral ceremony, and launched him into the deep."

—When the first vessel went home from the West Indies to Aberdeen, Scotland, there was a great banquet in the Town Hall. The Provost, honest man, was greatly annoyed by a mischievous ape that had been brought over—he had never seen a monkey before—who pulled his periwig and stuck his thumb ingloriously at his nose. The captain seeing that something was troubling his lordship, asked what was wrong. "Ou, it's that fallow there wi' the sair een, that's aye ruggin' at my hair." "That, Provost, is a monkey; pray what did you think he was?" "A monkey! bless my soul, I thocht it wat some sugar-planter's son fare the West Indies!"

—"While journeying by rail," says a traveller in an English paper, "I witnessed the following incident. One night, just after I had scrambled into my sleeping berth, I heard loud and angry voices proceeding from the rear of the car. 'I tell you this is a sleeping car, and you can't come in without a ticket.' 'Begorra, I had a ticket.' 'Where is it?' 'I've lost it.' 'If you really had the misfortune to lose your ticket, perhaps you can remember your berth.' There was an interval of silence, Paddy evidently employing his thinking powers. 'Och, by jabers!' he exclaimed at length, 'I was born on the 26th day of October, 1838.'"

—Recent evidence about the last allied war against China shows that at the taking of the summer palace one building was full of silks, the produce of a tax which requires every manufacturer to send in the first piece he makes of each sort. A part of these was used instead of ropes, which were wanting, to picket the French horses. Then there was a palace full of drawings, a series of four thousand, illustrating the whole history of China. The soldiers, ignorant of their value, trod them under foot and used them for kindling fires. Then there was the carriage palace, in which were found the magnificent coaches which were presented to the Emperor of China by an English embassy in 1818. Since then they had never been used. The iron work was loose, and the leather had become hard and brittle as wood. One palace was full of furs.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake, with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, makes a more effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidney, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucherrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Consumption and General Debility. With their departure, health returns.

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. VALUABLE INFORMATION.
BOSTON, DEC. 12, 1869.
Gentlemen—My only object in giving you this testimonial is to spread valuable information. Having been badly afflicted with Salt-Rheum, and the whole surface of my skin being covered with pimples and eruptions, many of which caused me great pain and annoyance, and knowing it to be a blood disease, I took many of the advertised blood preparations, among others the celebrated Sarsaparilla, without obtaining any benefit, until I commenced taking the VEGETINE; and before I had completed the first bottle, I saw that I had got the right medicine. Consequently I followed on with it until I had taken seven bottles, when I was pronounced a well man, and my skin is smooth and entirely free from pimples and eruptions. I have never enjoyed so good health before, and I attribute it all to the use of VEGETINE. To benefit those afflicted with Rheumatism, I will make mention also of the VEGETINE'S wonderful power of curing me of this acute complaint, of which I have suffered so intensely.
C. H. TUCKER, Pas. Agt. Mich. C. R. R., 20 Tyler Street, Boston.
HAS ENTIRELY CURED ME.
BOSTON, October, 1870.
MR. H. R. STEVENS:
Dear Sir—My Daughter after having a severe attack of Whooping Cough, was left in a feeble state of health; being advised by a friend, she tried the VEGETINE, and after using a few bottles was fully restored to health.
I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism, I have taken several bottles of the VEGETINE for this complaint, and am happy to say it has entirely cured me. I have recommended the VEGETINE to others, with the same good results. It is a great cleanser and purifier of the blood; it is pleasant to take; and I can cheerfully recommend it.
JAMES MORSE, 364 Athens Street.
NO TROUBLE SINCE USING
VEGETINE.
CHARLESTOWN, October, 1870.
This certifies that my daughter has always been troubled with tumors, which has caused frequent swelling on her face and about her eyes. Physicians called it the Erysipelas; but after having taken two bottles of the VEGETINE, she has not been troubled with it since. SIMON ALDRICH, Charlestown, Mass.
DR. TUTTLE says: "It is unnecessary for me to enumerate the diseases for which the VEGETINE should be used. I know of no disease which will not admit of its use with good results. Almost innumerable complaints are caused by poisonous secretions in the blood, which can be entirely expelled from the system by the use of the VEGETINE. When the blood is perfectly cleansed, the disease rapidly yields; all pains cease, healthy action is promptly restored, and the patient is cured.
The remarkable cures effected by VEGETINE, have induced many physicians and apothecaries whom we know, to prescribe and use it in their own families.
In fact VEGETINE is the best remedy yet discovered, and is the only reliable BLOOD PURIFIER yet placed before the public. Sold by all Druggists and dealers everywhere. a2 4ordp nrc 4w

Bound to Get a Subscriber.

[Detroit Free Press.]

He was once out on a jaunt in the township of White Oak, Ingham county, sticking to every farmer until he got his name and money, and it so happened that he came to a house where death had called a few hours before. The farmer's wife was laid out, and the husbandman and his children were grieving over her loss when the editor knocked at the door.

"What's up?" inquired the editor, as he saw the farmer's solemn countenance before him.

"My wife is dead," replied the farmer.

"Is that so?" mused the editor, a little disappointed. "Did she die easy?"

"Dropped off like a lamb!"

"Did she say anything?"

"Not a word—just went right to sleep like."

"I didn't know," continued the editor, a sad look in his face, "but what she might have requested you to subscribe for the Cascade, which you know is the best paper in the county. If you want it I'll take your name right in, and under the circumstances I won't charge a cent for the obituary notice!"

The farmer hung off for a while, but before the editor went away he had two additional dollars in his pocket, and had written out an obituary notice for publication in the next issue, which the bereaved husband pronounced "a mighty smart piece,"

An Obstinate Juror.

Alternate ridicule and obloquy have long been the uncomfortable portion of that one juryman of the else unanimous twelve who inexorably refuses to agree with his exasperated associates on a verdict; but there have been cases in which his seeming perversity has proved ultimately to be the salvation of justice, and a venerable English judge, recently deceased, was wont to cite one instance in his earlier judicial experience when such perversity led to an astounding discovery of mistaken truth.

A man who was on trial before this Judge in the Court of Common Pleas for the murder of a neighboring landlord, with whom he was known to have been on bitterly unfriendly terms, protested actually with tears and prayers that he was wholly innocent of the dreadful crime, though he acknowledged his enmity to the dead man on account of some disputed boundary between their properties, and that the clothing he wore and afterward concealed on the day of the tragedy was deeply stained with human blood. As he earnestly told and reiterated his story—he was taking a morning walk, as customary, across the fields of a certain farm, when he stumbled upon the body of a man, who was lying dead amongst some corn with two deep wounds in his breast, apparently made by a pitchfork near at hand. Raising the prostrate figure to ascertain if life yet remained, he was stained by the blood, and discovered that the victim was his own quarrelsome neighbor.

Humanity at first impelled him to give an alarm; but in another moment the thought of his well-known differences with the slain man filled him with cowardly fear of being connected with the murder. The idea so increased in its terror that he turned back to his home, removed his discolored clothing, and hid it in the barn where the police afterward found it.

But this story did not appear reasonable to the Court; and despite the prisoner's passionate persistency in it, and despairing cry that "God and his conscience knew him to be wholly innocent" the case went to the jury with apparently absolute certainty of instantaneous conviction.

Such, indeed, must have been the result but for the dissent of one juror, and he the foreman. This person, a man of education, high social and moral estimation and large property, begged the Judge to permit the jury to retire for consultation, and then so reasoned, pleaded, and actually prayed with his associates against their unanimous judgment as to fairly weary them finally into joining him in a verdict of acquittal. But the astounded Chief Justice indignantly refused to accept the verdict, and sent them back again and again to their room, until at last he was obliged to accept it. The unhappy man, cursing their foreman, were discharged in disgrace, "with the blood of an unavenged murder left at their door;" though the prisoner at his unexpected and seemingly miraculous release, fell upon his knees in court with the cry: "You see, my lord, that God and a clear conscience can save the lost."

When the Judge subsequently heard by what means so strange a verdict had been effected, and that the man responsible for it was both intelligent and of high character, he obtained a conference with the obstinate juror and abjured him to explain his incomprehensible conduct in the matter. The late foreman exacted a pledge of secrecy to last during his own life-time, and then calmly told why he had labored so indexibly for the accused man's life. On the morning of the murder the man doomed to be killed, who was the tithing-man of the parish, called early to collect tithes on the speaker's corn, and was so arbitrary and violent in his manner as to provoke indignant remonstrance. Becoming enraged, the tithe-gatherer assaulted the other with a pitchfork which he was carrying, and which belonged to a neighbor; and in defense of his life the assailed man wrested the weapon away, and in so doing inflicted wounds of which the aggressor fell dead on his way home!

So the actual slayer was the coming foreman of the jury—a position he secured for himself at great pains and expense, that he might save an innocent man from dreadful punishment for a crime which he had himself committed in self-defense.

Mysterious Announcement.

The Manchester Union says: "The New Hampshire and Connecticut elections indicate a speedy return to the old time policies of the democracy. Yet we fear that democratic currency is placed out of the question by the present Congress." Shouldn't wonder; but we don't exactly know what "democratic currency" is, as nearly all the leading democrats in Congress,—Beck, Randall, Marshall, Holman, Niblack, etc.,—went squarely against the resumption clause in Maynard's bill, Saturday, and three-fourths of the democratic Representatives had previously voted squarely in favor of inflating the paper currency. Is depreciated paper "democratic currency?" If not, then what is? It cannot be that gold is the article referred to, for only a feeble minority of the democrats in Congress favor that; and if paper currency is meant, how is it "placed out of the question by the present Congress," which seems only too determined to issue a lot more of it?

And what are the "old time policies of the democracy?" to which the country is returning, according to the Union. The "policy" of dividing the spoils among the victors cannot be what is referred to, for the republicans have pretty faithfully obeyed the old democratic creed, "To the victors belong the spoils," so no "return" to it is possible. The Union can hardly mean that the country is returning to the "policy" of yielding everything—including freedom of the press and speech, and the right of petition—to the slave power, as there is no longer a slave power to yield to. And the "policy" known as "anything to beat Grant" is not a very "old time" one, however democratic it may be, nor does it amount to anything now—if it ever did amount to anything—in view of the absurdity of the supposition the Grant or his supporters desire his nomination for a third term as President. We have heard some talk about democratic "policy" and "principles" before, but have never been able to find out what it all meant, beyond the natural democratic inclination to hold office; but as the country is now on its "return to the old time democratic policies," we are extremely anxious to know what those same "policies" are. Will the Union kindly enlighten us as to what "democratic policies" and "democratic currency" are?

Fire-arm Accidents.

Occasionally some unlucky and clumsy or careless fellow shoots himself or some other person, accidentally, with a loaded gun or pistol; such mishaps will continue to occur, and nothing can be said or done to prevent them; but there is another kind of fire-arm "accident" which is altogether too common and which could be abated if not wholly abolished by legislation,—the shooting of people, in sport, with unloaded weapons. A case of this kind has just occurred at Wilbraham (Mass.) academy, where a student sportively snapped an empty revolver a number of times at different friends, and finally succeeded in mortally wounding one of them, four chambers of the revolver being afterward found loaded with ball. This affair is referred to in the papers as a sad accident, but we cannot see just where the "accident" comes in. The pistol was not accidentally discharged nor accidentally aimed at the man who was shot; though the unhappy homicide did happen "accidentally" to be ignorant that the weapon he so recklessly snapped at his friends was loaded,—or rather, he knew it was not loaded, or he would not have so used it. The pointing of a pistol or gun at any person should be severely punished, and no difference should be made in the punishment on account of the weapon being unloaded,—if anything, the person who fools in this way with an unloaded weapon should suffer the heaviest penalty, for no one will point a loaded gun at another save in malice, while the comical genius who considers it funny to attempt to terrify others by pointing empty weapons at them is much more likely to shoot his intimate friend than his worst enemy; and against such sportive, good-natured, amusing murder there is no defence.

Ardazzal, an Italian, and captain of schooner New Louisiana, entered the house of a Mr. Jett, three miles from Orange, Texas, during the owner's absence, and murdered Mrs. Jett and two children. A grown-up daughter escaped and gave the alarm, and the murderer was captured while endeavoring to burn the bodies of his victims. He was arrested and put in jail, from whence he was taken on the night of Wednesday, the 8th, and riddled with bullets by an enraged mob.

Two men, supposed to be "old man Bender" and his son, of Kansas tavern-slaughterhouse infamy, have been arrested in Utah. Parties who claim to have known old Bender positively identify the elder prisoner as he. It is to be hoped the demons have at last been caught, in which case their fate is not difficult to foretell,—a short shrift and a long rope.

The Hub is getting famous for rowdyism in some portions of its territory. On Satury night a drunken woman smashed another woman's head with a teapot, at East Boston, and wounded her fatally; in South Boston, a police officer was set upon by a crowd of roughs, Sunday, to prevent his taking a drunken man to the lockup; a drunken South Cove rough was found lying in a doorway, Sunday morning, shot (unfortunately not fatally) in the neck; and at midnight on Saturday two half-drunken brothers got into a fight in a saloon in Charlestown, kept by them, and one stabbed the other twice with an oyster knife. Down with the infamous prohibitory law, and let a free people have free rum.

Marine Statistics.

The committee of management of the Bureau Veritas of Brussels, Belgium, has published the list of marine disasters reported during the month of February, 1874, concerning all flags. This list gives the following statistics: Sailing vessels totally lost, 168, viz.: 100 English, 26 American, 12 German, 16 French, 10 Norwegian, 7 Italian, 4 Russian, 2 Spanish, 4 Dutch, 3 Swedish, 3 Danish, 8 Austrian, 1 Portugese, 15 Greek, 1 Belgian, and 4 of which the nationality is unknown. In this number are included 15 sailing vessels reported missing. Steamers totally lost 14, viz.: 7 English, 3 American, 2 Italian, 1 German, and 1 Russian.

The Treasury department has the following official information of casualties happening to vessels along the coast of the United States for the quarter ending March 31, 1874: The number of casualties was 77, of which 63 were American vessels, 11 British, 1 German, 1 Russian and 1 unknown. Of this number 12 were steamers, 3 ships, 7 brigs, 2 barques, 49 schooners and 2 canal boats. The casualties were described as follows: Stranded, 38; foundered, 13; by collision, 6; other causes, 20. The total estimated loss in vessels was $695,898; in cargoes, $566,772; number of lives lost, 21. The department has also prepared as complete a list as possible of the casualties on the Great Lakes within ten years, from which it appears that in that period the number of vessels lost is 4527. The loss of life amounted to 1341 persons, and the loss of property aggregated $27,307,032.

How to Pull Teeth.

[Centralia Guard.]

A peculiar dental operation has just come under our observation. A certain citizen living in the south portion of town had an upper tooth which was loose and troublesome, so he resolved to extract it by fastening a string to it, but after a trial, finding the operation painful, he hadn't the grit to grin and bear it. He thought if the tooth could be extracted by some sudden mode, the pain would be but transient; and after mature deliberation he hit upon an ingenious plan to jerk it out in a jiffy. Procuring a heavy flat-iron he tied it to the other end of the cord attached to his tooth, then shutting both eyes he let the iron "drop," which descended plumb centre on his pet corn. After hopping about the room first on one foot, then on the other, groaning in anguish of spirit and reciting choice passages from profane history, he finally calmed down sufficiently to hurl the flat-iron over the fence, and swathe his sore toe in camphor and cotton. But he pulled the tooth, and with it a chunk of gum the size of a beef-steak. And the man lived.

—When a young man sits down on a slippery pavement, with such violence as to barely escape swallowing the roof of his mouth, there is nothing that will so powerfully prompt him to give indications of having done it on purpose, as the satisfaction depicted in the sweet face at the window opposite.

—For years one of the Pennsylvania railways has made a first class watch a part of its engine equipment. Every engine upon the road has its watch numbered to correspond with the number on the engine. The watches are purchased by the company and controlled by the proper officers. In the office of each division superintendent hangs a watchmaker's board with numbered hooks for all the engines belonging to that division. When the engine goes out upon a trip, the watch is taken from the hook. When it returns the watch is replaced, and while in the office is run with the regulator. As a consequence all the engines upon the road are being run on a uniform time, and no record has yet been made of an accident resulting from a discrepancy of watches.

Poverty o the Blood.

If the blood be thin and watery the whole system is imporverished. The flesh is flabby, the muscles lack hardiness, the nerves are relaxed, the internal organs but imperfectly perform their functions, the brain is inert, and, in short, the entire body is only half alive. The stomach is mainly responsible for this wretched condition of the human machine. Stimulate and tone that organ with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and a marked change for the better will soon be apparent. The result of improving the digestion with this potent and genial tonic will be the conversion of the food into rich, pure blood, and as the blood is the raw material from which flesh, muscle, brain, bone, and every membrane, tissue and ligament of the body are manufactured, all those components of the maternal frame will be gradually regenerated and invigorated. This is sound doctrine, and it is sustained by the logic of facts.

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scanner its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

Lotions, ointments and internal remedies may fail, but ANAKESIS is infallible.—Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. Principal Depot, 48 Walker St., New York.

—Miss A. M. Woodhull, of Freehold, New Jersey, is the owner of a curious snuff-box made of steel, oval in form, upon the lid of which is still faintly seen the date of its make—1630. Gilbert Kennedy, of the family of the Earl of Cassilis, was the original owner. The question now is, Who shall inscribe his name upon it in 1930?

THE Management take great pride in calling attention to the EMINENT ARTISTS composing this grand organization, each of whom is unrivaled in their specia ties, and will appear in a Select Programme, which will be found worthy the patronage of refined and critical audiences. This Alliance of Merlorious Talent might properly be classed as

IS ONE GRAND UNIT!

UNDER THE TITLE OF

HARRY BLOODGOOD'S COMIQUE ALLIANCE!

WITH THE FOLLOWING:

Mr. HARRY BLOODGOOD needs no introduction; he is the Emperor of all Ethiopian comedians.

Mr. E. M. HALL, justly styled the Banjo King and the greatest performer on that instrument living, whose execution is marvelous, equaling in rapid passages that of the most eminent pianists.

Mr. PATRONE, the Greatest Delineator of Irish character extant; his artistic dancing is truly a marvel of art.

Messrs. PEASLEY & HUGHES, the most versatile and accomplished Song and Dance artists in the profession, whose style is entirely original.

THE GREAT BOSTON QUARTETTE, Messrs. STEVENS, WHALEY, DUMAS and FROTHINGHAM, is the same which created such a furore at the Boston Museum the past season.

Miss LISLE RIDDELL, the charming little soriocomic queen, who will appear in entirely new selections.

Miss JOSIE GRANGER, the beautiful vocalist and danseuse and character artist.

Miss ADELAIDE DEMONT, gifted by nature with a wonderful soprano voice, and highly leading singer at the People's Concerts in Boston.

Mr. THOS. CONNERS, the versatile comedian.

TOGETHER WITH A

COMPLETE ORCHESTRA AND BRASS BAND,

IN CONCLUSION, would say I rely confidently that my connection with strictly first-class entertainments for the past fifteen years, endeavoring at all times to secure THE BEST IN THE WORLD, will be a sufficient guarantee of the excellence, meritorious character and stability of all companies with which my name is connected, and would refer to all the leading Managers of Opera, Concert, Theatrical, Minstrel and Circus Companies, as well as Editors and Hall Proprietors, in all parts of the United States.

Very truly,
ALEX. CALHOUN, Manager.

THIS COMPANY is now making a complete tour of the United States, and will appear in Portsmouth APRIL 15th. Seats can be secured at Preston's Drug store without extra charge.

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in gilt and black frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's anticipated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c. &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the authors Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Prof. Gunning's illustrated lecture at Mechanics' Hall this evening will be on the Glacial Epoch. Geology, with its wonderful revelations, is anything but a dry study, and Prof. Gunning's method of handling his subject renders his lectures intensely interesting. That they are appreciated the large attendance (which increases with each succeeding lecture) shows.

The Lawrence Eagle says Harry Bloodgood's company presented an enjoyable entertainment in that city; "the jokes were new, the singing and music good," and "Harry Bloodgood's stump speech, or 'The Temperance Crusade,' was first class, and kept the audience convulsed with laughter." They appear at the Temple to-morrow night. See advertisement.

To-morrow, April 15, is the last day allowed by law for making returns of taxable property to the Assessors, and those who fail to make such return will have no legal claim for abatement. The Assessors' notice may be found in another column.

Mr. Samuel Lamprey opens his juvenile dancing school at Congress Hall to-morrow (Wednesday) afternoon. Persons interested will please take notice, and govern themselves accordingly.

C. N. Shaw & Co. announce their spring opening of fashionable bonnets to take place on Wednesday and Thursday, April 15 and 16.

Wilson & Magraw advertise nails, builders' and mechanics' hardware, paints, oils, etc., at their newly-opened store in Mechanics' Block.

A friend explains the unseasonable weather of last week by laying all the blame to the democrats and prohibitionists, who joined their forces and upset everything in this State.

Mr. Thomas P. Moses offers for sale two companion pictures, one representing the landing of Capt. John Smith's expedition at Fort Point, Newcastle, about the year 1620, and the other Fort Constitution, the lighthouses at the fort and Whale's Back, ships under sail, and the lower harbor, as they appeared in 1830. The pictures are very handsomely painted in oil colors, and, as he says, will ornament parlor, hall or saloon, being appropriate for either. See advertisement.

Billings, the Boston artist, has painted an excellent portrait of Ex-Governor Ichabod Goodwin, which is to be placed in the Council chamber at Concord, replacing the unsatisfactory and faded picture of our esteemed townsman which has been hanging there for the past dozen years. Mr. Billings has caught one of the most pleasant expressions that light up the countenance of our whole-souled Ex-Governor, and every detail of the picture shows the work of a faithful and pains-taking artist. Many friends desire that the portrait may be placed on exhibition at Foster's book-store, and we hope these numerous requests will be granted.

C. H. Mendum & Co. announce their Spring opening of ladies' goods,—dress fabrics, shawls, hosiery, kid gloves, suspenders, corsets, neck wear, etc.,—and men's woolen wear and furnishings. See advertisement.

The past week has been about as hard on the coal-bin as though it was still Winter, instead of being the middle of Spring. Saturday and Sunday were chilly and windy,—more like December than April; and our only consolation for a bad cold and the lack of trailing arbutus and things is the thought that the sweet harbinger of Spring—the hand-organ man who ground out "St. Patrick's Day in the Morning" in front of our office, two weeks ago—must have frozen to death, which accounts for his welcome absence. 'Tis an ill wind which blows nowhere.

The April term of the Supreme Judicial Court for Rockingham County commences at Exeter to-day, Chief Justice Sargent presiding. On the civil docket there are 333 cases; equity docket, fifty-six; sessions docket, eleven; criminal docket, twenty-five; 422 cases in all.

The Maine Central railroad directors, at Portland, on Friday night, the 10th inst., voted to approve the contract between the Eastern and Boston & Maine, and the one between the Eastern and Portland & Ogdensburg. Some discussion ensued on the abolishing of the Pullman cars on account of the cost of hauling them, but nothing definite was decided upon.

Brilliant Wedding.

The marriage of Rev. Rufus W. Clark Jr., formerly Rector of St. John's Church in this city and now Rector of Trinity Parish, Columbus, Ohio, and Miss Lucy Dennison, daughter of Hon. William Dennison, took place in Trinity Church, Columbus, on the evening of Thursday, April 9th. The following account of the wedding, which we copy from the Ohio State Journal, will interest Mr. Clark's friends and all the ladies in the city:

"A furious snowstorm was prevailing, but nevertheless a crowd of people was waiting at the doors before the church was lighted, and by the time of the arrival of the wedding party the auditorium, including the galleries, was full. The organist played a march as the bridal party entered. The six bridesmaids walked up the center aisle to the chancel, followed by Governor Dennison and the bride. The bride wore a white corded silk; waist, heart shaped; long sleeves; skirt en train, trimmed with crepe and orange blossoms; veil, tulle, caught back with orange blossoms; no jewelry. Following are the names of the bridesmaids, with a description of their dresses:

Miss Jennie Dennison—dress of white tarlton, low neck; short sleeves; skirt long, trimmed with ruffles and puffs, and decorated with pond lilies and lilies of the valley.

Miss Hattie Smith—white tarlton dress, low neck; short sleeves, with fichu; skirt, en train, ruffled and puffed, caught back with pink rosebuds.

Miss Louise Perrine—white tulle dress, made over white silk; square neck; short sleeves; skirt trimmed high with ruffles, and caught up with lilies of the valley.

Miss Belle Smith—white tarlton dress, square neck; short sleeves; skirt, court train, trimmed with ruffles, side plaiting and tea roses.

Miss Mary Wilcox—dress of white tarlton, waist cut square necked, and trimmed with ruffles and puffs; French sleeves; skirt, court train, trimmed with flounces, puffs and side plaitings; the whole dress elaborately trimmed with blue flowers.

Miss Mattie Gray—dress of white tarlton; waist cut heart shaped; short sleeves; skirt en train, profusely trimmed with ruffles and puffs and pink flowers.

Mr. Clark, accompanied by his friend, Mr. Cowing, of Buffalo, N. Y., was conducted from the study to the right of the church, and met the bridal party at the chancel, taking from Governor Dennison the hand of the bride. The marriage ceremony was performed by Bishop Bedell very impressively, and the wedding party retired from the church as the organist played the Wedding March.

The ushers were Messrs. S. M. Smith, Jr., W. B. Hubbard, E. C. Smith, A. H. Morehead, H. S. Comstock, F. H. Hubbard, R. S. Smith and A. N. Whiting.

Arrangements had been perfected in advance, and everything moved with beautiful precision. The ladies presented a most elegant appearance, and the young gentlemen who managed matters in the church deserve credit for their accomplishment.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark received their family friends, the attendants, and the ushers, at their residence on Front street. Presents rich, elegant and varied, from many friends at home and abroad, gave testimony of the high esteem in which they are held."

Death and the Future Life

Was the subject of Prof. Whipple's lecture, Sunday evening, and was most eloquently handled. Possessed of excellent voice and having a ready flow of language, he could hardly fail to interest the most absent minded listener. He believes the world 300,000 years old and that physical death is a blessing as this globe cannot subsist more than two billions of people. One of these days, (remarked the speaker) I anticipate that the change we call death will be hardly noticed, so spiritualized the inhabitants who live 10,000 or more years from now, will have become. In this philosophic manner Prof. Whipple continued, drawing a moral from his convictions that life on this planet is hardly worth anticipating enjoyment from, so brief is its experience and so vast the future.

—Those whose deeds are evil prefer darkness. Satan went into the Garden of Eden after Eve.

—They are successfully experimenting with the Eucalyptus, or fever tree, in some parts of Florida.

—Alexandre Dumas used to tell the following anecdote: Being at the San Carlos, at Naples, he entered into conversation with a stranger sitting in the stall next to him. "I hope," said the latter, at the close of the performance, "that we may have the pleasure of meeting again—I am Alexandre Dumas." "Oh, indeed!" replied the celebrated novelist, with his gay laugh, "so am I." The stranger collapsed.

—We are sorry to learn that a German chemist has succeeded in making a first-rate brandy out of sawdust. We are a friend of the temperance movement, and we want it to succeed, but what chance will it have when a man can take a rip-saw and go out and get drunk with a fence-rail? What is the use of a prohibitory liquor law if a man is able to make brandy smashes out of the shingles on the roof, or if he can get delirium tremens by drinking the legs of his kitchen chairs? You may shut an inebriate out of a gin shop, and keep him away from taverns, but if he can become uproarious on boiled sawdust and dessiccated window-sills, any effort at reform must certainly be a failure. It will be wise, therefore, if temperance societies will butcher the German chemist before he goes any further. His receipt ought not to be made public. He should be stuffed with distilled boardyards until he perishes with mania a potu.

Max Adeler.

"Out of the Hurly-burly," Max Adeler's forthcoming book, contains the following dedication;—

My original intention was to dedicate this book to the friend of my boyhood, Azan bin Ghes, the Imaum of Muscat, in memory of the happy days when together we played marbles in the Oman desert, ducked each other in the Persian Gulf, and tortured inoffensive cats on the island of Kishm. But I have changed my mind; I have resolved to dedicate the book to a humorist who has had too little fame, to the most delicious, because the most unconscious, humorist, to that widely-scattered and multitudinous comedian who may be expressed in the concrete as The Intelligent Compositor.

To his faculty of perpetrating felicitous absurdities, I am indebted for "laughter that is worth a hundred groans." It was he who put into type an article of mine which contained the injunction, "Do not cast your pearl before swine," and transformed the phrase into "Do not cart your pills before sunrise." It was he who caused me to misquote the poet's inquiry, so that I propounded to the world the appalling conundrum, "Where are the dead, the varnished dead?" and it was his glorious tendency to make the sublime convulsively ridiculous that rejected the line in a poem of mine, which declared that a "comet swept o'er the heavens with its trailing skirts," and substituted the idea that a "count slept in the haymow in a travelling shirt." The kind of talent that is here displayed deserves profound reverence. It is wonderful and awful; and thus I offer it as a token of my marvelling respect.

The Fate of an Egg-Eating Hen.

A way to prevent hens from eating their eggs, is to fill an egg with a solution of pepper, and put it in the nest. A Danbury man has tried this, and says it works like a charm. He put a pretty good dose of pepper in the egg, and placed it in the nest of the criminal. Pretty soon the hen came around and took hold. It was a brindle animal, with long legs, and somewhat conceited. It dipped in its bill and inhaled the delicacy. Then it came out doors. It didn't gallop, we don't mean, but it came out—came out to look at the scenery, and see if it was going to rain. Its mouth was wide open, and the feathers on the top of its head stood straight up. Then it commenced to go round the yard like a circus horse. Once in a while it would stop and push out one leg in astonishment and then holler "fire," and start on again. The other hens came out to look on. Soon the hens from the neighbors came over the fence and took up a position of observation. It was quite evident the performance was something entirely new and unique to them. There is a good deal of human nature in hens. When they saw this hen dance and have all the fun to herself, and heard it shout "fire," and couldn't see any conflagration themselves, they filled up with wrath, and with one accord sprang upon it, and before the Danbury man could interfere, the brindle hen with the long legs was among the things that were. He says the receipt is effectual.

—Boarder—"What large chickens these are!"

Landlady—"Yes, chickens are larger than they used to be. Ten years ago we couldn't get chickens as large as these."

Boarder (with an innocent air)—"No I suppose not; these must have grown a great deal in that time."

Landlady looks as those she had been misunderstood.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of those same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidney, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leuchorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure, health returns.

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY!

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the Complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

Wool Growing in Colorado.

We copy the following article from the Larimer Express:

With your permission I should like to answer through your paper, the many questions asked by those who contemplate going into the sheep business in Colorado. I can give over two years' personal experience regarding the business in Northern Colorado and six years' in California. I came here in September, 1871, believing from what I read of the country that it was well adapted to raising wool and sheep. My expectations have been more than realized. The winter of 1871, was said by old settlers to have been the severest ever experienced since the settlement of the country by white men, and was calculated to discourage new comers, just commencing in the stock business.

I shipped from the States, in the autumn of 1871, 900 graded and full blooded Spanish Merino sheep, and found it necessary to feed during the winter thirty tons of hay, and my sheep came through in good condition, with only a loss of ten per cent., including shipment, acclimation and other disadvantages common to all new countries. Here let me add that E. W. Whitcomb, Esq., on Box Elder, eighteen miles north of Fort Collins, only fed five tons of hay to 1,000 sheep, during the winter of 1871, and lost but five head. I visited Mr. Whitcomb's flock in March of the following spring and found them in excellent condition; nearly all fit for mutton. This flock was crossed up from Mexican and American ewes with Cotswold and Merino bucks; were well acclimated, and seemed to be perfectly healthy.

In the winter of 1872-3 I did not find it necessary to feed any grain or hay worthy of mention, and sheep wintered well on the range as there was but little snow.

This winter, up to the present writing, I have fed hay five or six times, as we have had but little snow and very pleasant weather since December 26th, and stock of all kinds is doing well on the range without being fed. The expense of herding 1,500 or 2,000 sheep one year is $600, and shearing eight cents per head. I have found it necessary to have sheds or wind-breaks to protect the sheep from spring snows and the prevailing high winds during the fall and spring.

The best time to have the lambs drop is from the first of May to the first of June. The flock-master is always sure of green feed at that time of year, which is very essential in the rearing of lambs, as the ewe always takes to her young more readily when she has abundance of milk. The percentage of young lambs that can be raised may be safely estimated at ninety per cent.

W. H. Walker, thirty miles southeast of Denver, raised last spring from 1,000 Mexican ewes, 1,000 lambs, an increase of one hundred per cent. These lambs were all from Spanish Merino bucks. Mr. Walker informed me that his yearlings, last spring, from his Mexican ewes and Spanish Merino rams, sheared seven pounds of unwashed wool on an average.

On the whole I believe this to be a most excellent country for stock of all kinds, and most especially for sheep. Wool can be shipped to New York or Boston, at from two to two and a half cents per pound. Wool of the same quality is worth as much in Colorado as in any of the eastern states, less about one cent per pound freight.

I believe the Merino sheep are the best adapted to this prairie country, and will do better than almost any other breed, except the native Mexican sheep.

Our flock-masters have found that a cross of the Merino buck with the Mexican ewe, is most excellent both for wool and mutton, many of the half-breeds weighing 100 pounds when two years old, and shearing on an average, six pounds per head.

The first cross gives a desirable wool for manufacturing purposes, and sells readily in the market. The time is not far distant when manufacturers will be attracted here by the large amount of wool grown in Colorado and New Mexico, and manufactories will spring up all around us, saving millions of dollars freight on the raw material from the west to the east, and on the manufactured goods from the east to the west.

* * * * * * *

There are great inducements here for young men with from three to five thousand dollars to invest in the sheep business, and they will become wealthy in a few years. The business will pay on the capital invested, from fifty to one hundred per cent. per annum, if judiciously managed.

I would not recommend starting in the winter, without some hay, as it might be necessary to use it during cold storms, which in that case would prove a good investment.

Colorado contains an area of 65,000,000 acres of land, 40,000,000 of which are grazing lands, capable of keeping 20,000,000 sheep giving an annual income of $40,000,000.

The flocks of California have increased from a limited number, since 1860, to 8,000,000 of sheep, yielding an annual income of $20,000,000.

The grazing lands of Colorado are superior to those of California, and will produce double the amount of feed per acre. Besides we are not liable to those long protracted drouths which are so destructive to many of the flocks in Southern California.

Stock ranches can yet be had very cheap. The short, sweet grasses of our mountain slopes and extensive prairies are attracting the attention of wool-growers from Maine to California, and consequently the most desirable places will all be taken in a few years.

In giving my preference for the Merino sheep, I do not wish to be understood as objecting to the long wooled sheep in certain localities, especially near our large cities, where the mutton can be sold without paying heavy freights. But here in Colorado, where we are so far from market, wool should be the paramount object. Twenty years' experience in handling sheep and wool has proven to me that Merinos are the sheep for this dry country.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, April 10.

Discussion of finance still goes on in the Senate, as it has for months. The result of it all is uncertain; but I venture to guess it will authorize greenbacks to the extent of four hundred millions and an addition to the banking capital of $46,000,000, bringing that up to four hundred millions in amount. That will be inflation, but not so sudden as to make it very bad. Before a bank is started the stock has to be gathered in from communities that are comparatively poor, and banking is not as profitable as it has been, for which reason the inflation will come slowly. (This was written so far a month ago, and seems correct today.) Every body is looking to Congress for aid financially, while Congress cannot do much, if anything, in that direction, beyond announcing some policy which it will adhere to. It don't so much matter that it is the best policy, if it is only to be adhered to. Business readily adjusts itself to almost any policy which it has confidence will not be changed. It is the feeling that changes are probable which unsettles confidence, and checks new undertakings.

Internal commerce between States over railroads has largely occupied the attention of the house, and is pretty sure to enter the fall elections in the west as a controlling element. The stump speech day and evening sessions were occupied with it for many weeks and a vast amount of information has been gathered and digested here, to be taken up and re-digested upon the stump and other gatherings of the people. The fact that all manufactures of the east going to consumers west, and all products of the west coming east to a market are affected by these charges for transportation, and are remunerative, or otherwise, as charges are cheap or dear, is sufficient to show that it will become one of the controlling questions of the future. On Mr. McCreary's bill for a commission to adjust freights and fares for the different roads upon an equitable basis, the division was close, and the bill passed the House with only five majority. The whole democratic party, with only five exceptions, was against the bill and the bulk of the republicans for it. New Hampshire stood, Parker and Pike against and Small for the bill.

The investigation into District matters has been for a long time in progress, but I've not read enough of it to give an intelligent opinion how it progresses. There has undoubtedly been great waste in doing so much in so short a time. The capital of the nation has expenses growing out of its position, which ought to be borne by the general government, and for which the people of the country are willing to pay to make the capital attractive. But not to such extravagant amounts as were voted last winter. It is much better to seek this aid in a straightforward manner than by indirection, by setting up that all the Parks fitted up by the government, should be valued for what they would be worth cut up into house-lots, and taxed upon that valuation, as was recently proposed by the District Delegate in Congress.

The New Hampshire election gets into the discussions of the House occasionally and into the newspapers. It don't somehow readily get through the head of an average man, whether democrat or republican, why the republican party lost at both ends, by taking a prohibition candidate upon a prohibition platform. They readily understand why republicans in favor of license should go to democracy when its candidate and platform were pledged to license; but they can't understand why friends of prohibition did not stand by it. They are so obtuse as even to argue that if license republicans went to democracy to get license, that prohibition democrats ought to have gone to the republicans to prevent license. I see by your able editorials on the election you were "in the dark concerning their reasons." I trust you will give your readers the benefit of any light you may get. I have not read what is given under the head of "Eureka" yet, but suppose the discovery is made and given.

The moiety cases have been pretty fully discussed in committee of ways and means which examined them, and there is no doubt the whole system will be changed. It is very difficult to know just what to do. Defrauding the Revenue is considered legitimate by men who are honest in all other dealings; and without the exercise of extraordinary powers, they cannot be detected and punished. Honest merchants will be undersold and their business destroyed by those who cheat through half their just duties. All local taxation is unequal because tax payers conceal property and justify themselves in all manner of dodges which they would be ashamed of in anything else. The question then is how to fix the matter so as not to give outrageously large compensation to officers in the shape of moieties, and not plunder honest or comparatively honest parties, while getting at systematic cheats. The famous Sanborn contracts, which were designed to hunt up a class of delinquents, have taken in a class of taxes which ought not to have been included. But another part of them would never have been hunted up but for this process. Nobody will work at this disagreeable and obnoxious business without a prospect of big pay. The question will be, whether it is not better to let a part of the tax-payers escape than to use such instrumentalities, to enforce collections. Everybody who has paid short will be for letting them go. So I conclude as they are an influential class and can howl fearfully, both of these systems will be abolished or so modified as not to be very troublesome hereafter. Some of the testimony which has been given, does not indicate that those who have the charge of making the contract fully understood the matter, as they should.

If there is a change in the Secretary of the Treasury, of which there is much talk, I venture to suggest it will be to put some member of the present cabinet there. If the President goes outside, it will be held as endorsing contraction, or expansion as the individual might happen to stand on that question, and would be sure to put in opposition to him the disappointed side. The south are claiming recognition in the cabinet, so I venture the opinion if there is a change, that Delano goes into the Treasury, and Bristow, who is a Kentuckian, a favorite of the President and a very able man, will be made Secretary of the Interior.

The past month has been cold for the season and disagreeable, with but little rain until this week. Society has been in the gloom of Lent. Congress has been wandering in the vagaries of finance. Business has been waiting for something to turn up. Nothing has been pleasant. EXE.

Readables.

Mayor Havemayer, of New York, has sent a letter to the State senate committee on commerce expressing the belief that the proposed East River bridge is entirely impracticable. Such a structure at such a height—129 feet above high water—and of such weight, subject to the gales constantly experienced there, would be subjected to constant danger. The project was conceived in sin, born in iniquity and must end in disaster to all concerned. The mayor hopes the committee will do all in its power to protect the people of the city from any further raids on them in its behalf.

The passage of the revised and consolidated statutes of the United States in a single bill is the most important result of the session's work thus far. The Tribune correspondent says: The revision has been compared and corrected in night sessions of the House, held on Wednesdays and Thursdays, and has been a task involving a very large amount of patient labor. These night sessions have been rarely attended by more than a dozen members, and were in reality little more than meetings of the Committee on Revision of the Laws, whose members alone took interest enough in them to attend regularly. The task of going over the whole body of the laws passed since the organization of the government, verifying the codification made by the Commissioners, who spent years on the work, and seeing that there were no changes, omissions or ambiguities of language, was an undertaking from which all but a very few members shrunk aghast.

The London Times' Calcutta correspondent telegraphs that the distress from famine is increasing in Tirhoot, and that according to the official estimates 4,573,000 persons in the districts of Patna, Chazzepore and Rajeshhye are still suffering starvation.

At Portland, Saturday night, after the performances by Bosworth post of the Grand Army, one of the young lady performers, named Amanda Worthing, started to slide down a banister of the second flight of stairs. She lost her balance and fell fifteen feet, striking on her chin and shoulder on the stone pavement, driving the jaw-bone up into the head, dislocating a shoulder and badly injuring her chest. She may recover.

A little son of Dr. Johnson of Portland, who has been troubled with rash fever, had an abscess form on an artery on his neck. The abscess was lanced on Saturday, and in spite of the efforts of several physicians the boy bled to death.

Early Sunday morning Policeman Gohl of Bridgeport, Conn., met two drunken men. He advised them to go home, and they seized the officer and attempted to throw him from a bridge. A desperate struggle ensued. They were lifting Gohl up, his face toward the railing, and he was nearly over when he grasped his pistol, and firing over his left shoulder he instantly killed John Maroney; another shot wounded the other assailant, Tom Sowers, in the head. A coroner's jury found that the killing was done in self-defence while in the discharge of his duty.

Four ballots were had on Tuesday in the Massachusetts legislature, as follows:

The Portland Press remarks: "Whittier, sitting in the Senate with his placid Quaker face, with a mind purified from all human dross by life long communion with high ideals—why, he might by the very sight of him, still the brute elemental forces that are dragging there; and what tipsy Western 'war horse' could rise to utter his inarticulate rant, with the calm eyes of the divine Emerson looking at him from a neighboring seat?"

The President has nominated Ex-Collector Thomas Russell of Boston, to be Minister to Venezuela.

The Boston Herald says the quicker the democratic party goes out of existence, the sooner a new party will arise composed of the best men of the old political organizations; and likens the democratic organization to the school-house which had become useless because there was such a large pile of dead cats near it. The committee never could agree to remove the school-house or the cats.

State News.

At about four o'clock, Sunday morning, Mr. Charles Humphrey of Merrimack awoke and found his dwelling-house on fire. His family had barely time to escape. The house, barn and some out-buildings were totally consumed. Eight head of cattle, a horse, several sheep, carriage, furniture, farming tools, etc., were also consumed. The fire originated in the barn. Loss between $3000 and $4000; insured for $1000 in the New Hampshire company.

Frank Porter, who married a Seabrook lady, entered a car on an up-train on the Eastern railroad last Saturday, at Beverly, and stole a coat from a rack. He was recognized by a lady on board who knew him, and as he passed out of the car, the owner of the coat opened the door for him from the platform. On returning to his seat, the obliging coat-owner was surprised to learn his coat was missing. At Lynn, he telegraphed for the arrest of Porter, who probably had no idea he was stealing from an acquaintance.

Marcus Knight, who froze his ears while going from Carroll county to Dover, on the 24th ult., has been compelled to suffer a partial amputation of both of them.

The wife of Rev. Horace Wood of Gilsum had a limb amputated recently, after twelve years, suffering from a painful sore.

Barney McIntyre, lately a brakeman on the Boston and Maine road, was arrested on the train at Dover, Monday evening, charged with forging an order for $400 on a savings bank in Andover, Mass. The money was found in his boot, and he was taken to Andover.

Poverty o the Blood.

If the blood be thin and watery the whole system is impoverished. The flesh is flabby, the muscles lack hardness, the nerves are relaxed, the internal organs but imperfectly perform their functions, the brain is inert, and, in short, the entire body is only half alive. The stomach is mainly responsible for this wretched condition of the human machine. Stimulate and tone that organ with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and a marked change for the better will soon be apparent. The result of improving the digestion with this potent and genial tonic will be the conversion of the food into rich, pure blood, and as the blood is the raw material from which flesh, muscle, brain, bone, and every membrane, tissue and ligament of the body are manufactured, all those components of the material frame will be gradually regenerated and invigorated. This is sound doctrine, and it is sustained by the logic of facts.

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pumples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to ret the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT'T OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

THE Management take great pride in calling attention to the EMINENT ARTISTS composing this grand organization, each of whom is married in their specialties, and will appear in a Select Programme, which will be found worthy the patronage of refined and critical audiences. SIX BLACKBOARD LECTURES

ON GEOLOGY,

TUESDAY EVENINGS,

—IN—

By Prof. W. D. Gunning.

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 16[illegible] to 20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated hack at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with vines and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted lover of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Compliment to a Portsmouth Teacher.

A committee of the Board of Education of Minneapolis, Minnesota, pays a handsome compliment to a Portsmouth lady, Miss Annie A. Manson, now teaching school in that city, as follows:

"However much of a critical and fault-finding spirit any of us may have carried with us to the examination, it was almost impossible to keep it, for the exercises were such as almost, if not entirely, to disarm criticism, so that our report must be wholly complimentary. Miss Manson, the efficient teacher of this room, manifested a degree of energy and enthusiasm which is certainly inspiring, at least it has proved so to her pupils, judging from this examination. * * * In closing this report, we most heartily congratulate the Board of Education on the success of the school and on their good fortune in securing a teacher so well qualified as Miss Manson."

Laconics.

The martens have come.

On Monday, the U. S. Senate confirmed the nomination of Major Daniel J. Vaughan of this city to be Pension Agent.

A caller at our office, Tuesday morning, informed us that we might confidently announce that Spring had at last arrived for good,—come to stay, this time; but we can't do it, having used up all our stock of weather prophecies, and gone out of the business in disgust. Our other informant, who on Monday morning said we should certainly have a hard Winter and large crop of ice, need not feel at all discouraged yet awhile, as there is plenty of time yet for his prediction to come true, and this part of the State can do pretty well in the cold weather line when it once lays itself out.

Harry Bloodgood's Comique Alliance will give but one entertainment in this city, and that will be given this evening at the Temple. The first lot of programmes sent here (and distributed) announced two appearances of the company, which was incorrect—"postively for one night only" is the genuine article. Our exchanges at Concord, Manchester and other places where the troupe has appeared speak flatteringly of the show,—the singing is good, the jokes new, the banjo playing first-class, and Harry Bloodgood's stump speech chock full of fun. Go to the Temple this evening and get your money's worth. See advertisement.

An advertisement in another column notifies all interested that a hot-maple-sugar party will be given by the ladies of the Methodist church at the Daniel street chapel this evening.

The Concord Patriot says: The Kearsarge S. F. E. Co. received a large, handsome frosted cake, on Saturday evening, presented to them by the Kearsarge Co. of Portsmouth.

The wreckers at work on the Sir Francis, off Hampton Beach, have within the last few days recovered large and valuable quantities of iron.

Those youngsters who went to Dover last week, remark their displeasure at the completion of the P. & D. R. R. "Talk about that bridge at the Point being an improvement," said one; "it's only a shorter route to the Dover police station."
